The Spramoter Co. manufacture an iron pump with brass working parts and we can sell you this pump with iron row sprayer, barrel and equipment for spraying 4 rows of potatoes for $25.00. SANDRA THE JEALOUS By Jane Phelps

"A THRILL WITH THOUGHTS OF WHAT THE FUTURE HELD" CHAPTER VII

Everett was very rich--so father said. He had large business interests, which required a great deal of attention. He also said that I was a very lucky girl to marry a man who could care so well for me should anything happen to him. I thought so too. And while I had none of that feeling of intense love, I had read about, for my intended husband, I was wildly excited, a thrill with thoughts of what the future held for me. Everett wrote often, and constantly sent me presents. Lovely things, a ring, a pair of bracelets, and a dull gold locket set in diamonds with a picture of himself inside. All appropriate presents for a young girl. When I showed the locket to Rose she said: "He doesn't love himself, does he? putting himself in a diamond frame." I didn't let it make me angry. I felt sure Rose was jealous. "Why don't you send him one of yours for his watch case. I'll bet he's got the first in there yet." When Rose said that I did get angry, and cried. She was awfully sorry, but that didn't make me stop thinking she might be right. And such thoughts made me awfully unhappy, sometimes made me almost wish I wasn't to marry Everett until I too had been married before. Yet I hardly understood how I could accomplish that. But if I had also loved someone first it would have seemed more fair. I did have my picture taken and sent it to Everett. I told him I thought he might like to put it in his watch. He thanked me very nicely, but said it did not do me justice, and that he would have one taken by a good photographer after we were married. I felt awfully chagrined, and so glad I had not told Rose I had had it taken. It was the first thing I ever had given him, and he had not been pleased with it. Perhaps it wasn't very good. I imagine our country photographer was not a finished artist, but I couldn't help wishing he had said he was pleased with it. But I hadn't much time for worry over anything. It was all hurry and bustle until October. The time fairly flew. Rose came over every day and helped mother and me sew. I don't know what I should have done without her, but all the time I had it in my mind to make it up to her after I was married. Mother hadn't acted real happy over my marrying Everett any of the time. I often caught her looking at me sadly, once or twice with tears in her eyes. Then often her eyes were red in the morning. I was sure she had been crying, although she denied it. But mother never objected to anything father thought the best thing to do for us, so she said very little I learned long afterwards that she was afraid because of his heart trouble. I hope you will be a very happy wife, dear," she said one day when we were alone. "You will have to constantly remember that Mr. Graham is much older than you are, that his views of life are formed, that he has had experience. He may be unused to young girls, and at times make things rather difficult for you. But love can smooth away all difficulties. Mother sighed a little when she finished. She would have been even more disturbed had she known just how difficult things were to be for me; just how hard my being young and inexperienced was to make my life. "Of course you will be happy," I answered her gaily, reassuring myself and her at the same time. "Everett must love me very dearly, even if he isn't very demonstrative. He didn't have to ask me to marry him mother, you know. He did it because he wanted me." "I trust it is for the best," was all the answer mother made, but that night I heard her talking to father long after they had gone to bed, and when they supposed I was asleep. I couldn't bear what they said, but I was sure they were talking of me--my future. I smiled confidently as I lay wide eyed in the dark. Dear mother was so foolish to worry about me. Of course I was going to be happy. Yet I couldn't help a wish that Everett would make a little more fuss over me. Tomorrow--Rose doubts Sandra's Love for Everett.

DOMINION TIRES

Why "Nobby Tread"? The Aristocrats of The Road

SHABBY shoes make a man look shabby, no matter how stylish the rest of his attire may be. Tires are the shoes of your car. If the tires are shabby, the appearance of the entire car is affected. "NOBBY TREAD" TIRES always look good, and make the car look good, even after they have been run for thousands of miles. Motorists term "NOBBY TREADS" the Aristocrats of the Road. Their construction insures users--who are willing to pay the first cost--obtaining the lowest final cost per mile as well as practical freedom from punctures and blowouts. If you consider cost per mile, easy riding and freedom from ordinary tire troubles, to out-weight first cost--you will equip your car with "NOBBY TREAD" tires. "NOBBY TREADS" are made in all popular sizes--and you can get DOMINION INNER TUBES to insure perfectly balanced tires. DOMINION TIRES and ACCESSORIES are distributed through DOMINION RUBBER SYSTEM BRANCHES and sold by the Best Dealers throughout Canada. 189
