Woman Detective Has Unique Job
 NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(AP)—Grace Sullivan Lagay, a house detective at the Commodore Hotel and, as far as anyone knows, the only woman house detective New York ever has had, was a suburban housewife in New Jersey until three years ago when she took up jiu-jitsu, psychology and ballistics, and became a policewoman. Some families run to lawyers and some to doctors," she says, "but with the Sullivan clan it's cops."
 Her mother is Mary Sullivan, director of the women's bureau of the New York police department until she retired last spring. Her mother's sister was in the shuffling squad; two uncles were in Scotland Yard; three more are retired members of New York's finest; three cousins are still on the force.
 As a lady "dick," Mrs. Lagay's job is to prevent things from happening. Spectacular "pinches" are all right on street corners, she says, but not in hotels. She prefers "verbal persuasion." When men or prostitutes blow into Mrs. Lagay's balliwick, she watches until they light and then dusts them out with a quiet word.
 "You can handle them smoother," she comments, "with verbal persuasive powers than by knocking your brains out. I never know what I'm going to say until the time comes but usually I'll just ask 'Don't you want to powder your nose?' or 'Have you an appointment somewhere?'" Her cardinal rule is "never put your hands on a suspect."
Guards Linen Supply
 On her eight-hours-a-day job the police woman "gum shoes" in public rooms and the back of her become checker for linen supply to make sure they don't depart with anything they didn't bring with them. Her estimate of them is "too bad we can't watch the guests" one time when the linen supply was only four months but says: "My powers of observation have become keener by being paid for them. When I used to have to wait for anyone in a hotel I got bored to death. Now I hear everything that's being said. My ears wiggle."
 A tall, broad-shouldered, blue-eyed brunette, Mrs. Lagay "dresses like a customer." There is a family joke about one night when she was on duty at Pennsylvania Station guarding the departure of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. The ducal couple waited for the train in their automobile and the detective, dressed for a party she was going to later, paced the sidewalk with fur coat slung over her shoulders.
 When the duke got out, he stopped to speak to her and evidently told the duchess who she was because the duchess called her over and complimented: "My dear, your disguise is perfect today. An old hand on duty overheard and commented: 'Why didn't you tell her you look this good 'every day?'"

FRISKY GOAT JUMPS INTO LION'S DOMAIN
 JOHANNESBURG, Aug. 7 (O P)—Apparently exhilarated by the warm, unseasonable winter weather on the Transvaal highveld, one of the mountain goats at the Johannesburg Zoo recently leaped over the wall of the goat enclosure with a great running jump and landed—in the lion enclosure.
 Recovering from his first surprise, Satan, a magnificent specimen of manless lion, began to stalk the goat. But Satan, like others in captivity at Johannesburg, had long been fed on meat which he didn't have to hunt. He had lost much of his native cunning and agility.
 The keeper of the lion enclosure, and keepers quickly arrived to see that the chase did not continue too long.
 "Get inside, Satan!" and humbly the king of beasts abdicated and entered his cage.
