Trinity Men Hold Valentine Supper

Trinity Men's Association held its regular monthly meeting Monday night amid Valentine decorations and a supper served by the Willing Circle of the king's Daughters. Never in the history of the Men's Association was a meeting so largely attended with approximately 170 members and guests present, which included a representation from York United Church. At the head table with the amiable President, John A. McNair and the guest speaker, Dr. William E. Dudley, were four members of the City Council in the persons of N.W. Lowther, K.C., Edwin C. Johnston, Chester M. Cox and Wendell H. Beaton.

Following a group Sing Song led by Walter J. Cox with O.K. Presby at the piano, Stirling Inman rendered a beautiful solo in commemoration of Valentine's Day.

The highlight of the evening was the address presented by the guest pastor of Trinity United Church, Dr. William E. Dudley, who spoke feelingly on "The Life of Abraham Lincoln". Dr. Dudley spoke chiefly on the human qualities of the "Great Emancipator" and revealed Abraham Lincoln as the most poignant and tender spirit since Jesus of Nazareth. He contrasted Mr. Lincoln with Napoleon Bonaparte who could watch a thousand soldiers die without even the twitching of a facial muscle. This great world conqueror was almost devoid of feeling. In contrast Mr. Lincoln deemed it worth his while to write a letter to a widow who had lost five sons in the Civil War. This letter concluded with a prayer to the Heavenly Father that he would comfort her in her anguish and bereavement. Dr. Dudley continued "His ungainly form has passed — his dishevelled hair — his sunken cheeks,—his great pitying heart are no more, but his spirit lives. His giant stature still casts its shadow over the world" . . . In conclusion. Dr. Dudley said, "My friends, Abraham Lincoln is not dead God cast his spirit in the mold of immortality."

Following the address, President MacNair disposed of several items of business and informed the meeting that Dr. H. C. Rice would be the speaker at the next regular meeting of the Men's Association.

trol is frequently surrounded by much heat but little light. General price controls at the retail level would seem to me to be most inadvisable, and a disaster as far as our national economy is concerned."

Malcolm P. McNair, professor of marketing, Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, gave the retailers' conference a detailed analysis of the upward and downward factors in the United States economy.

He looked for some decline in business spending in the United States in 1949, on the order of 15 or 20 per cent; some inflationary pressure from money and credit policies; some decline in private consumption; and a net export situation which may lend some support to the economy.

A paper prepared by Wallace Goforth, research economist of Toronto, and read by Gilbert Jackson of Toronto, said there is no indication of either a widespread or prolonged business recession in Canada and the United States, though both countries "are overdue for a healthy 'shake-out.".

The midnight stars are gleaming
On a marked but silent grave
Where sleeping but not dreaming
Lies the one we could not save.

Peacefully sleeping, resting at last
His weary trials and troubles are past.
In silence he suffered, in patience he bore,
Till God called him to suffer no more.

Little Theatre Guild Presents Fine Play

An excellent evening's entertainment was presented by The Little Theatre Guild which staged the popular U.S. play, "John Loves Mary" at the Empire last evening. In spite of the inclement weather the theatre was fairly well filled and deserves a full house on its last presentation this evening.

A comedy in which love's young dream runs afoul of the horrors of post-war rehabilitation, the vehicle was a smooth piece of writing. Noticeably stiff in the first act, the cast gradually thawed out and finished up with a commendable performance.

Grace Diamond, as Mary and half of the lead-team, gave a good steady performance, showing just enough pettishness to bring the part to life. The other half of the lead-team, Jerry Foster as John, carried the pace with vigor and his sense of comedy showed no little promise. He was ably supported by an erst-while hero and harassed father-to-be, Ed Garnhum as Fred, who gave the naive performance the part call for.

Jock Lawson played the loud, self-important U.S. Senator with confidence, fitting into the part more happily as the play proceeded. Mary DeBlois as his wife, was excellently cast and her performance was better than good. Oscar, the bus-boy, was well played by Charlie Willett.

The high-light of the second act was Alf McKearney's portrayal of the once uppity army lieutenant who had been reduced to a theatre usher on civvy street. Sam Vail as the do-gooding Red Cross worker left nothing to be desired in his sparkling, if ingratiating, appearance.

Elizabeth Willett as Lily, the English cabaret artist, did a good job in a part in which she was not too happily cast, and Sid Fielding, in his overplaying, acted the part of a clowning stage-general admirably.

The mechanics of the play were unobtrusive and therefore excellently handled. Costumes were, perhaps, outstanding although the staging and lighting were more than adequate. The music left little to the imagination.

In spite of a programme request that ladies remove their hats, a number of patrons omitted this courtesy to both the players and the remainder of the audience — one flimsey ornament bobbing a full twelve inches above it's wearer's hat throughout the performance.

