LITTLE THEATRE GUILD
AN ACCOMPLISHED FACT
Its aim is to Encourage all who have Latent Dramatic Talent

The Little Theatre Guild is now a fait accompli in Charlottetown and many thanks are due to the enterprising group who have been the means of promoting this organization. All the members of this group are busy people, engaged in various activities for the encouragement of the Arts, but it is a well known fact that it is always the busy people who are willing to do "one thing more."

Carleton & Vicinity

Large numbers of the young people of Cape Traverse have taken advantage of the combination of snow-banks and moonlight nights, and have had a glorious time indulging in the old-time sport of coasting on some of the near-by hillsides. Their pleasure was marred on Tuesday night by a series of accidents, when Miss Corinne Crossman suffered a fractured knee as a result of the collision of two sleighs. Another sleigh overturned, hurling the merry-makers into the deep snow with no more serious result than the loss of a gold fender from the tooth of one passenger.

Scout News and Notices

Afghanistan reported a total of 352 Boy Scouts in 1935.

A boy with several years of Scouting back of him makes a better doctor, lawyer, preacher, or business man than a boy who has not been so trained.

Over 3,000 Scouts from all parts of South Africa gathered at East London, Cape Colony, to greet Lord Baden-Powell. This was the big event of the Chief Scout's present tour of Africa.

Twelve Toronto Rover Scouts, in smart Rover uniform, acted as ushers at the opening of the Ontario Legislature. King's Scouts of Rogers have performed this function at Assembly openings for a number of years.

In a fire-making contest with the ancient Indian "fire-bow," Patrol Leader Goodwin of the last St. Anne de Bellevue Scout Troop secured a flame in fifty seconds. This probably equalled the time required by good Indian fire-makers. The Scouts had made their fire sets of locally secured wood.

The leader of an Australian Wolf Cub (Junior Scout) Pack announced to a group of small candidates that on next meeting night there would be an Investiture. Shortly after the boys had received home the Cubmaster was called to the phone, and an agitated mother inquired, "What happened? Was Johnny concerned in it?" Johnny had announced an "investigation."

The total number of Boy Scouts in the world at the end of 1935 was 2,505,963, an increase over 1934 of 206,874.

Scouts in the British Empire showed an increase of 34,013 to a total of 939,203.

The Government of Britain the figures showed: England, 366,763; Scotland, 56,674; Wales, 15,668; Ulster, 7,194; Irish Free State, 2,124.

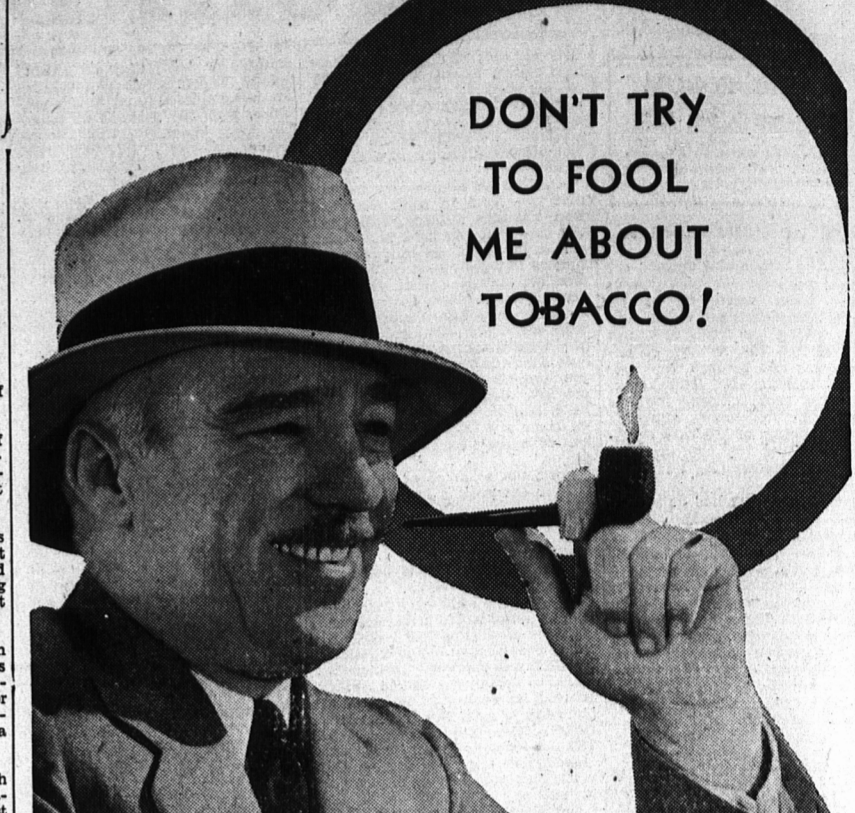

Again reflecting the rapid growth of the Scout movement in India, the Province of Bombay reported a membership increase in 1935 of over 5,000.

