GRIPPING! ENTHRALLING MIGHTY IN SCOPE AND POWERFUL IN THEME.

A new screen luminary flashes across the screen at the Prince Edward Theatre this week in the prison of Conrad Veidt, star of the Universal-Jewel production, "A Man's Past", which started its local run last night.

For sheer interest and story value, we believe that this picture marks the highspot of the current cinema season. The story is excellently told, the players are perfectly cast and the direction leaves nothing to be desired.

The story concerns a noted physician who is sentenced to prison for putting to death one of his patients suffering an incurable disease. He escapes from the prison and is well on the road to rehabilitation when he is discovered by a former officer of the prison. The love interest is especially strong in that the officer and the surgeon both love the same girl and it appears that the officer will expose the doctor in order to get him out of the way. He does not, however, which sends the story into an entirely different climax which is both original and thrilling.

Conrad Veidt, long known as "the European Barrymore," makes his American debut in this picture and as the surgeon he lends to the screen one of the finest bits of acting since its inception. Arthur Edmund Carew plays the prison officer and Barbara Bedford, in leading feminine role. Others in the cast are George Siegmann, Ian Keith, Carlisle Palmer and Charles Puffy.

"Taking it all in all," "A Man's Past" is excellent screen fare and everyone should see it during its current run.

HAYWOOD VS. COYLE

Appeal From Judgment of Police Court Heard by His Honour Judge Stewart, Yesterday - Judgment Reserved for One Week.

The case of Haywood vs. Coyle was heard yesterday before His Honour Judge Stewart. This was an appeal from a judgment rendered by His Honour, Stipendiary Magistrate Martin a short time ago, in a prohibition case, in which the defendant, Thomas Coyle, was discharged.

In the present hearing, before Judge Stewart, Mr. W. E. Bentley, K. C., represented the appellant and Mr. J. J. Johnstone, K. C., the respondent.

The first witness for the prosecution was Charles R. Bourke, who on direct examination said, in substance:

"I live in Elmsdale. I am a farmer. An constable for three counties, appointed by a Judge of the Supreme Court."

I went to Thomas Coyle's place 27th Jan. at 2:30 p. m. His place is at 64 King St. E. Thomas Coyle came to the door. I asked him if he was Thomas Coyle, said he was. I was taken into the dining room—nobody was there. Could see three or four men in the kitchen—but myself. I told Coyle I wanted a quart of whiskey for a wedding on the following Tuesday. He asked me my name, I told him it was Burke, and that I had a brother-in-law, Joseph Purcell, in town. He said he'd give me what I wanted, but not before 6 p. m. He said he had a car and I'd have to be at his house at 6 p. m. sharp to get it. He said he had no whiskey, but he had rum. Asked him if it was good rum. He said yes. It cost $18.00 per gallon. He said he had a man who would take me to the house. I asked him if he could deliver it to me near the station, said he could not deliver it. He said I didn't want to take it up to my sister, Mrs. Purcell. He told me to be careful. I was driving on a train to Elmsdale. I was carrying a bag of rum. I was packing some clothes for my boy and I would pack it with the clothes in a box. He said that would be all right. I asked him he had nothing on me. He said he had a car and I'd have to be at his house at 6 p. m. sharp to get it. A slight man, with glasses, came into dining room. Didn't know the man at all. I learned his name was Thomas Coyle. I couldn't notice him since. I didn't notice him today.

Coyle said "Give the other man the money when you get the liquor. If it's all right, take it. It cost $18.00 per gallon. I pulled two $10.00 bills out of my pocket and said it was better to make the change here. I gave him the two $10.00. He gave me back one $2.00 bill, which was brought in and handed to him by a woman. Then we left, and the other man, and went to a house at the corner of Pownall and Sidney street on the south side of Sidney street and the east side of Pownall street.

We went in the rear entrance from Sidney street. Couldn't say whose house it was. The man pulled a key out of his pocket, unlocked a door, and went in through a porch to the kitchen where there was furniture, a stove, carpet rolled up on floor, a stove but no fire. We waited there about ten minutes. He lit a light. The man had on glasses and wore a double breasted dark coat, soldier's buttons on his inside coat. He was fair, kind of light haired. I asked him if he was a brother of Thomas Coyle. He said no. I said "This might be him now." But it was not. Ten minutes later a rap came on the same door we went in at. He went to the door and brought in a gallon can. He then went over to the cupboard, took down a cup from it, and poured out about two tablespoons of its contents, saying, "try this." I tasted it, and said it was all right. I tied the can about my waist with a piece of rope so that it was inside my big dark long haired bearskin coat. He then opened the door and said "Stand here till I see that there is no one in the street." There was no one, so I bade him "good night."

I took the can to the house of my brother-in-law, Jos. Purcell, where I hid it in the pantry. Mrs. Purcell's sister saw me take it. I became afraid some one else might get it from me, so I took it up and hid it behind the bed. I delivered it to Mr. Haywood next day. I put a label and my private mark on it. There was rum in it when I gave it to him, and rum in it when I got it. (Here the can was produced. Witness smelled of its contents and tasted of it, apparently with relish.) Yes, and there's rum in it now.

His Honour: Then it wasn't used at the wedding?

Witness: No, it was not used at the wedding.

Cross examined by Mr. Johnstone.

