Special Session Of Supreme Court Slated For April

There will be a special session of the Supreme Court at Summerside, it was learned over the weekend. It is scheduled to open April 6.

Application for the session was made last week by Attorney General Thane A. Campbell to Mr. Justice A.C. Saunders.

This procedure is possible under an Amendment to the Judicature Act, passed in 1941.

Although the docket was not available it was understood that conspiracy cases against Summerside men would be tried. Three accused were committed to the Supreme Court recently while a new trial was ordered for two more after a jury disagreed at their trial earlier in the year.

S'Side Soldier Is Wounded

Sgt. Harry Bishop of Summerside has been "wounded in action, not serious", his wife was informed over the week-end.

The message did not give the scene of the action in which Sgt. Bishop was wounded but he has been serving in North Africa since about Christmas and it is believed he is still there.

Sgt. Bishop is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Elias Bishop of Summerside. He enlisted with the Prince Edward Island Highlanders at the outbreak of war but later transferred to the North Nova Scotia Highlanders and went overseas in 1941.

our midst whether they come from ancient aristocracy or modern plutocracy or the ordinary type of pub crawler."

Envisaging possible post-war councils of European and Asiatic governments, Mr. Churchill voiced hope for an integrated Europe still retaining "individual characteristics and traditions of many of its ancient and historic races."

This, the prime minister said, he believed would be "found to harmonize with the high, permanent interests of Britain, the United States and Russia."

Hope for Unity

"We must hope and pray," he said, "that the unity of the three leading victorious powers will be worthy of their supreme responsibility, and that they will think not only of their own welfare, but of the welfare and future of all.

It would be "foolish at this stage," Mr. Churchill said, to try to prescribe details or to argue about frontiers "while the war even in the west has not yet reached its full height, while the struggle with U-boats is still raging and when the war in the east is only in its first phase."

After the European end of the Axis is defeated, Mr. Churchill declared, Japan's turn will come in short order.

"That will be our first and supreme task and nothing must lure us from it," Mr. Churchill added.

Grand Climax

"Nevertheless it is my opinion that the moment when Hitler is beaten and Germany and Italy are prostrate will mark the grand climax of the war, and that will be the time to make a new declaration upon the task before us. We and our allies will have accomplished one great task.

"Nazi tyranny and Prussian militarism, which threatened to engulf the whole world and against which we stood alone for a fateful year—these curses will have been swept from the face of the earth."

Partial Demobilization Plans

While a great number of United States as well as British soldiers will be needed to carry on the war against Japan, Mr. Churchill said "there will certainly be a partial demobilization following on the defeat of Hitler and this will raise the most difficult and intricate problems and we are taking care in our agreements to avoid the mistakes which were so freely committed last time."

Discussing the organization of the British Commonwealth, the United States and Soviet Russia, into a world bloc, Mr. Churchill outlined problems and adjustments which lie ahead.

"One can imagine that under a world institution embodying or representing the United Nations and some day all the nations, there should come into being a council of Europe and a council of Asia," he said.

An effort must be made, Mr Churchill continued, to make the European council into an effective League of Nations "with all the strongest forces concerned woven into its texture with a high court to adjust disputes and with forces national or international or both held ready to enforce these decisions and prevent renewed aggression and preparation of future wars."

The salient features of the post-war Britain that Mr. Churchill outlined for his people who have suffered war for 3½ years were:—

Four-year plan

A four-years plan, covering five or six "large measures of practical character" fitting together into a general scheme. This plan would require long study, and would be approved by the people or their representatives.

National compulsory insurance for all classes, for all purposes from the cradle to the grave.

This new Britain "cannot afford to have idle people. Idlers at the top make idlers at the bottom. No one must stand aside in his working prime to pursue "a life of selfish pleasure," and "we cannot have a band of drones in our midst.

British agriculture must grow a larger portion of Britain's food at home, Mr. Churchill said, and "I hope to see a vigorous revival of healthy village life" on the basis of higher wages, improved transportation, extension of the cinema, and even television.

A national health service must be established "on broad and solid foundations," and Britain's birth rate must be encouraged.

