LARGE MAIL ON THE STEAMER.

OTTAWA, May 30.—It is repeatedly stated here that the Empress of Ireland carried one of the largest mails sent from Canada to Great Britain this year, and even should the vessel be raised this will be a total loss. The mail includes a large amount of registered matter, much of which is doubtless of a valuable character and it will be some days before a full report can be made of this consignment. None of the mail is insured. MONTREAL, May 30.—Enquiries made at the general post office elicited the fact that the Montreal portion of the mail sent to the Old Country via the ill-fated Empress of Ireland was not heavy for this season of the year. The postal authorities are careful to explain that they have no supervision over the western or any other part of the total mail which was in the hold of the vessel, and so they could give no details of the aggregate, but the mail matter from Montreal and suburbs was as follows: Newspaper bags, 199; letter bags, 51 eight baskets, parcel post matter containing 301 parcels.

MISIONARY SOCIETY METHODIST CHURCH

(Continued from page one) John Humphreys, Sussex, Superintendent Christian Stewardship, Mrs. E. C. Turner, Shediac, Mrs. R. M. Johnson, of Charlottetown, is Honorary Vice-President, and Mrs. George Walker, of Charlottetown, Third Vice-President. All the District Organizers are also present. Yesterday morning there was a meeting of the executive and organizers. In the afternoon, the business consisted of the reading of minutes, appointment of committees, passing of resolutions and resolutions and the introduction of missionary Miss M.A. Robertson. The President read an excellent address and the session closed with a consecration service.

In the evening the large audience-room and galleries of the Heartz Memorial Hall were well filled when the convention held its second session. The president Mrs. Sanford, occupied the chair. Mrs. Johnson of the Charlottetown Society gave an address of welcome to the visiting delegates. Mrs. McAnnis of Zion Church, Mrs. Clark of the Baptist Church and Mrs. Tait of St. James Church also greeted the visiting ladies with warm words of welcome, on behalf of their different societies. Miss Stewart of the Sackville district responded for the delegates. Mrs. Barraclough then gave an illustrated talk on her experience among the Flat Head Indians of British Columbia. She told of the beginning and progress of the Crosley Home for Indian Children at Port Simpson. Her address was full of interest and the pictures well illustrated the advancement made by the children after they had been under the kind care and instruction of the missionaries.

CLOSING EXERCISES AT ST. D. COLLEGE

(continued from page 1) pare them for a prosperous journey among men, by forming in them good moral characters and revealing to them the necessity of ever practicing the virtues of Honesty, Sobriety and Industry, the three main gateways to success. The Valedictory concluded as follows: "Today our journey in consort has come to an end. No longer may we enjoy the peace and happiness of these blissful days. No longer shall we hear the voice of friendship, pouring forth its tuneful notes on every side. Everything of the past has become sacred to our memories, and a solemn sadness falls upon us as we realize that the time has come when we must part forever."

The Rev. Dr. J. C. McMillan delivered an inspiring and uplifting address to the graduates—an address which was fraught with sound and estimable advice. They were leaving the College with which they had been associated for a long while, he said, and in which they had spent many fruitful days; and they were about to turn their faces to the great world with all its responsibilities and cares. The occasion appealed to the emotional part of their nature, and he did not fail to recognize that it was the opening of a very important era in their lives. They had chosen one of their number to speak for them, to give expression to the sentiments they all felt, and well indeed had he discharged that duty. In his admirable Valedictory. He had given abundant reason why gratitude to their Alma Mater should ever occupy the foremost place in their minds. The College had indeed been a fair and tender mother to them. From the day on which they first entered it it had surrounded them with true and motherly solicitude. It had built up within them what was better than all learning—a great edifice, true Christian character. They were at a turning point in their lives that day, and naturally new thoughts and aspirations would invade them. Their studies had been along of an abstract and general character and had left them free and untrammelled without any obligations, but now they must begin to specialize that was to say, they were to prepare themselves for the real and material problems which would confront them in life beyond the precincts of their College, where their views of things in general had been somewhat restricted. The Doctor then dwelt eloquently upon the great importance and admirableness of their living up to their convictions in spite of all the rivalry and objection which might beset them. They were to have the courage of their convictions—in religious matters above all things. Dr. McMillan advised the students with great fervour to "Stay at Home." He did not see why they should go West. In any part of the Continent they would always find people ready to advertise their country and its "great possibilities" with all the earnestness born of patriotism. In Prince Edward Island they were always deprecating the place. This should not be. They, who had been so well educated, should remain in the land to build it up; they were the kind of material that went towards the development of a country. Prince Edward Island was called the million dollar farm. It was more than a farm—a big farm no doubt—it was a province and should be looked upon as such. He hoped that in years to come the Island, with its vast and important industries, would be regarded not as the million acre farm but as the province with a million people. (Cheers.) Dr. McMillan was heartily applauded on the conclusion of his eminently learned address.

The Rector of the College gave a short address in which he dealt with the work that had been done by the institution for the year. He mentioned the fact that the students from St. Dunstan's last year who had gone on to Laval University were the best of eighteen Colleges in the Dominion that had sent graduates to Quebec. He expressed the hearty thanks of the College to the Honourable Charles Dalton for his generous donation of $50,000 to the institution. All who had the interests of education at heart, he said, would bless the donor, whose magnanimity would enable them to effect considerable improvements to the College from both a material and an educational point of view. His Grace the Bishop of Vancouver, also addressed the audience. He congratulated the graduates on their success and wished them prosperity in their future life. His Lordship Bishop O'Leary, in congratulating the students, said he would like to add a word in support of the remarks which had been made by the Rector in thanks to the Hon. Mr. Dalton. He thought that the gift of Mr. Dalton would be of inestimable service to the generations unborn, and they would ask of their friends and relatives the heart-felt prayers for the donor.

Other addresses were delivered by Messrs. A. B. Warburton and Charles Lyons, both of whom congratulated the graduates on their success. Below is given a list of the medals and special prizes:

The Pleasure of Eating

Yes—but far more important is the effect of food on body and brain.

Grape-Nuts

is not only a delightfully appetizing food, but is remarkably rich in nutritive values.

Made from whole wheat and barley, Grape-Nuts retains all the nutrition of these grains, including the mineral salts—phosphate of potash, etc.—so necessary for growth and repair of the delicate brain and nerve tissues, but which are so often lacking in ordinary food.

Ready to eat from the package. with cream or milk and a sprinkle of sugar—

A ration of Grape-Nuts along with other food helps wonderfully to provide a well-balanced dietary!
