Guests Bar Bride From Her Wedding

LONDON, July 7—The spectacle of a society bride vainly attempting admission to fashionable St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, through a crush of well wishers occurred Thursday when Lady Patricia Moore, only daughter of the Earl and Countess of Drogheda, was married to Sir Paul Latham, Conservative M. P. for Scarborough and Whitby.

The bride arriving a quarter of an hour before the ceremony was due found not only the church filled with a thousand guests, but queues of other guests lined four deep outside the closed doors. Her car was sent to drive around Parliament Square while the ushers, at their wits' end, with tactful aid of the police, induced those outside to line the path to the main door, forming a bridal guard of honor.

As soon as the bride with the Earl of Drogheda entered the doors were closed again and while the ceremony was under way well-known society women continued knocking imperiously at the doors, their arguments and clamorings rising at times above the voice of the Bishop of London, who was conducting the service.

The bride, although only 21 years of age, has had a wide share of adventure. Her husband is only 28 years of age, though he was first elected a member of the London County Council five years ago, and entered the House of Commons in 1931.

Patricia travelled last year with a girl friend on a cargo vessel to Morocco, paying $30 fare. A few months later she was shown in a racing film taken in Ireland. She is an expert motorist, has published a book of verse, and recently started work with a firm of booksellers in Charing Cross.

The husband brought 200 of his Yorkshire constituents to the wedding. He recently purchased Hurstmonceux Castle, one of the most beautiful and historic show places in England, where the couple will make their home.

The bride wore pearl white satin cut on simple lines, with a 15-foot train and a swathed bandeau of satin and pearls. She carried white lilies. The 10 attendants were some of the most beautiful young girls in society. They wore Renaissance frocks.

STARTLED FOWL FLY INTO CLUB KITCHEN

BISLEY CAMP, England, July 6—Marksmen at Bisley for "services week" and next week's opening of the N.R.A. meeting got a break today. A nest of partridges warmly ensconced at the 200 yard practice range was startled by an outburst of firing, and the fowl accommodatingly flew straight through the club cookhouse window.

"There is no reason than that Her Royal Highness has to rest," it was stated at her London home.

Travels Thirteen Thousand Miles To Shop in London

Miss Joy Atkinson had to travel 12,000 miles from the Australian bush, riding fifty miles on horseback, and swimming across three rivers in which there are crocodiles, before she could reach London.

"And it was worth it," she said when interviewed. She is only twenty eight and has seen so much of life in the raw that it became monotonous. Her father is a cattle rancher.

She has come to see London for the first time.

"Our farm, or station, as we call it in Australia, is a desolate stretch of country in Northern Queensland. The nearest town is Cairns, a small port 200 miles away.

"The station is larger than the whole of London. We have about 10,000 cattle.

"Our nearest neighbors are eighty miles away, but it is risky paying a social call as they might be out rounding up cattle. That means they might not be home for days on end. The nearest doctor and the nearest cinema are a hundred miles away.

Their Own Doctors

"We have learned to do our own doctoring, and as for the cinema, I take a trip of 2,000 miles to Sydney, where I have friends, if I want to see a really good show.

"Motoring? Good heavens, no. There are no roads within miles of the Atkinson station."

Miss Atkinson has been shopping in Bond-street.

"That is what I wanted to do most," she said.

Here is the endurance test Miss Atkinson had to pass before that hour in Bond-street was possible.

After riding fifty miles on horseback and dodging crocodiles in the three rivers across which he had to swim, she made a number of railway journeys in which the trains were held up for hours on end while sand was put on to slippery rails.

Other train services were suspended because the bridges were under water. Her luggage had been sent on two months in advance.

When asked what she thought of London.

"It is just what I expected it to be." was all she said.

SCHOONER ON REEF TOTALLY WRECKED

TURK'S ISLAND, Bahamas, July 7—(A.P.)—The British schooner Frederick H., in ballast from Nova Scotia to Turk's Island to pick up a cargo of salt, went aground today on the silver bank reefs and was totally wrecked. The captain and crew were saved.

Late Blight And Rot of Poatoes

(Experimental Farms Note)

Late blight and tuber rot is the most widely distributed and economically most destructive disease of the potato crop. Partly by destroying the plants before the crop has time to mature and partly by rotting the potatoes, this disease is frequently responsible for a twenty-five per cent. reduction in yield.

The name late blight is used for this disease to distinguish it from the leaf disease known as early blight and due to the fungus Alternaria solani. Early blight shows up early in the growing season as dry, brownish spots marked with several rings. Late blight appears on the leaves and stems later in the season and may be recognized in its early stages as scattered spots, very dark in colour, invariably becoming water soaked in appearance. These spots spread causing the destruction of the affected plants. Upon examination of the under surface of the leaves there will be seen a greyish-white mildew which forms a delicate ring surrounding the blighted area. This is the fruiting stage of the fungus and is composed of countless numbers of spores. These spores fall on the top of the ground and during rainy weather they are washed into the soil where they come into contact with the tubers, setting up the rot so well known at digging time and later in storage. An affected tuber at the point of infection becomes chocolate brown in colour, very soon shrinking and becoming hardened. Upon cutting into such tubers it will be seen that the flesh underlying the diseased areas is marked with rusty brown spots, a condition frequently extending around the margin and later involving the entire potato.

