Cheap Power for Development

For new development work, where large capital investment, Diesel Engines make an ideal investment. The investment is comparatively small, the cost of operating is low, and the fuel is easily transported. Many Canadian industries that are not situated close to hydro-electric plants are now using Fairbanks-Morse Diesel Engines with satisfactory results. The Premier Cold Mines are now using over 2,000 h.p. of the railway companies use them for their pumping stations, towns and cities rely upon them for pumping and lighting. In fact, Diesel Engines are rapidly coming to the fore as one of the most economical sources of power.

Fairbanks-Morse Diesel Engines are made in sizes for 10 to 25 h.p. Horizontal; and 50 to 840 h.p. Vertical.

CHAPTER 5
A DEAD FINGER POINTS

When Lila arrived at the studio the following morning, Dorothy was working at an enormous poster that was stretched across an easel. Over a blouse and skirt, she wore a blue smock—her "badge of the dilettante," as she called it. "No self-respecting artist would be caught dead in one," she always said. She leaned forward and kissed Lila.

"Be careful you don't get painted," she laughed. "I'm a mess, and you look like the latest thing from Paris."

Lila removed her wrap and revealed herself in one of her prettiest rousseau frocks.

"I didn't sleep a wink," she remarked, as she drew off her gloves, "and I thought Herbert would never leave this morning. I think my manner aroused his suspicions. Yesterday he was keen about getting to the office, but this morning—" she shrugged. "Where is the fatal letter?"

Dorothy unlocked a cabinet and drew forth a long envelope bearing the official letter-head of the War Department. Lila tore it open with trembling fingers.

"Oh!" she gasped, after a moment. "How awful! They're turning his insurance over to me—as his fiancée. I never knew he'd left it to me."

"Jack Farquhar's?" Dorothy came to look over her shoulder.

"What am I going to do?" "You don't want to accept it?" "Heaven's, no! I'd feel like a thief."

"And he had no relatives?" "None that he ever mentioned. You see, we knew each other such a short time. And I wouldn't exactly care to start an investigation. It might prove a—er—boomerang."

Dorothy nodded absently. "Why not accept the money—ten thousand, isn't it?—and turn it over to one of the funds for disabled veterans?" she suggested.

Lila stared at her admiringly. "How quickly you think of a way out. It's the very thing, of course."

She rose and went quickly to Dorothy's desk.

"I'll write the letter now, if I may use your stationery."

She scribbled rapidly with the plumed pen on Dorothy's pretty gray paper, with its silver embossed street number.

"There!" she said, using the blotter with satisfaction. "If the money comes here, you'll have to pretend to be me and sign for it. And then—" she stopped suddenly, struck by a thought. "You'll have to make the donation, too. Dot, it mustn't come from me."

Dorothy laid down her brushes, her pretty brows contracted in a frown.

"I cannot do that."

"But don't you see that it is impossible for me to appear in the thing?" urged Lila. "Everybody knows I haven't ten thousand dollars to give to charity. Dad's always kept me so extravagantly, and it's too early for Herbert to have given me so much."

"Why not send it in an anonymous contribution 'in memory of Jack Farquhar,' or something like that?" suggested the resourceful Dorothy.

"Splendid!" Lila's eyes sparkled. "I must run now. I've promised to meet Herbert down-town for lunch."

Dorothy laughed. "Can't you two love-birds be parted for more than three hours?"

"We wouldn't be parted for one hour, if I could help it," declared Lila unflinchingly. "Oh, I'm gone all right, Dot."

"I should say you are!" sighed Dorothy. "It seems strange—" She checked herself suddenly.

Lila raised her brows. "You were going to say that it seems strange that I could forget"

Souris High School Closing

The closing exercises of Souris High School took place in St. Mary's Hall, June 29th, at 9.30 a.m. Mr. John E. McDonald presided, and after a short program was carried out, the prizes and certificates were presented.

Principal Leard briefly reviewed the year's work, mentioning the interest taken by the scholars in the Portfolio and Oratorical Contests, and also in the Cadet Corps. In closing, he expressed his thanks to the people for their attendance. The scholars were then addressed by Rev. Mr. MacDonald, Mr. Crosby and Mr. John E. McDonald, after which the exercises were brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Program

Chorus, O Canada, school; recitation, No Time for Tests, John Cheverie; drill, At Dame Nature's Feet, Twelve Girls; recitation, Some Difficulties, George Poole; dialogue, The Trials of a School Teacher, seven boys; recitation, Why Girls Can't Whistle, James McIntyre; Dramatized Lesson from Third Reader; A Sound Opinion, Bernard Mooney; Neil Cheverie; Alymer Gallant, Esther Gillam; recitation, My Dollies, Grace Poole; vacation exercise, Henry Gallant, Jack Matthew, Ambrose Moynagh; presentation of prizes and certificates; chorus, Vacation, the school. God save the King.

Prize List

Principal's dept., Governor General's medal for proficiency in Grade X., awarded to Olga White; second prize for general proficiency in Grade X., awarded to Melvin McCann; first prize for general proficiency in Grade IX., awarded to Lester O'Donnell; second prize for general proficiency in Grade IX., awarded to Angus Paquet; Prize for highest marks in school leaving exams, awarded to Billie Acorn; prize for second highest marks in school leaving exams, donated by Mrs. F. S. MacDonald, awarded to Ernest Cheverie; prize for general proficiency in Grade VIII., donated by Mrs. H. H. Acorn, awarded to Doris MacDonald.

Miss Paquet's dept., first prize for general proficiency in Grade VII., awarded to Jessie Bushey; second prize for general proficiency in Grade VII., donated by Rev. M. Monaghan, awarded to Edward Moynagh; first prize for general proficiency in Grade VI., awarded to one man so completely and fall so frantically in love with another, weren't you?"

Dorothy nodded, a little smile playing around her pretty mouth.

"I rather liked your Jack Farquhar, you know, even though I never saw him. What was he like, Lila? I don't mean in looks. You showed me his photo—but the man himself."

Lila shrugged carelessly. "I hardly know. I'm afraid it was only his looks I was thinking about. I was such a romantic little fool! Oh, he was fascinating, enough—one of the savage, ruthless sort, you know. A man of that type is frightfully difficult, especially as a husband, I should think. Thank Heaven, Herbert's not like that!"

"But Jack sounds so interesting."

"He was interesting," Lila said, as she drew on her gloves. "He swept me off my feet. We'd known each other only a week when he proposed to me."

"Were you very sad when he went away?"

"I don't know," answered Lila thoughtfully. "It all seems so unreal now—like a play. But I guess I thought I was broken-hearted."

She sprang up and slipped back into her wrap.

"I'll be late, and Herbert detests being kept waiting. Dot, don't make me talk about that old episode. I want to forget, and there's no reason now why I shouldn't."

It was nearly a month later that Dorothy rang her up one evening while she was dressing for dinner.

"Can you manage to come here at once, Lila? I can't tell you over the phone, but there's some unexpected trouble!"

HAZELBROOK SCHOOL

The closing exercises of Hazelbrook School were held on June 29. A number of visitors and ratepayers were present. The pupils were examined in the various subjects by their teacher, Miss Helen Chandler and all answered well. After the examination a short program was enjoyed. Following this was the presentation of Public School Certificates to G. Henry Jones and Julia Myers. Much praise is due to these pupils, who worked so diligently to obtain their reward. Following is the standing of Grade III: Gordon Carver, 2. Sue Jones, 1. Gordon Lindsay, 4. Ruby Trowdale.
