BIRTHS

BORN.—At Stonoway, Sassa., To w. H. and Mrs. Weeks on Wednesday 13th, August, 1913, a daughter, Mrs. W. A. Brennan, Summerside, and Mrs. Horace Roberts, of Devonport, spent the week end in Charlottetown the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Doull.

TO VOTE ON MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 25.—Following a spirited campaign, a special election will be held in San Francisco to-morrow on a proposal to issue bonds for the acquisition of municipal street car lines. It is possible, if not probable, that the women voters will decide the fate of the proposal, since they number more than one-third of the total of registered voters.

COATICOOK JUMPS INTO FAME.

QUEBEC, Aug. 25.—Make way there for Coaticook, P. J., on the map. Twice in ten days the little town has attracted the eyes of the whole continent.

When Thaw escaped from Matteawan and was looked for in a thousand cities he bobbed up at Coaticook, although it must have been a difficult place for him to get to. And just before that, a week or so earlier a despatch from the same place made city editors all over America gasp by telling how a citizen of Coaticook, sitting on his "stoop" during a storm saw a shaft of lightning make a splash in the water, and perceived a large fish floating on the surface. Going to it, he found that it was an eleven-pound bass, dead, struck by lightning, with a hole through its head.

A fortnight ago Coaticook was almost unknown. To-day it is famous, thanks to Thaw and that eleven-pound bass. The moral of it is that no man and no place is so obscure as to be sure to escape fame. Anybody or any place may wake up any morning and be the talk of the world.

Smith Got Wise

A sore corn, he said, was had enough, but to have it stepped on was the limit. He invested in a bottle of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, and now wears a happy smile. "Corn is gone—corn is happy." Try Putnam's Extractor, 25c. at all dealers.

FRUIT CROP REPORT.

The fruit crop report for August, 1913, has just been issued by the Fruit Division of the Agricultural Department, and as usual gives much useful information relative to crop prospects, prices, insect pests and insecticides, etc.

With reference to Prince Edward Island the report says, "There is a small quantity of early fruit grown here for export, which may increase somewhat in the near future but is not enough at present to appreciably affect the market. This district still imports winter fruit for home consumption."

The fruit business in Prince Edward Island, particularly in apples, can scarcely be said to be creditable. It has been demonstrated beyond any doubt that apples of the best varieties, both early and winter, can be grown successfully here; that in flavor and quantity they compare very favorably with those grown anywhere on the continent. Yet, even in the early varieties, we do not nearly supply our own home market, while we make no pretensions to producing the winter supply. We import hundreds of barrels of apples; our groceries and fruit stores, even during our apple harvest time, are stocked with imported stuff.

This is not because we do not raise the apples but simply because we do not look after them. It is humiliating to see throughout the country, almost everywhere, hundreds of barrels of apples either rotting on the ground or being fed to hogs while the stores in country, village and cities are stocked up with apples that are in no way superior to our own.

And why is this? It is simply and solely due to carelessness. Our apple growers have not learned the necessity of properly handling their fruit. We have seen apples shovelled into bags, carted in to market, thrown on the sidewalk and handed generally as potatoes are handled. When the fruit merchant refuses to pay a stiff price for them the producer becomes discouraged, complains that it is no use trying to compete with our sister provinces in apple growing and he straightway goes out of the apple business or so neglects it that he might as well be out of it.

Our fruit dealers and growers would undoubtedly stock up with home grown apples in preference to the imported—if they could get them in decent shape. They recognize, however, that it is useless to offer unattractive, bruised, broken apples to their customers and therefore refuse to have anything to do with them, except to offer them as inferior grades at a ridiculously low price.

If our apple growers paid some attention to the marketing of their apples, if they put them up attractively and uninjured, they would find ready sale for them and at prices which would pay them a handsome profit. This is true of our early and winter varieties and a little attention to it would save the province many hundreds of dollars which should be circulated among our own people rather than sent abroad to build up orchards and farms in other provinces.

The apple season is now opening. We have more early apples in the province than we ought to have, but this is all the more reason why we should dispose of our crop as profitably as possible and supply the home market with our product in preference to the imported. Let those who have orchards take up the matter right now with their grocers, arrange for the regular delivery of certain quantities weekly or daily or otherwise. Let them arrange for the careful handling and packing of the fruit so that the merchant can offer it to his customers without apologies for its appearance or its condition. In this way the money heretofore sent abroad yearly for apples will be circulated among our own people and the general prosperity of the province will be increased by so much.

The wealth of the province does not depend upon the great accumulations of the few but on the little additions to the savings of the many.

SOMETHING LIKE CLOSURE.

"The death of constitutional liberty" is the exaggerated phrase in which Sir Wilfrid describes the extremely modified form of closure passed by the House of Commons last session. This rule was not introduced and carried without due warning. Sir Wilfrid had handed over the leadership of the House to Mr. Wm. Pugsley, who with Mr. Carvell, Mr. Macdonald and Dr. Clark, as lieutenants, succeeded in holding up the business of the House by a series of guerrilla tactics as disgraceful as they were unparalleled in the history of Parliament.