Q. You belong to Elmsdale?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Been in town much recently?
 A. This is my fourth trip.
 Q. When were you made a constable?
 A. It is not quite a month.
 Q. How long were you made a constable before the 27th?
 A. On the forenoon of that day.
 Q. Who sent you to be made a constable?
 A. (After some hesitation) Mr. Haywood.
 Q. Have you sold liquor yourself?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Have you been in Jail for it?
 A. Yes, Sir.
 Q. Have you been in Jail for anything else?
 A. I have been in Jail for fox stealing.
 Q. Have you been in the rum business? Is whiskey sold by the gallon?
 A. Not these days.
 Q. Were you buying this liquor for yourself?
 A. No, for Mr. Haywood.
 Q. And you delivered it to Mr. Haywood?
 A. Yes, Mr. Haywood.
 Q. With his money?
 A. With the money I got from him.
 Q. You were a middle man?
 A. Yes.
 Q. It would be Haywood's liquor?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Did you get liquor for him on other occasions?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Did you find liquor in the granary of a man called Shea?
 A. Yes.
 Q. Did you put it there before you were made a constable?
 A. No, and I can prove it.
 Q. Did you know it was there?
 A. I knew he got liquor.
 Q. Did he know who put the liquor in the granary?
 A. I have a pretty good idea.
 Q. Did he ever get the liquor he paid for?
 A. I don't know.
 Q. Did you have anything to do with putting the liquor there?
 A. No.
 Q. Which end of the house does Mr. Coyle live in?
 A. The east end.
 Q. Do you know who lives in the west end of his house?
 A. I can't say.
 Q. When he explained he drove around past the house next day in Mr. Haywood's car, and showed him where he got the stuff.
 Q. Did you get $18.00 to buy the liquor from anyone else but Tom Coyle?
 A. I got a list with two or three names on it. He was one of those they were after. Some discussion ensued as to what reward Mr. Burke was to receive for his services in the case. Finally, Mr. Johnstone asked: "How much were you to get, Burke?"
 A. A. M. Mileage from Elmsdale.
 Q. What did he pay you?
 A. Mileage.
 Q. It wouldn't be worth your while to come down for that. What was the rate?
 A. Was paid about 10c or 15c per mile. Wouldn't swear to the exact amount.
 Q. Why didn't they appoint you inspector?
 A. The place was full up of inspectors—they wouldn't appoint me—the place was full.
 Q. Did they appoint Rockford in your place?
 A. I don't know.
 A. At the request of Mr. Johnstone, the witness made a plan of Coyle's tenement, describing it, and showing where, as he alleged, he saw the man in the kitchen.
 Mr. Johnson: Just where that house is you're not prepared to say—How many houses are there between it and the corner?
 A. I wouldn't swear, but I could take you to the place.
 Q. Did you see any women there?
 A. The first time I was there, at 3:30 I saw no women.
 Q. The second time you were there, did you see any?
 A. I saw one, she brought the $2.00 change for the man who got the rum.
 Q. The second time you were there, did you produce a note purporting to be from Purcell?
 A. No.
 Q. Did you pay Coyle any money?
 A. No, sir, I paid it to the other man.
 Q. This woman you saw—Could you point her out?
 A. I couldn't swear to her.
 Q. Could you swear to the other man?
 A. No. But I could swear to Thomas Coyle. (Here Mr. Johnstone produced a man, and asked witness if he was the man who, he said, took his money and went with him. Witness replied "I couldn't swear to it."
 Re-examined by Mr. Bentley.
 Q. How long ago did you sell liquor?

and will be addressed by H. W. Clay, of the Dominion Live Stock Branch, and Mr. W. J. Reid, of the Provincial Department of Agriculture, on subjects relative to Co-operative Live Stock Shipping, Purchase and Distribution of Fertilizer, Seed Grain and Live Stock Improvement.

Thomas Coyle, testifying on his own behalf, stated that Burke had called on him twice on the afternoon of the 27th, first at 3 o'clock, when he asked witness for drinks. Witness told him he had none and never did have. The second time Burke arrived about 6:15, he brought a note, purporting to be signed by Purcell, saying: "Give this man what he wants". On both occasions, two women Mrs. Coyle and Mrs. Ramsay were present, because as witness expressed it "in and out of the dining room."

Mr. Johnstone read him Burke's evidence, all of which he denied, except as stated above.

On cross examination by Mr. Bentley, witness stated that he and his brother were labouring men. Both of them owned motor cars. He stated also that he read the note aloud.

Mrs. Coyle and Mrs. Ramsay were the next evidence called by the defence. Except on minor points, their evidence was largely corroborative of Thomas Coyle's.

Albert Ramsay, sworn, testified for the defence, that he had never seen Burke before, and never at any time had sold or delivered to him any liquor. He also denied ever having been in Purcell's home, either at the time, Albert Coyle, he contradicted Purcell's evidence to that effect, as read to him by Mr. Johnstone. He testified also, that on the evening in question, he was packing up his furniture in the house at the corner of Sidney and Pownall streets, preparatory to having it moved. Burke never came there. He was assisted in this work by a man called Stanley.

Mr. Stanley was next called, and corroborated the evidence of Mr. Ramsay.

Cross examined by Mr. Bentley, he admitted that he had been in the liquor business, and was convicted once for a breach of the Prohibition act. He had also been convicted for drunkenness, and was once charged, but was found innocent of another crime.

This concluded the case for the defence and the court was then addressed very ably by Mr. Johnstone and Mr. Bentley in turn.

His Honour reserved judgment for one week.

Last night on the L. O. C. alleys a double header was to have taken place, one between the Spuds and Canucks, the other between the Victorias and Canucks but for some reason or other the Canucks did not show up so the games were both claimed by default. The Spuds first taking the alleys and rolling a very nice game in which C. Dillon rolled high single of 280 also high total of 724 pins. The other team to take the alleys was the Victorias who also rolled a good game in which C. Howatt high single of 224 also high total of 607 pins.
