DYSPEPSIA MAN'S GREATEST ENEMY

Is Most Prevalent of all Present-Day Diseases, Declares L. T. Cooper; Victims Are Whimsical and Melancholy And Suffer Great Mental Depression; Disease Can Be Cured, He Says.

Explaining the record-breaking purchase of Tanlac by Reddin Bros., National Drug and Chemical Co., and the leading wholesale and retail druggists throughout the United States and Canada, Mr. E. C. Harris, special representative of the International Distributor of Tanlac, stated last night that the hundreds of questions now being asked all over Charlottetown make it imperative that some explanations be made to satisfy public interest.

Speaking of Tanlac, he said:—"Thousands of the most prominent people—in fact, people representing all walks of life—in the larger cities of the country where the celebrated medicine has been accomplishing such remarkable results are even more enthusiastic over Tanlac than Mr. Cooper himself.

"In explanation of this, it should be stated that Tanlac is believed to be the first actually direct specific for catarrhal inflammation of the mucous membranes and the complications which follow them.

"Catarrh of the stomach is one of the most frequent causes of dyspepsia and catarrhal inflammation of the nose and throat leads to inevitable complications, such as kidney and liver affections, rheumatism, etc. Show me a man whose eyes are inflamed, whose sense of smell and hearing is affected, and I will show you a man who is suffering from catarrh. Frequently the lungs become involved by the extension of the catarrhal inflammation or germs to the lung substance. Specialists concede this, but it has remained for Tanlac, the new formula, to provide the remedy, as has been so conclusively and convincingly proven by the hundreds of thousands who have been relieved by its use."

"At this point Mr. Harris quoted from one of Mr. Cooper's recent lectures, in which he said:—"Of all the distressing conditions that afflict humanity, catarrh of the stomach, or what is more commonly known as chronic dyspepsia, is probably the most prevalent. This most universal malady has baffled the medical profession for years, and the most skilled specialists have been unable to cope with it successfully."

"Hours might be consumed in describing the sufferings, mental and physical, of the sufferers of chronic dyspepsia, and their failure to locate rest relief. A morbid, unreal, whimsical and melancholy condition of the mind, aside from the nervousness and physical suffering, is the usual condition of the average dyspeptic, and life seems scarcely worth the living.

"Dyspepsia or indigestion, as the case may be, is caused by the taking of too much food, or unsuitable food, and the mucus membrane of the stomach becomes irritated, and there is set up an acute or sub-acute gastric catarrhal condition, which prevents the proper digestion of the food.

"This food is apt to ferment and decompose, and as a result the familiar distressing symptoms of dyspepsia may arise. In mild cases there is nothing more than an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach, with a certain amount of depression, headache, loss of appetite, perhaps belching of gas and occasional vomiting. There may be also accompanying intestinal symptoms, such as constipation, pains in the back, colic, etc. There may be only the familiar heartburn, due to the inflammation of the stomach from excessive gases of fermentation, or putrefaction.

"In the most severe cases—those that last over a day or two—the symptoms enumerated may be much more intense. The distress may be marked and the general constitutional symptoms more evident. When this stage is reached the loss of appetite, the mental depression and the general uncomfortable feeling in the stomach are much more pronounced. This is particularly true in acute gastritis.

"It frequently occurs from continued errors in diet that this condition becomes chronic, and the symptoms persist for an indefinite period; the appetite is very apt to be varied, although at times very good. Heartburn is frequent, if not constant; the stomach is painful on pressure; the tongue is coated, there is a bad taste in the mouth, and there are changes in the amount of salivary secretion. Constipation is also usually present, although diarrhoea may alternate.

"Most cases of dyspepsia can be cured if the diet is properly looked after and with the proper treatment. Proper eating and the proper amount of food are the most important features in the treatment. Most people eat too fast and eat too much.

"There is not a single portion of the body that is not benefited by the helpful action of Tanlac, which begins its work by stimulating the digestive and assimilating organs, thereby enriching the blood and invigorating the whole system. Next, it enables a weak, worn-out stomach to thoroughly digest the food, promoting the assimilation of the nourishing products to be converted into blood, bone and muscle."

