LAYS CORNER STONE.—The Moncton Times says, The laying of the corner stone of the Central Methodist Church Thursday afternoon was a most interesting and impressive ceremony. There was a large number of people present to witness the proceedings, which were carried out without a hitch. Rev. Mr. Opie, of Albert, President of the New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island Methodist Conference, laid the corner stone in the absence of Lieut-Governor Josiah Wood, of Sackville, who was taken suddenly ill yesterday morning and was unable to be present. Rev. Mr. Opie was then called upon to lay the corner stone, and this task he did most acceptably and with due formality, the stone being declared "well and truly laid." He used a handsome silver trowel which was presented to him and on which was the following inscription: Presented to Rev. Richard Opie, Methodist Conference on the occasion of laying the corner stone of the Central Methodist Church, Moncton, N. B., August 26, 1915.

ISLAND CLERGYMEN LEAVE.— Those two bright Island clergymen, Rev. Mgr. Burke and Rev. Dr Kelly, leave Charlottetown this morning, the former on his way to the war zone, and the latter en route to Rome on business connected with the Church extension movement in the United States. Mgr. Burke has been appointed superintendent of Catholic chaplains with the Canadian overseas forces, and has been given the military rank of major. Rev. Dr Kelly, it may be added, saw active service during the Spanish-American war, having been chaplain to one of Uncle Sam's regiments. At that time he was parish priest in LesPeer, Mich. During his stay in the city, Rev. Mgr. Burke, who was one of the charter members of Charlottetown Council, Knights of Columbus, was given a reception in the Club Rooms at an open meeting of the order. The attendance was large and addresses highly complimentary to the distinguished guest were given by his lordship the Bishop, Rev. Dr Kelly, Rev. Maurice McDonald, Chas. G. Duffy, Dr W. J. McMillan, Lieut. Temple McDonald, Alex McDonald and other members of the order. Mgr. Burke, in the course of an able address feelingly acknowledged the honour done him.

Burke, assisted by members of the Cathedral staff. After the first Gospel, Rev. Dr. Kelley, of Chicago, delivered an able discourse dealing largely with the splendid work being done by the Church Extension Society in Canada and the United States, paying special tribute to the efforts of Rev. Mgr. Burke, who was its first president in this part of the American Continent. Incidentally he explained, the high character of the honor that had been conferred on Dr. Burke by the Holy Father, which the speaker declared was entirely unsolicited and was given solely for meritorious services. The service throughout was of the most impressive character, and the congregation was a large one.

SPLICING A ROPE.

Many times when a new rope is cut in two by a pulley, and unless there is someone who can do the splicing act, there is an expensive pause for the farmer. The beginner had better use three feet of rope in which to make his splice. This on ordinary three-ply rope.

Take one end and ravel back one strand three feet. Take the corresponding strand on the other end and ravel it back three feet eight inches and weave into the place of strand raveled from the first rope. When you get to the three feet raveled you will still have eight inches. Cut off all but eigth inches off the first strand raveled out, tie firmly with cord these two along with the rope where these two strands meet.

Take the next strand and have these meet with about 18 inches ravel and the next with about eight inches, tying them to keep them in place. Then weave in the eight inch strands neatly and after a few hours' wear the place of splicing can be scarcely detected. They look better and hold tighter if put over one strand and under two, although the every other one brings the same result. With a little practice this can be done in five minutes, and the rope aways breaks somewhere else.

IN MEMORIAM

J. H. REDDIN

Citizens were shocked and saddened yesterday afternoon on learning of the death of Mr. J. H. Reddin which occurred in the City Hospital, following an operation. Mr. Reddin had been in his usual health until a few days ago when he felt slightly indisposed. Saturday afternoon on the advice of his physician he went to the City Hospital for treatment. Saturday night alarming symptoms developed and it was found necessary to perform an operation for intestinal obstruction. The operation was performed but the patient succumbed while on the operating table.

The late Mr. Reddin was one of the oldest barristers in Charlottetown, having been admitted to the bar in 1885, after a course of study in the law office of Sullivan and McLeod (the present Chief Justice and Judge McLeod of Summerside). He was for a number of years Stipendiary Magistrate for Kings County. He was a son of the late James Reddin of the Customs Department and leaves to mourn two brothers, Mr. L. J. Reddin, Merchant, Charlottetown, and Arthur in Toronto, and four sisters, the misses Gertie and Ellie and Mrs. Pitts, Toronto, and Mrs. King, Boston. To the bereaved relatives the Guardian tenders sincere sympathy.

INDIANS' MUSIC

It is curious to watch the ease with which the new British Tommy arrived at the first stage of his remarkable foreign tour, his future as unknown as the name of the village in which he finds himself, takes it all with as much composure as though he had never done anything else. A host of them were quartered in our village for a few days, Mr. H. M. Tomlinson writes in the Daily News, from British Headquarters. They appeared unexpectedly in our quiet place from nowhere in particular, filled the roads, the barns, and the houses, and their khaki became as usual in our landscape as trees.

Some of them assembled in the principal street, with combs, and one became a solemn bandmaster, and so they celebrated the occasion with music. It is obviously difficult to worry natures of that kind.

PATHANS AND DOGRAS.

The Indians are of a shy, modest, and gentle nature, and themselves living near to the earth at home, they have a certain kinship with the people of the soil.

This excellent understanding—there is no need to point out its vital value—though essential to the success of the common cause, yet could not have been ordered, like shells. But we have it. It was the best feature of the afternoon last Sunday, when a band of Pathan and Dogras, trained by a few enthusiasts of an Indian division, gave a concert in the square of a considerable town not so far from the firing line.

The Indian musicians had bagpipes, and perhaps their French hosts imagined this was the wild music of the Orient. But it was the "March of the Cameron Men," "The Bridge of Perth," and things like that. The first wail of the pipes filled the surrounding houses with faces up to the attic windows, and drew streams of people down all the side streets

WITH THE CHILDREN

And what a memory for the French youngsters. Tall, lithe figures of Punjabis, Dogras and Pathans in turbans and faces the color of the desert, their sharp, swarthy faces and curled black beards, playing Scotch reels on bagpipes with an increasing speed, the drums as convulsive as quick-firers when the drummer was not putting a double halo around his head with the magic sticks, and shrill cries coming from odd corners, where there were men of all clans at every ecstatic moment.

The small children tried to creep between the legs of the native troopers who looked down in surprise, saw

The Tresveniki, a Russian sect that preaches nothing but temperance, drew up a great petition which after what was there, and hoisted the youngsters above their turbans. They politely begged French matrons to surrender their toddlers, took them from their mothers' arms and hoisted them aloft.

Of course, the pipes to these Indian musicians are an acquired habit, but they would do credit to the glens. We heard also their own native music, plaintive and barbaric, on a reed instrument called the serenal, to the accompaniment of dhols, tom-toms struck on one head by a stick, and by the open hand on the other.

Yet when the Indians showed that the "Marseillaise" was within the range of their strange wooden pipes, and rendered it, to complete the day, with accuracy and spirit, the enthusiasm might have been heard in the German lines.

CZAR A PROHIBITIONIST

ten weeks of the war and of enforced sobriety was presented to the Czar a petition for the prohibition of vodka forever.

It seemed preposterous to ask the Czar for complete prohibition in the face of Russia's tremendous war debts. The Czar had promised that no more vodka should be sold until the end of the war and that promise had been greeted with great satisfaction.. But the impossible happened. The Czar not only received the petitioners but anewered them in the significant sentence:—

"I had already decided on total prohibition before I read your petition."