Tax Case

that returns had not been filed for these years.

Mr. Profitt, giving evidence on his own behalf, stated that he is a married man with five children and that he lives with his father and mother on a farm owned by his father which they work together. Income tax returns have been filed by his father, Mr. John Profitt, for many years which reported the total income for the farm.

This was satisfactory to the department until last year when they asked that a joint return be filed for 1947, and this was done, Mr. Profitt said. The department then asked that he should file a separate return for the years 1943, 1944, 1945, and 1946.

He told of corresponding with the Department and visiting the income tax office in Charlottetown several times when they insisted that returns be filed to show what portion of the farm income he received and what portion his father received. Mr. Profitt said that he told them that this was impossible as "the income was never divided in practice and certainly could not be divided on paper."

He stated that over the years he and his father had taken from the proceeds of the farm what each happened to need at the time and the balance was used for expenses. There never was any formal division and he said that he told the income tax officials that. He was ready to swear to this. He said that he never, at any time refused to file a return on a basis that he could.

Under cross examination he said that no return for these years had been filed under his name.

Mr. John Profitt, father of the defendant, corroborated his son's evidence.

Hinton remarked [illegible] was not a routine case, that similar cases are before his court regularly. He suggested a lengthy adjournment and possibly some agreement might be reached between the department and the defendant.

The case was then adjourned for a week with the understanding that a further adjournment would be granted. —S.

Thorp yesterday dared Russia to allow an investigating group to go behind the iron curtain to check the charges. It was apparent from the speeches of Russian and East European delegates that no such probe would be allowed.

Noting that the "evil of forced labor camps" is the "greatest crime" against liberty, Mayhew declared that Britain considers that the United Nations should do what "is possible to cause its abolition."

Margolin estimated that a minimum of 10,000,000 persons were in Russian concentration camps inside the Soviet Union. He said deaths in these camps run into the hundreds of thousands every year.

terms of union, adopted by the Commons last week.

Adjourned Until Today

After the divisions the debate on the address was adjourned until tomorrow by Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, former Prime Minister and a man who had much to do with the initial negotiations on the terms of union. He said he would not like to see the debate end without saying a few words on the all-important question of Newfoundland's union with Canada.

The sub-amendment called for deferment of union until consent had been given by the Provinces.

Mr. Lacroix, the mover, sometimes finds himself at odds with the Government on certain issues.

It drew support from Jean Francois Pouliot (IND L—Temiscouata), Solon Low, Social Credit leader, John Blackmore (S C — Lethbridge), Victor Quelch (S C — Acadia), Rev. E. G. Hansell (SC—MacLeod), J. A. Marshall (SC—Camrose); Robert Fair (SC—Battle River); Walter Kuhl (SC—Jasper-Edson), Frederic Dorion (IND—Charlevoix-Saguenay), and J. I. Hamel (BP—St. Maurice Lefleche).

The sub-amendment was opposed by the Liberal, Progressive Conservative and C. C. F. Parties. The division on it was called for by the Liberal and C. C. F. members.

There was derisive laughter from Liberal and C.C.F. benches when Mr. Drew and his supporters rose to vote against the sub-amendment.

Mr. Hamel, Mr. Dorion, the Social Credit members and the Progressive Conservatives voted for Mr. Drew's amendment. The Liberals and C. C. F. members voted against it. Mr. Pouliot voted with the Liberals, but Mr. Lacroix abstained from voting.

Mr. Drew made no move to explain the move taken by his party on the sub-amendment. The Party's last speaker before the divisions was E. D. Fulton from Kamloops in British Columbia.

Mr. Fulton said the party had voted last week in favor of Newfoundland becoming a 10th Province. Now it was asking that the existing Provinces be consulted on the constitutional change necessary to provide for Newfoundland's admission.

He said his party was not suggesting that the Provinces be consulted on the merits of Newfoundland's admission, but it was suggested that the Provinces be consulted on a proposed amendment to the constitution.

Mr. Lacroix said the Progressive Conservative amendment was "vague" and "hypocritical." It mentioned that there should be "satisfactory consultations" with the Provinces but did not indicate who would decide if the consultations were satisfactory.

Ralph Maybank (L — Winnipeg South Centre) charged that the Progressive Conservatives were trying to interject the veto of the United Nations Security Council into the Canadian system. What they were asking was that a Province have the right to veto a constitutional change.

The Opposition Party's proposition either was "patently insincere or crazy," said Mr. Maybank. The Party, he added, was ready to give Premier Duplessis of Quebec the right of veto in return for his support.