Tanlac is sold in Charlottetown by Reddin Bros.

SANDRA THE JEALOUS

By Jane Phelps EVERETT SURPRISES SANDRA WITH A LETTER CHAPTER IV.

The world seemed very uninteresting after Everett left. I felt almost as if I were all alone, although all the town boys and girls were around as usual. But somehow Everett had a way of making you know he was there. I don't know how else to express it. But Rose and some of the others made no secret of their joy that he had gone.

"So 'grampa' has finally taken himself out of the way, has he?" Rose asked. "Now perhaps we can have some fun."

I never said much when they teased me, and called Everett "Grandpa," but it made me uncomfortable, and I always flushed terribly. When Everett's first letter came, about three days after he left, I was so pleased that I didn't mind their teasing me one single bit.

He had said nothing about writing to me, so I was awfully surprised. It was just a short letter, such a one as any friend might have written me. There wasn't a word about caring for me in it. But just at the last he said:

"I have missed my little friend more than I ever thought it possible to miss anyone." It was silly, but I kissed the paper right on these lines. Then I carried it in the bosom of my dress for days—just like the girls in the novels did. But finally I put it away in the bureau drawer under my shirtwaists. The boys never disturbed them, and the letter was getting worn out.

It took me one whole afternoon to answer that letter. I must have wasted nearly a box of paper before it suited me. Then it didn't—not perfectly.

I wrote about everyday things, the people he knew, etc. just as he did, until I came to the very end of my letter. Then I told him that I had missed him too, more than I ever had missed anyone before. I wasn't very original, but I had spoiled so many sheets of paper I didn't dare use any more. As it was I had to burn up all the spoiled sheets and the envelopes to match for fear the boys would find them. It would have been terrible if they had. I never should have heard the last of it.

It is strange how things long past come back to us. I recall distinctly that whenever Everett came to call in that first short week I knew him, that I was always a bit frightened to go down to meet him—the always asked for me—for fear I did not look nice enough. Even then I had heard him express an opinion upon the way some of the girls in our town were dressed at the tennis party, and it made me uncomfortable. I wore simple wash dresses at home but they were always freshly laundered, and until he commenced coming to the house, I never had thought of wearing anything different. Even now I know there was something about my gingham for morning and dainty muslins for afternoon. Anyway Everett said I looked lovely in them; and that mother was sensible to keep me looking so young.

I don't know that I was very different from other girls of my age, brought up as I had been, and if I confess that I felt in some way different, set apart from the rest of the town girls, after I received Everett's letter I think most people will understand.

I attached a sentimental value to the few lines he had written; that I never should have dreamed of putting upon the notes I had received occasionally from the town boys. This charming man from a great city where there were so many lovely girls had singled me, Sandra Courtney, out for his special attentions.

It was a long time before he answered my letter. Nearly six weeks. But as he sent me some books and candy in the interim I me, although I looked anxiously each day for a reply; and once or twice I locked myself in my room and shed a few tears when father said there was "no mail."

Then came the morning when I received Everett's second letter. I went with him to the Post Office. I read it as I walked slowly home under the blossoming trees, the sent of early flowers in the air. He sort of apologized for not replying sooner, asked me to forgive him, and said he would be more prompt in the future if I would. He also said he would be in Lackville again before fall, and signed himself: "Your fond friend, Everett Graham. Tomorrow—Everett Proposes."

FOX MEN

I am in a position to impart to you after experimenting for three years how to prevent diarrhoea and dysentery trouble in young fox pups, thus minimizing your losses and reducing the mortality. It is in the art of feeding. I have been using for a period of three years Shredded Wheat and found without a doubt the best food obtainable giving best results and minimizing the cost of feeding. I have a shipment due to arrive any day of about three tons and will be glad to receive applications in lots of 100 lbs. and over. The Shredded Wheat is packed in bags, accurate weight; fully 35 per cent cheaper than any biscuit on the market, easy digestible, no trouble and an absolute saving. Some of the largest ranches are using same on my recommendation and each and every statement made can be corroborated. For your own good drop me a line or call and see me I will tell you more about it.
