A RELIGIOUS REVIVAL IN TURKEY.

A revival of religion, by which is meant the Mohammedan religion, has come to Turkey along with the expulsion of the late Sultan, the reform in Government and the creation of a Parliament. In the great Mosque of St. Sophia at Constantinople strong and earnest preachers are preaching and their sermons are printed from week to week in the Turkish newspapers, just as Spurgeon's sermons were reproduced in his time in the press of London. These services are largely attended, and the crowds in attendance are being powerfully impressed.

From the published reports we get some knowledge of the moral appeal which these revival preachers are making to the people. They tell of the ruin which despotism, intolerance and bigotry have wrought in Turkey, proclaim popular rights, civil and religious liberty, and call for honesty, justice, morality in the state and a revival of religious faith among the people. One great preacher, Ahmed N'Aim Effendi, deprecates the decay of preaching under the late despotic regime, and "in the name of religion, in the name of science, in the name of patriotism and national honor" calls for better things. He goes on: "What is a preacher? He is the refiner of the nation; he is the teacher of moral heroism; he is the communicator of knowledge; he is the inheritor of the duty of prophecy. A preacher must be a man of learning; he must know the divine injunctions and prohibitions, the obligations of canon law and the orthodox traditions of the Prophet. A preacher must put into practice his knowledge, and he must be so rigorous in self-discipline as to be an example to his congregation. There is no influence in the words of a preacher whose conduct contradicts his words, whose eyes are blindfolded by selfish gain, and who is eagerly clasping the vanities of the world. If his heart does not grieve when he utters his warnings, his words can produce no more than a temporary awakening among his hearers. Such preachers, we regret to confess, are so rare among us that we may say they do not exist. The fault and even the crime belongs to the nation which leaves its clergy hungry and obliges a class, which should be the nation's fire-runners and its prophets, to beg for a living. At last the time for putting an end to this state of affairs has come."

Another of the revival preachers in the great Mosque gives us this passage: "There are three things whose retribution does not wait for eternity, but comes in this world. First, deceit and hypocrisy. Second, injustice and violence. Third, the betrayal of a trust. Everything, everything, material and spiritual, the entire strength of the Mohammedan Commonwealth, is well-nigh ruined. To-day our hope of reconstruction is in the hope of unity. We must deal with non-Moslems as with brothers, because we are all the sons of one fatherland."

Here is another passage from the same discourse which may help us to realize the new heaven that is working so powerfully and hopefully among the people of New Turkey at the present time:

"Let us walk with perfect unity and sincerity in this Upright Highway, in this royal road of guidance which opens up before us. Let us learn what Mohammedanism is and what manhood is. In an epoch when all the inhabitants of the earth are advancing into new realms of science, in a period when all cities and all nations are going through an evolution toward a final ideal, let us free our lives from this dark veil of ignorance. Let us deliver our minds from obstinacy and bigotry. Let us see the wonderful achievements in arts and industries, and let us observe the immense strides which have been taken in the royal path of science. For we must confess that we are very far behind. Let us think of the purpose of our life, there is no use in striving among ourselves. Let us henceforth clasp hand to hand and with perfect unity let us strive for advancement."

THE FIRST AERIAL PASSENGER LINE. The River Rhine, one of the famous rivers of the world, rises in the mountains of Switzerland, flows westward through Lake Constance to Basel in Alsace, then bends at right angles northward through the western part of Germany on its way to the North Sea. The Rhine Valley is famous alike for its beauty and historic associations. It now derives new fame from being the route of the first aerial passenger line. Count Zeppelin, now over seventy years of age, owner, master, engineer and helmsman of the airship Deutschland, has established this great enterprise. The Deutschland is elegantly and luxuriously fitted up, with mahogany seats upholstered for comfort, from which passengers look out through glass upon the fair scene below. No observation cars on railways, or decks of steamers afford such a view. The airship travels at fair railway speed—30 to 44 miles an hour. Such a trip was never before offered to passengers—from Lake Constance in the extreme south on the border of Switzerland, to Dusseldorf in the far northwest of Germany, 300 miles in nine hours. The fare is high—$50 first class and $25 second class, but is surely well worth the money, which is 8 to 16 cents per mile. There is no danger of falling, as the big dirigible airship will float aloft even if the machinery becomes disabled, and can descend gently to the earth when required.

It showed scant regard for the Canadian Sabbath that the great aviation meeting near Montreal began on that day. The three flights made were by Count de Lesseps and two Americans, Walter Broome and Ralph Johnson.

The Prohibition case against the Steward of the Charlottetown Club, which has been the centre of so much interest in the city and throughout the Province, was yesterday morning adjourned for a week to secure, if possible, the attendance of an alleged important witness from Pinette.

"Far flashed the red artillery" in the olden times of battle. Smoke by day and flame by night revealed the location of a battery in action. Smokeless powder changed that so far as day-lighting is concerned. Now an English inventor has discovered a flame-killer. A white crystalline powder wrapped in cigarette paper and attached to the cartridge does the trick.

Canada has long had a considerable number of Knights, entitled to have "Sir" written before their names. Of these there are two of the Order of the Bath, four Knights Grand Cross and nineteen Knights Commanders of St. Michael and St. George, three Knights Grand Cross of the Royal Victorian Order and twenty-two Knight Bachelors. The recently announced King's birthday honors add three to the number of Knight Bachelors, making twenty-five of this class. The new Knights are Sir Byron Walker, Sir George W. Ross and Sir Henry N. Bates. So there are some fifty-three Canadian Sirs, without mentioning six Barons, one Baroness and seven Baronets who are also Sirs, and whose titles, unlike those of mere Knights are hereditary. Here we have in all two thirds of a hundred titular distinctions derived from Royal authority, in this democratic Dominion of ours. And the list is expanding. It is also in the main list of well-earned distinctions.

Uncle Sam has followed Canada forty years after by providing postal savings banks. President Taft is said to have "forced" the bill through the Senate. Under the new law each post office in the country becomes a possible savings bank. Sums from one dollar to $500 will be received, the latter sum being the limit allowed at credit of any one depositor. But 2 1/2 per cent. is a very low rate of interest, and the Government may designate as few, or as many post offices as it pleases to receive savings.

Following the revelations in the Marine Department last year, it is both surprising and rather alarming to learn of the defalcations and graft in the Printing Department at Ottawa. Successive increases of pay seem not to have made the civil service more honest, but the reverse. No doubt the majority of civil servants at the capital are honest, but on successful grafter, if not caught and punished, like a rotten apple in a barrel of fruit, may infect and corrupt many more. That is what seems to have been in progress in more than one of the public departments. Surely the time has come for correcting such rascality with an iron hand.

It is stated that there are now in this Province 34 mail routes or which rural delivery has been established, and along which some 50 boxes have been set up at farmers road-gates. The boxes and the service give excellent satisfaction, and are proving a great boon to the sections of the country served by them. Rural delivery has grown steadily in favor since the beginning was made in the fall of 1908. Residents along a rural delivery route pay $3 for the first cost of a box and fittings, and are required to provide a suitable post and attach the box thereto. Thereafter the mail driver deposits the incoming letters and papers and takes the outgoing mail matter as he passes. The position of the box indicates whether it contains mail matter or not. No wonder the farmers want the rural delivery and value it when they have it.