THE KERK OF S. JAMES

The special preacher yesterday morning was the Rev'd Dr. J. G. Inkster of Toronto, Secretary of The Foundation Fund of The General Assembly. In the evening the Minister delivered the third in a series of sermons on the Life and Work of Nehemiah, and said, "You will note the point of time at which Nehemiah's workers were discouraged. We learn that it was at the middle of the work. It is then that the heart often sinks and the glow is gone. It is then that doggedness is needed. It is then that the worker must have faith in God. It is so in the gradual unrolling of our lives. In the building up of life, as in the building of that old Jerusalem there are perils in the middle period which to forget, is folly. The enthusiasm of youth is gone, and with it idealism is apt to go Men settle down, they cling to their routine, they have found their life-work and are busy at it. And while this is good and brings a quiet happiness to which youth is so often a stranger. It has dangers peculiarly its own. In walking, as every walker knows, it is the long straight road that tires. There is no surprise in it, no unexpectedness, no sudden view, no dip into the glen. And for most people the middle part of life is the level and often the dusty part, where the feet are very prone to weary. Do you remember how the Psalmist speaks of the destruction that wasteth at noonday. There is an arrow that flieth in the dark; there is a destruction that wasteth at noonday. A poet always thinks in pictures, and in that picture of the inspired poet you see the perils of the middle aged. The loss of faith in man, which is but a step to the loss of faith in God, the silent, steady hardening of the heart, the decay of vision till the eyes are holden; this, with a tendency to grosser sins and an increasing emphasis on money, is the destruction that wasteth at noonday."

Describes Work Of Seamen's Missions

At St. Paul's Church on Sunday morning the service was attended in a body by the men of H.M.C.S. "Queen Charlotte."

The sermon was delivered by Rev. F.W. Weaver, Chaplain of The "Flying Angel" Seamen's Mission in Halifax, N.S.

Mr. Weaver chose his text from Rev. 14, v.v. 6 and 7. "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to Him, for the hour of His judgment is come: and worship Him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters."

The speaker went on to give a short account of the founding of this Mission, which has been at work now for over one hundred years in all the great ports of the world, and which had been established in Halifax only a few months ago.

Over one hundred years ago a little lad stood with his father, a clergyman, on the shore of Plymouth Sound watching the large number of ships which were there at the time. The boy turned to his father, and said "Father, where do all the seamen go to church?" This question caused the father much thought, which later deepened into concern, for he knew that little or nothing was done, either spiritually or materially to help the seamen. So, in the end, Rev. John Astley gave up his good living and devoted his life to establishing the Flying Angel Missions for Seamen.

The policy of these Missions is to take the church to the Merchant Navy, following the example of the founder, who visited the vessels, where he went into the living quarters of the sailors and spoke to them as comrade to comrade, giving them all help he could, together with advice to clear up their troubles and perplexities, and also spiritual comfort, where it was required.

On the ships, Mr. Weaver said, you meet the men in their own sphere, sit with them in their fo'c'sle, receive their confidences, and extend the hand of fellowship to them. The thing they now most need is this human companionship and friendship. At this point the speaker extended a cordial invitation to the men of H.M. C. S. "Queen Charlotte," as to all men of the Royal Navy and Merchant Navy, to make the house with the "Flying Angel" sign their home. There they would receive friendship, advice, fellowship and, if they wished it, spiritual help. They would not be asked if they were saved, urged to sing hymns, or preached to; though of course if they wished, they could attend religious services when these are held, and receive the Holy Communion.

Christ must be presented through the hand of human fellowship. He wants us to go forth and take His life, His word, His actions to the people. Christ is our father and friend if we will have Him so.

Vancouver Mission

Mr. Weaver went on to speak of the Mission in Vancouver which is now 60 years old, and the one in Shanghai, which, up to the time of its destruction by enemy action in the present war with Japan was of a like age. Mr. Weaver had ministered here, and he told how the little church was always crowded for Sunday morning service, for the mission launch used to collect the seamen who wanted to come from the vessels anchored in the port. The last service to be held in their church was the baptism of a boy of 17 years of age who was later killed in action. A few days afterwards, the church was lost to the enemy, who desecrated it, breaking the altar and looting the communion vessels. But the work of that little church still abides in the hearts of those who worshipped there, and its influence lives on in them.

Think of the boys on our merchant ships—and ever remember them in your prayers. Think of the mother at home who gets a cable: "Your son is dangerously ill" from some far port. But those of the Flying Angel Missions are there to visit and to help these boys as they lie in hospital. These are the things we are proud to do; the things we feel God has called us to do. We write home to these boys' people, and tell them how they are getting on. And sometimes it is the sad duty of the Chaplain to write home and break the news that their loved one has passed to his rest.

Here Mr. Weaver told how he had lately received a letter from a little girl in England, only twelve years old, thanking Mrs. Weaver and himself for their kindness to her daddy while he was ill in Halifax. She thanked them on behalf of her mother and big sister, too. He told, too, how it was often their sad task to break the news to seamen, when their families in England were killed by enemy bombings, and to extend the hand of comfort to them in their sorrow.