Other Speakers

Other speakers at the night session included J.A. Dion (L—Lake St. John-Roberval); Elphege Marier (L — Montreal-Jacques Cartier); Angus MacInnis (CCF—Vancouver East); Clarie Gillis (CCF — Cape Breton South); Mr. Low and Mr. Pouliot.

Earlier, spokesmen for the Government and the official Opposition disagreed sharply on the issue of whether the Provinces should be consulted before Newfoundland is admitted to confederation.

External Affairs Minister Pearson reiterated earlier the Government's view that consultation with the Provinces on Newfoundland is not necessary because no constitutional change is being made.

John T. Hackett (PC — Stanstead) took the opposite view and charged that the Government is trying to "rape the constitution."

Decide Train Deaths Are Double Suicide

MONTREAL, Feb. 15 — (CP)— A coroner's jury today took one minute to decide that the deaths of a Toronto man and woman in a railway sleeping car were double suicide by shooting.

The story of the suicide pact of Earl Fauman, 39-year-old lawyer, and Mrs. Martha Leona Kelly, 28-year-old registered nurse, both of Toronto, was pieced together by Dr. Rosario Fontaine, medico-legal expert, and other witnesses at an inquest lasting little more than an hour.

The two were found dead in compartment H of car 3.8 when the overnight train reached Windsor Station in Montreal yesterday from Toronto. Each was shot through the mouth, the bullets penetrating the brain and causing multiple skull fractures.

Coroner Richard L. Duckett in his brief remarks to the jury stressed the evidence of Dr. Fontaine that the .38-calibre revolver used had to be placed in the open mouth of each of the two persons and neither showed any teeth fractures.

Both Fauman and Mrs. Kelly were married and had families. Mrs. Kelly was the wife of an inspector of the Ontario Provincial Police.

The bodies were found in the compartment bed. In addition to the .36-calibre revolver, the type used by Ontario police, a 32-calibre Savage revolver was found, unfired. There were no signs of disorder or violence in the compartment.

Christmas Business Best On Record

OTTAWA, Feb. 15 — (CP) — Cash registers in Canada's department stores rang up the biggest Christmas business on record and helped boost total sales for 1948 over the $800,000,000 mark.

The Bureau of Statistics reported today that Christmas shoppers plunged heavily for food, footwear, clothing, household appliances and hardware to bring December sales up to $109,608,000 compared with $93,159,000 in the corresponding month of 1947.

Total sales for the year were $804,542,000 compared with $706,845,000 in 1947.

All sections of the country shared in the year's improved business but the western Provinces showed bigger gains than Eastern Canada.

Gains in 1948 over the previous year ranged in the east from 8.6 per cent for Quebec to 15 per cent for the Maritime Provinces. In the west gains varied from Manitoba's 12.2 per cent to 20.4 in Alberta.

Only group of items to fall below 1947 sales were radios musical instruments and supplies, down 2.2 per cent for a total of $12,730,000.

Sales of food and kindred products increased 21.1 per cent to $65,311,000. Sales of women's and children's apparel rose 17.4 per cent to $191,961,000. men's and boy's clothing and furnishings 13.5 per cent to $90,567,000, and shoes and other footwear 10.5 per cent to $54,099,000.

Migratory Birds Kept In Storage

The attention of sportsmen who were successful in obtaining ducks or geese by legal hunting last fall is drawn to the requirements of Section 10 of the Migratory Bird Regulations. This section, headed "Possession in Close Season," governs the time limit for keeping legally-killed birds after the end of the open season. The limit varies in different parts of the country.

In Prince Edward Island, it is illegal to have migratory game birds in one's possession (whether in one's own home, in a cold-storage locker, or elsewhere) after January 31, 1949.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who are charged with enforcement of the Migratory Bird Regulations, are empowered to examine cold storage lockers in which they suspect that migratory game birds are unlawfully kept and to seize migratory birds found in these lockers after the expiration of the time limit for possession. Owners of such birds are liable to prosecution. During 1948 a number of locker-owners throughout Canada were prosecuted for illegal possession and substantial fines were imposed.

In many of these cases the owners of the birds claimed that they had forgotten that they still had some of their bag of ducks and geese in cold storage. The realization that they had broken the law appeared to come as an unpleasant surprise to nearly all of the locker-owners prosecuted.

Sportsmen who put any of their waterfowl into cold storage last fall will therefore be well advised to check up on the contents of their lockers, and to make sure that any wild ducks or geese have fulfilled their destiny by way of the oven and the table.

Discusses U.S. Senate Views On Atlantic Pact

(Editor's note: This column is presented as an indication of American opinion on major world events.)

By J. M. Roberts, Jr.

Associated Press News Analyst

There appears to be some feeling in the United States Senate that the State Department wants to go too far in committing the United States to war if the Western Allies are attacked.

