

MOUNTBATTEN

Philip entered the Royal Navy as a cadet. His young fellow officers thought they were being "kidded" when told that he was a prince.

He won respect as a good sailor and received the King's Dirk as the best cadet of his term at Dartmouth. In recent months he has been a naval instructor.

Philip long has shown an interest in Britain's domestic affairs. If some day the Princess Elizabeth assumes the throne, he will have the precepts of Prince Albert, Queen Victoria's consort, to follow.

Prince Albert wrote after 10 years of marriage that being a royal consort "requires that the husband should entirely sink his own individuality in that of his wife; that he should stand in no power by himself or for himself; should shun all contention, assume no separate responsibility in the public, but make his position entirely a part of hers."

Philip is a man's man, and a bobby-soxer's ideal as well. Some of Britain's most glittering debutantes have cast come-hither looks at the handsome ex-prince.

He has the profile of a classic Greek statue. He smiles easily and says the right things to women.

One thing he may lack as the perfect husband—money. He has little of his own, but his uncle, Lord Mountbatten, is wealthy.

Since he was eight, Philip has been brought up in England and Scotland by Lord Mountbatten.

Princess Elizabeth and her sister Margaret were among Philip's childhood playmates.

He was second in command on the destroyer Wallace during the Selly landings and was mentioned in dispatches as a gallant officer of the battleship Valiant in the Battle of Matapan.

Edward Island would get of the $4,000,000. The pickled and salted fish relish order, Mr. Bridges replied that the East Coast would receive a total of $3,200,000. This will include 10 million pounds of dried and salted fish; 40,000 barrels of pickled fish valued at $520,000; 50,000 boxes of blisters valued at $100,000; and 100,000 cases of canned fish valued at $900,000.

Lobster Catch Down I cannot give the honorable member, (Mr. McLaure), any breakdown or special information at the moment with regard to Prince Edward Island. As to lobster, the final figures are not yet available since some seasons are still open in the Maritime Provinces, but it is estimated the value down 20 percent and the value down about 20 percent; this is due to unfavorable fishing conditions and the weather during the early spring season.

Mr. Bridges has an encouraging word for establishments of lobster hatcheries in the Maritimes. "Our scientists have not come to a definite conclusion," he said, "that lobster hatcheries have been of the great benefit so many people seem to think they are in Maine and Massachusetts. I am frank to admit that I am not sure that the matter be further studied because of the arguments 'that have been advanced over the years and because the fact that these hatcheries and earling-ponds have been maintained in those States undoubtedly indicates that they must have made some contribution to an increase in the take of lobsters in those areas."

In reply to question by Mr. McLaure as to whether mill-ponds in Prince Edward Island are being used by the Dominion Government for fish culture purposes, Mr. Bridges explained that Ottawa had an agreement with the Government of Prince Edward Island on the subject and were cooperating fully in the matter.

Meeting Cooperative Union Of P. E. Island

The third annual meeting of the cooperative union of Prince Edward Island Limited opened yesterday morning in St. Paul's Hall, Summerside. The meeting comprised two sessions during the day and one during the evening. The day session, which opened at 10.30 o'clock, was given over to the transaction of the business connected with the operation of the Union in this Province and was presided over by the president, Mr. Jerome O'Brien, of Jedd.

The delegates from the various districts of the Province were welcomed by Mr. Henry Wedge, acting mayor.

The report of the managing director, Mr. J. G. Denon, showed that much progress had been made during the past year and an immense amount of work accomplished. He referred to new co-operatives which were being organized, the passing of new income tax laws affecting co-operatives, negotiations in regard to the shipment of potatoes, etc.

The balance sheet of the Union showed that the assets of the co-operative amounted to $182,658 with liabilities of $40,000 and a surplus of $142,658. The proposed budget for the coming year was provided for an expenditure of $80,000 to carry out the increased activities of the Union in the Province.

The consolidated profit and loss statement — eighteen cooperatives reporting — indicated that gross receipts for the year ending January 31, 1947, amounted to $1,888,519. Net profit was $54,190.

Mr. O'Brien in his review of the year said that "definite agreement" had been reached on a skeleton plan for a wholesale set-up. "But," he added, "adverse price fluctuations may delay its formation for an indefinite period."

He said the co-operative movement in this Province has "more than 6,000 members."

During the afternoon session the meeting was addressed by Mr. A. B. McDonald, Ottawa, secretary of the Co-operative Union of Canada who in a brief and comprehensive way gave a general picture of co-operative work across Canada.

The speaker outlined the struggle the co-operative movement has had to wage during the year and the increase in just and fair income tax laws affecting co-operatives. He said that although the struggle was not over that on this particular issue.

Ch'town Midgets Win At S'side The Charlottetown Abbies, a midget aggregation from the Capital City, edged out the Summerside Blue Jays, leaders of the S. X. C. I. Midget League, last evening in the High School diamond by the score of 6 to 5. The home boys found Gillis visiting moundsman for only one hit, but 3 walks and 9 errors kept the Blue Jays within hailing distance of the winners who collected 8 safe hits off the deliveries of Billy Stewart. The fielding of Nicholson stood out for the visitors and he and Hughes led the attack with a brace of hits apiece, a smart double play, Stewart to Schurman, to Darby was pulled off by Summerside.