"Such are the necessities we serve and the work we do," the speaker said in closing. "We ask your continued support, your help and, above all, your prayers, to sustain us and keep us worthy of the task we serve."

ZION CHURCH

The Rev. John Gibson Inkster, D.D., Minister Emeritus of Knox Presbyterian Church, Toronto, was the guest preacher at Zion Church last evening.

Basing his sermon on the text, Matthew 16:18 "Upon this Rock I will build my Church and the gates of Hell shall not prevail against it," the minister delivered a forceful and eloquent message to a large and enthusiastic congregation. Dr. Inkster in answer to the question, "What is the Church?" stated that it was not a mere worldly organ but rather a divine organism, eternal in its outlook. He urged his hearers to find a definite place within the Church as the only sound place of safety in this world.

He then discussed the work of the church and said that while the church was interested in all matters of reform that its primary function was that of evangelism, the taking of the gospel to the whole world. In this work every Christian should be engaged.

To do this task, the church must have a sound home base, both spiritually and financially. He then told of a plan of the Presbyterian Church in Canada to ask its membership for half a million dollars for the liquidation of its present indebtedness and the placing of the church on a strong financial basis so that it may undertake its share in the great work that will confront the church in the post-war world.

An approved plan was then laid before the congregation for the accomplishment of this purpose.

Dr. Inkster is the secretary of the new foundation fund of the church and plans to travel from coast to coast in the interests of this scheme.

The minister of the congregation Rev. G. Carlyle Webster conducted the order of worship and the choir under the direction of Mrs. Edwin Johnstone, organist of the church, sang acceptably the anthem "Seek Ye the Lord," the solo part being taken by Mr. Harry Craswell.

HITLER ADMITS

Hitler's speech was uninspired in tone and spoken quickly and mechanically as though from a written text.

No applause or cheering was heard.

It was Hitler's first address made in person since last Nov. 8 when he spoke to Nazi stalwarts at the Loewenbrau beer cellar in Munich.

Denies Rumors

A transocean radio commentator in Berlin left-handedly denied all rumors that Hitler has been shelved by the German army by saying he spoke "not as leader of the German people but as supreme commander of the German armed forces."

Hitler explained his absence from the public platform and postponement of Heroes' Day from a week ago today by saying "with a clear conscience I am able to leave my work, to which I was tied down for months."

"Thanks to the sacrifices and heroism of our soldiers on the eastern front we have succeeded in overcoming the crisis definitely into which our army had been plunged undeservedly," he said. "Our front has been stabilized and we have taken measures which will secure in the months ahead of us success until final victory is achieved."

Consequently, he declared, he was lifting the months-long ban on leaves for soldiers from the army.

Several passages were devoted to the peril in which the German armies found themselves on the eastern front.

AMERICANS ADVANCE

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, March 21.(AP)—United States artillery, tanks and infantry from the command of Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton have routed Italian forces from strategic heights overlooking Sened, occupied that railroad station 25 miles beyond Gafsa and pushed on toward Maknassy, another 20 miles to the East, field dispatches said today.

This advance was by the northern most of two columns striking from Gafsa toward the Axis supply corridor and the Gulf of Gabes. It came as allied air forces opened the most intensive offensive of the African campaign against Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's army in Southern Tunisia.

French Conference In No. Africa To Be Held Soon

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

ALGIERS, March 21 — (AP) — Northwest Africa is preparing for the arrival of Gen. Charles De Gaulle and Georges Catroux of the Fighting French and for the difficult task of finding a formula under which the various elements of anti-Axis French, now negotiating on a thin line of liaison, can be brought to full unity.

Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, as head of the French military and civil establishment in North and West Africa, continues in the No. 1 position and it does not seem likely that he will be displaced.

French Guiana officials and the French Minister to Finland have rallied to Giraud in the last week.

(De Gaulle's Fighting French National committee in London announced Saturday that French Guiana, in joining the Allies, had lined up with De Gaulle and that this announcement "superseded" previous reports that Guiana had pledged allegiance to Giraud. In addition the Fighting French announced the appointment of a new governor for Guiana and an interim administrator to serve until the new chief arrives at Cayenne from the Cameroons in Equatorial Africa. Previous to the De Gaulle announcement, the Giraud regime in Africa had made its own arrangements for the administration of Guiana.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our father Alexander Robbins of Bedeque who died March 22nd, 1940 and
Mother, Mrs. Alexander Robbins who died March 25th, 1941.
Oh happy hours we once enjoyed
How sweet their memory still
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.
Their loving daughters, Hattie and Ella.
