CHAPTER XXVI—Continued

It was the one thing needed. They followed me. In a moment we had buried ourselves upon the gray line, thrusting with sword and bayonet. They broke before us, some running, some fighting desperately.

A man threw a long knife at me out of a sling. Instinctively I caught the weapon as if it had been a ball hot off the bat. In doing so I dropped my sword and was cut across the fingers. He came at me fiercely, clubbing his gun—a rawboned, swarthy giant, broad as a barn door. I caught the barrel as it came down. He tried to wrench it away, but I held firm. Then he began to push up to me. I let him come, and in a moment we were grappling hip and thigh. He was a powerful man, but that was my kind of warfare. It gave me comfort when I felt the grip of his hands. I let him tug a jiffy and then caught him with the old hip lock, and he went under me so hard I could hear the crack of his bones. Our support came then. We made him prisoner, with some 200 other men. Reserves came also and took away the captured guns.

My comrades gathered about me, cheering, but I had no suspicion of what they meant. I thought it a tribute to my wrestling. Men lay thick there back of the guns—some dead, some calling faintly for help. The red puddles about them were covered with flies; ants were crawling over their faces. I felt a kind of sickness and turned away. What was left of my regiment formed in fours to join the advancing column. Horses were galloping riderless, rein and stirrup flying, some horribly wounded. One hobbled near me, a front leg gone at the knee. Shells were flying overhead; cannon balls were ricocheting over the level valley, throwing turf in the air, tossing

No Waste of Heat In the "Bison" Hot Water Heater

The "Bison" has two drafts—a center draft to burn quickly, and a side draft to heat quickly.

The side draft carries the heat up a side flue passing up and down, and up again through a center flue, always in contact with water surfaces, trapping the heat and burning the gases. See illustration.

The draft is continuous, syphon-like in action, but always under easy control.

Not a particle of heat is lost—the sections get it all, the water heats quickly—the effect on the radiators is almost instantaneous—The "Bison" has more good heating points than all other heaters combined.

the dead and wounded that lay thick and helpless.

Some were crumpled like a rag, as if the pain of death had withered them in their clothes; some swollen to the girth of horses; some bent backward with arms outstretching like one trying an odd trick; some lay as if listening eagerly, an ear close to the ground; some like a sleeper, their heads upon their arms; one shrieked loudly, gesturing with bloody hands, "Lord God Almighty, have mercy on me!"

I had come suddenly to a new world, where the lives of men were cheaper than blind puppies. I was a new sort of creature and reckless of what came, careless of all I saw and heard.

A staff officer stepped up to me as we joined the main body. "You've been shot, young man," he said, pointing to my left hand. Before he could turn I felt a rush of air and saw him fly into pieces, some of which hit me as I fell backward. I did not know what had happened; I knew not now more than that I have written. I remember feeling something under me, like a stick of wood, bearing hard upon my ribs. I tried to roll off it, but somehow it was tied to me and kept hurting. I put my hand over my hip and felt it there behind me—my own arm! The hand was like that of a dead man—cold and senseless. I pulled it from under me, and it lay helpless; it could not lift itself. I knew now that I, too, had become one of the bloody horrors of the battle.