To help prevent children of Malden and Coombe Urban, England, from contracting measles, or to reduce the seriousness of the attack, the Rover Scouts who had had the disease contributed their blood for an inoculation campaign.

At the start of his present tour Lord Baden-Powell attended a rally of 2,600 Scouts and Guides at St. Anne de Bellevue. While there he paid a visit to the International Foyer, or Club-hostel for foreign Scouts. This hostel, which includes two well appointed club rooms, has been in operation three years, and in that time has entertained 460 foreign Scouts in touring parties, and 150 Scouts traveling individually.

An Ulster employer has informed Boy Scout Headquarters at Belfast that he always obtains his boys from Scout troops, and before selecting them in their jobs consults their Scoutmasters as to the particular capabilities shown in their Scouting. According to the information thus received he places some boys in mechanical departments, others in the warehouse, and others in the office. The method has given excellent results.

Discussing juvenile "behaviour cases" brought before the psychological clinic of Edinburgh University, Prof. James Drever, Ph. D., stated that he invariably asked such boys if they belonged to the Scouts, or any similar organization. If they did not, he recommended that they join a Scout troop, in the belief that behaviour difficulties would be lessened, if not entirely removed, if this advice were followed. The fact was, the Scout Movement supplied those conditions which were most essential for the securing of normal development at a certain stage in a boy's life, and more especially in the circumstances brought about by the course which modern civilization had taken.

Want Canadians on Subsidised Ships

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire) OTTAWA, Feb. 20—British Columbia and the Maritimes tonight joined hands in the House of Commons in requesting more Canadian and less foreigner be employed on ships receiving subsidies from the Dominion treasury.

J. J. Kinley (Lib. Queen's-Lunenburger) pleaded for a preference for Maritime sailors on ships carrying coal that was subject to a Dominion subsidy.

Conservative leader Bennett embraced the opportunity to defend trade subsidies in the Pacific. If Canada was to maintain its trade position in the Orient and the Antipodes it was necessary to pay subsidies. It was a case of "keeping up with the Joneses" or losing the business.

Angus MacInnis (C.C.F.-Vancouver) first objected to the wages paid on subsidised ships on the Pacific. Personally, he did not object to Chinese sailors if they received decent wages. He did object, however, to Chinese crews working for low wages.

Thomas Reid (Lib. New Westminster) objected to Chinese sailors and said they should be replaced by Canadians.

The trade minister defended an increase from $200,000 to $300,000 in the subsidies paid for a two-boat service to New Zealand. It had been represented to him the company was losing on operations and must receive more money from the Dominion.

The conservative leader came to the defence of the increased subsidy for the New Zealand and Australian service. He said it was prompted primarily by the heavy American subsidies to competing lines. The service was needed to maintain Canada's Antipodean trade.

The line was owned by the Royal Mail and Canadian Pacific, Mr. Bennett said, and so far has never paid a cent in dividends. It was operated at a loss.

The Orient was just coming to life industrially, Mr. Bennett said, and this was no time to cut subsidies.

The Conservative leader also defended the Empire marine agreement. He said it was a good bargain for Canada, this country receiving more concessions than it gave.

He had been informed, Mr. Euler said, it was practically impossible to sign white sailors for some jobs on the Pacific service. He promised to investigate the whole situation but could make no other promises.

It was no use employing white sailors at coole wages, suggested Mr. MacInnis. What was needed was an investigation into wages, not the number of Orientals in the crews.

Mr. Kinley referred to the number of Maritime seamen who have been on the beach for years and the paramount need of finding jobs for them. One solution would be to compel boats moving subsidised coal to employ Canadian crews.

"When every Canadian industry," the Maritimer said, "is seeking protection of one kind or another, it is time the seaman came under the protective policy of Canada." Above all, he added, Canadians should have first call on the Canadian coastal trade.

The Nova Scotian Liberal criticized the British Empire marine agreement signed two or three years ago under which each Empire country guaranteed reciprocal treatment with all others. This agreement, he said, bound Canada's hands in giving priority to Canadian seamen.

American regulations demanded various percentages of the crews of subsidised vessels be American citizens, the maximum being one-half. If the Canadian Government would give a subsidy, Mr. Kinley suggested, it could lay down conditions on crews and wages.