To bring this state of affairs to an end and to enable the majority to rule in the House, Mr. Borden, availing himself of a clause placed on the book of rules by Sir Wilfrid himself, introduced the closure, by which a debate may be terminated by a member of the Government giving notice that it shall end twenty-four hours hence. That is, after a discussion has lasted a reasonable length of time, the Government can bring it to a close within two days by duly giving notice to that effect.

There is no hardship in this; on the other hand it enables business to be despatched without such interminable obstruction as Mr. Pugsley had the doubtful honor of organizing. But this is what Sir Wilfrid is pleased to describe as "the death of constitutional liberty." Before last election, when the Laurierites still anticipated being again returned to power, leading Cabinet Ministers declared themselves firmly in favor of this "death of constitutional liberty," and it has been left to the Hon. Robert Rogers to unearth the Laurierite closure bill, prepared by Sir Allen Aylesworth. Had not Laurierites been given a spell in the wilderness, the closure they would have introduced would have been far and away more drastic than that now in vogue. The closure which they proposed to institute was a guillotine of the worst description, being even more arbitrary than that now in force in the British Parliament.

The Laurier-Aylesworth bill would have permitted any member of Parliament to demand the closure, and if thirty-six members of a House of nearly two hundred and thirty constituted a majority in its favor the debate was at once strangled. No notice was necessary under the proposed Liberal closure bill, thus bearing out Hon. Mr. Fielding's contention that the minority had only such rights as the majority allowed them.

What must one think of the protests of a party who had thus prepared to entrench themselves behind a closure the most stringent and effective ever drafted by a responsible Government? One can merely conclude that it is a regretful longing for "the hay rustling in the stall," which makes Sir Wilfrid and his friends so bitterly wreckless and resentful in the language they use.

THE HUMAN PROCESSION

1873—First kindergarten school in America established at St. Louis.
1891—Decennial census placed the population of Canada at 4,823,344.
CAPTURE OF FRONTENAC
The bombardment of Fort Frontenac by the English was commenced 155 years ago today and quickly resulted in the capture of that French stronghold. The fortification occupied a site at the foot of Lake Ontario, at the present city of Kingston, and was built by Frontenac in 1673. After the defeat of the English at Ticonderoga, in the Summer of 1758, Col. John Bradstreet urged Abercrombie to send an expedition against Frontenac. The proposal appealed to the commander, and he detached 3,000 troops for that purpose and placed Col. Bradstreet in command. The army was composed principally of provincials. Bradstreet went by way of Oswego, crossing the lake in bateaux, having with him 300 bateaux-men. After much difficulty the army and its eight cannon and two mortars took up position within a mile of the fort on the evening of August 25th. The construction of batteries was immediately commenced, and on the 26th they opened fire on the fort. The garrison did not offer much resistance, and on the following day, finding the works untenable, the defenders had fled at the first fire, and there were only 110 prisoners. The spoils included sixty cannon, sixteen mortars, provisions and military stores, a large quantity of small arms, and nine armed vessels.

Bradstreet, the commander of the victorious army, had served in the expedition against Louisbourg in 1745, and later was lieutenant-governor of St. John's, Newfoundland. He was commissioned a major-general shortly after his victory at Frontenac, and in 1764 he made a trip through the Indian country, and concluded treaties of peace with various chiefs by which the redskins were bound to render aid to the English troops and, in return, were promised English protection.

IOWA STATE FAIR OPENS.

DES MOINES, Ia., Aug. 25.—With every department well filled with high-class exhibits the Iowa State Fair opened to-day for a week's enjoyment. The display of live stock and the various products of the farm and orchard is declared to be the best ever seen here. A trotting meeting of the Great Western Circuit is numbered among the leading attractions of the week.

TOOK STRYCHNINE FOR EPSOM SALTS.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25.—In connection with the death of John Fortier at Toronto, who was poisoned by taking Epsom salts, purchased by his sister in a Winnipeg drug store, druggists here state they denied selling salts in packages and denied having made the mistake and say that in selling the salts in packages already prepared makes mistakes impossible. So far neither the Attorney-General's department nor the Winnipeg police have received any communications in regard to the affair and have not been asked to make an investigation.

OPAL IS NOW THE STONE IN VOGUE

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The real opal, which has long been out of favor with the fair sex, is going to enjoy a great vogue this fall. There has always been a superstitious prejudice against these stones, but the new fashion of long necklaces of uncut opals has proved too much for the women to resist, and the jewelers of Bon street and Rue de la Paix are hard put to it to get a sufficient stock.

Queen Victoria presented to each of her daughters on their marriage a magnificent set of opal ornaments, but these have seldom been the light of day. One night at the Opera, however, it was observed that Princess Henry of Battenburg was wearing hers, and no doubt Princess Louise and Princess Christian will follow her example.