The State Department is reported to feel that it is ably protecting the United States' independence of decision under the proposed Atlantic pact, and that any important watering down of its contemplated wording will rob it of effectiveness.

In this the Department is joined by the European press, although the debate involving Senators Forest Donnell, Tom Connally and Arthur Vandenberg would seem, to one who has not seen the wording of the pact, to have been largely hypothetical.

In effect, Donnell asked if the pact would contain a "moral" obligation for an automatic declaration of war, which he said would be just as binding upon Congress as a legal obligation. Vandenberg and Connally said they didn't think so and on questioning said they would not approve if it did.

This produced "Senate Bans War Pledge" headlines abroad, and expressions of fear that the United States did not intend to make a really effective pact.

There does seem to be some difference between the State Department and the Senate over the wording of the pact. But both sides disclaim any difference over objectives.

Two objectives must be approached simultaneously:

1. To get a pact which will truly represent the determination of the United States to react quickly against any aggression in Europe.

2. Yet still leave the United States free to decide by its own constitutional methods, in the light of conditions which may obtain at the time, just what the nature and timing of that reaction would be.

The Rio pact between the Western Hemisphere countries has been held up repeatedly as the model. Under it, every country agrees to consider an attack on any other country as an attack against itself. But each specifically reserves the right to decide, in the course of that consideration, its own form of reaction.

In the long-term life of a treaty such as the Atlantic pact many unforeseen circumstances could arise. The United States has traditionally refused to get in a position where, as someone put it, "Europe can declare war and leave us to fight it."

That attitude still remains. The United States is wary of getting into a position where she might be called on to take active sides in case a non-member Sweden might get into a dispute with member Norway. Nor would the United States seem called on to plunge into just any war which some European coalition might conceivably decide to launch against Russia.

Foreign dispatches indicate that European officialdom is well aware of these reservations in American policy and the reasons. If the Senate debate is upsetting to Europeans generally — a dash of cold water, as dispatches describe it — then one of the faults lies in these officials who have not made the United States position clear to their countrymen.

Zion Men's Ass'n Meets

The members of Zion Church Men's Association heard an inspiring address by Rev. T. H. B. Somers at their regular meeting last night. Mr. Somers entitled his address "Five Stalwarts of the Early Scottish Church." Tracing the history of Christianity in the British Isles as far back as the third century the speaker went on to elaborate on the work of the early Christian missionaries. He dealt in turn with the work of St. Ninian, 360 to 432 A.D.; St Patrick, 386 to 462, St. Columba, 521 to 597, St. Kentigern, 418 to 604, and St. Aidan, 602 to 651.

Previous to Mr. Somers address reports were heard from members of the Burns Concert committee and the executive in charge with the task of investigating ways and means of assisting in the Scout and Guide work of the church. It was also decided to sponsor a Burns Concert annually.

A delicious supper was served by the Ladies Auxiliary and entertainment included a solo by Mr. Malcolm MacKinnon.

Sees Need For Sex Education In Germany

By George Boultwood

HAMBURG, Feb. 15 —(AP) — Young German women badly need sex education, an eminent woman doctor has decided after a tour of Germany.

Dr. Marie Stopes, author of sex education books, gave her impressions in the British Zone Review, official magazine of the British Control Commission.

She was told that there were three times as many young women of marriageable age as corresponding young men.

"To those who have social welfare at heart," she wrote, "it must be a matter of grave concern that girls, feeling the remoteness of their hope of normal marriage, incline to irregular associations with older or married men. Also, the number of such girls in Germany must be a definite temptation to our young soldiers."

The immoral teachings of the Nazis are still a danger, she found. They taught that any woman who became the mother of a child, even illegitimate, was doing a service to the state and was not to be condemned socially.

"Serious sex teaching such as is available in Great Britain and America was prohibited, so that the young are left what we would consider almost entirely uninstructed on normal lines in a situation of particular difficulty.

"I hope responsible efforts will be made to supply soberly stated, scientifically accurate instruction dealing with all aspects of normal sex life, not stressing the abnormal, and that such teaching will be made available for all young people in Germany . . ."

ISRAEL EXPECTS

Israel. That means she will increase her population by one-third in a year," Dr. Goldstein said.

"We will ask governments, starting with the United States, for loans. In any case governments should increase their grants to international relief organizations so that the International Refugees Organization can increase its resettlement program thrughout the world, including Israel.

Israel is accepting the burden of allowing all these immigrants because it is the Jewish national home. But the world should appreciate her problem."

Dr Goldstein said that 26,000 to 30,000 immigrants a month were entering Israel at present. Of these, 10,000 Jews had come from camps in Europe, 4,500 from Moslem countries, and a great number were from Bulgaria.