Late blight can be successfully combatted by spraying the potatoes with Bordeaux mixture made up of 4 pounds of copper sulphate, 4 pounds of hydrated lime (highest purity) and 40 imperial gallons of water. or full particulars as to making Bordeaux write to the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology, Charlottetown.

In attacking the late blight problem one should bear in mind that thoroughness in spraying is absolutely essential for good results. Additional points of importance are as follows:

1. Spray before blight appears.
2. Spray before it rains, giving the spray a short period for drying. It will not wash off.
3. Spray all parts of the plants above ground and maintain high pressure.

Golfer (to wife)—"If you don't stop chattering while I am playing, you will drive me clean out of my mind."

Wife (meekly)—"That wouldn't be a drive, it would only be a short putt!"

World Parley In Brief

(Canadian Press)

Leaders of the World Economic Conference today decided to suspend the meeting, probably for two months. A resolution to recess will be presented before the Steering Committee and a final plenary session will be held later in the day or on Friday.

• • • •

Certainty of the end came after delegations of Canada and other Dominions of the British Empire met privately in an effort to prevent indefinite adjournment of the Conference, and to this extent they appeared to have been successful.

• • • •

Leaders of the European gold-block and the United States agreed today the chasm between their monetary policies could not be bridged at present and that the time was unpropitious for continuing the conclave.

• • • •

Canada and the Dominions generally, also, were reported at the last more favorable than Britain towards the United States policy of price raising as a means of restoring prosperity.

• • • •

The United Kingdom was described as standing half way between the United States position and that of the European gold currency nations which hold nothing useful can be done without currency stabilization.

• • • •

President Roosevelt's statement yesterday reiterated that the United States cannot at present consent to peg the dollar and expressed the view much could be accomplished in the way of international business revival if each nation would improve internal conditions.

• • • •

The federation of British Industries Committee passed a resolution calling for an immediate Empire Economic Conference if the World Conclave fails to produce results.

• • • •

The resolution, which will be submitted to the Grand Council of the Federation for confirmation, asked that advantage be taken the presence in London of delegates from every important unit of the British Empire.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. ADA MAHAR

The death occurred at the Sanatorium, Charlottetown, on June 2, 1933, of Mrs. Ada Mahar at the early age of 54 years. Although the deceased was not in good health for upwards of one year, her death came as a shock to the community and particularly so to the bereaved family. She was attended during her illness by her beloved pastor, Rev. Father McCabe, Sturgeon, also Rev. Father Murphy, of the Holy Redeemer Church, Charlottetown, who administered to her the last rites of the Holy Catholic Church. There are left to mourn, two sons and one daughter, viz: Ernest, of St. Mary's Road; Thomas, Cardigan; Mrs. Thomas Hughes, St. Mary's Road. Funeral took place on June 5th to St. Paul's Church, Sturgeon, where Requiem High Mass was sung by Rev. Fahter McCabe, who also conducted the services at the grave. The pall bearers were Messrs. Martin McCarthy, Victor McGuigan, James McCarron, David McCarthy, John A. McGuigan, Patrick McCarron.

In the community where Mrs. Mahar resided her many friends and acquaintances will miss the kindly acts and cheerful disposition so characteristic of the departed. But in the home, a deeper sorrow exists, there with her family she was the centre of their affection and to her the joys and sorrows of the home were confided. This is the way of life seemingly, mysterious and imperfect, but when we consider the eternal, the great purposes of a Heavenly Father, we are led to say Thy Will be done. May God grant to the bereaved family His rich blessings and consolation at this time, may they realize with revived hopes that their loved one is now in that happy state, free from sickness and death with Jesus her Saviour. To the bereaved family the deep sympathy of the community is extended.

Corn Closes Strong In Grain Market

(Associated Press)

CHICAGO, July 6—Attainment of new high record prices for the season distinguished the corn market today, and contributed to give strength to wheat and other grains.

Continued damage to corn and other crops was reported. Conservatism in many quarters, however was engendered by the sharp upturns of late, both wheat and corn having risen about 12 cents a bushel from last week's lows.

Corn closed strong, 2⅛-2⅜ cents above yesterday's finish, wheat ⅝-1¼ up, oats ⅛-½ up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 11 cents.

TO ADVERTISE A BEAN

IT was suggested that to advertise the "little but mighty" bean in Stewart's old-Fashioned Baked Beans, we could build a campaign around the slogan "Eaten by the Elite" but false modesty soon knocked that brilliant idea on the head.

The Elite seemed a wee bit diffident about the publicity they would receive if they furnished photographs.

But if you're wondering why these deliciously baked beans are so popular, we suggest it is because they are