The Queen of Spain has always worn these stones, for her birthday is in October, the lucky month for opals, and Lady Deverest and Lady Aine Vivian are similarly fortunate.—The latter indeed wore them on her wedding day.

Lady de Bathe (Lily Langtry) has some fine stones, but probably the most valuable opals in England belong to Countess Beauchamp, who has a tiara, necklace, brooches and ear-rings, which were collected at much below their value by Lord Beauchamp when he was Governor of Australia.

Others who have worn opals lately are the Duchess Lady Sligo and Lady Norah Brassey.
The Princess Royal has a deep root of horror for them. Some fine opals were among the jewels she lost when wrecked on the Delhi, and she declares that their evil influence pursues her to this day.

ANOTHER WIRELESS HERO PERISHED.

SEATTLE, Aug. 22.—Another hero story in the annals of wireless telegraphy was told here early today when forty surviving members of the steamer State of California arrived here on the steamer Jefferson.

Donald C. Perkins, of Oakland, (Cal.) who went as chief wireless operator on the state of California in hope of encountering adventure was off duty and asleep when the steamer struck an uncharted rock in Gambier Bay, Alaska, last Sunday morning.

Awakened by the shock, he rushed to the wireless room and ordered Walter Chamberlain, the operator on duty, to seek safety. Then he sat down at the key, but before he could send his first call for help a falling mast went through the wireless house and crushed Perkins to death.

Of the three lifeboats launched, the survivors said one was useless, having been smashed by falling wreckage and one was carried down by the suction of the boat.

AUSTRALIA TO BE REPRESENTED.

SYDNEY, Aug. 25.—It is officially stated that Australia will be represented at the Imperial Defence Conference in Canada at the end of the year.

HUERTA KILLED MADERO.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Arthur Iserl of San Francisco but lately engineer for the Mexican government here to-day says Huerta himself killed Madero and that ex-governor Gamorra is authority for the statement.

LATEST FROM THEATERS

PROCTOR'S 125TH STREET THEATRE, NEW YORK.
Musical treats, rare comedy and brilliant variety in general await the patrons of B. F. Proctor's 125th St. Theatre the coming week. It is a program of such bountiful proportions and varied interest that it would be a misfortune to lose the delights of a single act. First and foremost in the galaxy is Clivette, the man in black, assisted by Nell in baffling illusions and shadowgraphy. Others listed are June Levey, the singing comedienne; O'Brien and Cale, comedy skit; Grace Jordan and Lillian Doherty, singers and dancers; Fisher Morris and company in the comedy sketch, "The Interrupted Curry"; Langweid Sisters, comedienne; Burke, Barton and Wilson, comedy trio; Four Australian Comiques, novelty act. Sarrell, comedy cartoonist; Evans and Edwards, comedy acrobats and Clyde De Veaux and company. Kinemacolor and black and white photo plays will make up the balance of the bill.

PROCTOR'S 58TH ST. THEATRE.

Topping a very entertaining program for the first half of the week will be Hope Booth and company in George Cohan's little skit "The Blonde Lady." Others are Elsa Balty and Sister, musicians; Blake and Harvard, comedians; Nella Tenris and company, variety artists; Johnson and Wells, ebony hued comedies; Ferguson and Brenner, jugglers, Kinemacolor and black and white photo plays.

PROCTOR'S 23RD ST. THEATRE.

The Eight Diving Girls in a big aquatic novelty will head the bill here. Others programed are Janet London and company in the comedy sketch "A 4th Ward Romance"; Hanson and erson, swift steppers; Will Kenny, comedian; Gaeter and Leighton, black face comedians; Veronica, Hurl and Falls, comedy acrobats; Venetian Duo, operatic singers; Kinemacolor and black and white photo plays.

WEEK OF AUGUST 25TH.

In the search for vaudeville novelty the management of Proctor's 5th Avenue Theatre has sealed the very heights of grand opera, resulting in the capture of Raulo Romito and Contessa Millefiori, principal tenor and soprano, respectively, of Henry Russell's famous Boston company. As headliners, accompanied by an augmented orchestra, they will be heard in duets and solos from leading works. Scheduled also for appearance on the last summer bill are dainty Kathleen Clifford in male impersonations of feminine charms; Melville and Higgins with a brand new act from the first to the final laugh; Will Oakland and Company in their second triumphant week; Foster and Lovett, novelty entertainers; Mantilla and Lloyd, Spanish-British dancing combination; Wilfred Clarke and Company in an exhilarating new farce, "A Wife For An Hour"; Gordon and Rica, dare-devil cyclists; John H. West and his Operatic Wolf, and Florette, marvelous contortionist.

Those two soaps made by Harmony of Boston—Harmony Rose and Harmony Violet—are two of the best hand soaps at the price. They are made from purest ingredients—vegetable oils and glycerine—and are absolutely transparent. The cakes are extra large considering the price 15c. two for 25c.
