MISS BROWN OF X. Y. O.

By E. Philipps Oppenheim (Copyright 1927 by E. Philipps Oppenheim)

"Here are your instructions. You will book to Camberley, take a cab and drive to this address: 'Lady Hannerton, The Nook, Merton road, Camberley.' Lady Hannerton has applied to the principal agency in the West End for a Secretary. By arrangement with the manageress you are to refer yourself for the post. Here are your references," he added, handing her a little bundle of letters secured with a rubber band. "Unexceptionable, I think you will find them. Lady Hannerton is very fond of money, so we will make your selection a certainty by asking a very moderate salary—let us say £28 a week. Live in the house if you can. Exactly opposite is a grocer's shop with a telephone. Make friends with the woman who runs it. You may have to use the telephone frequently. Take down these two numbers, one for me, 1000 Whitehall, which you can use at any time, night or day, and in case of emergency or certain other contingencies which I will explain to you here is a local number—100 Q Aldershot—which will put you in touch with a staff officer who is acting for us."

"How long am I to stay with Lady Hannerton, and what is my work to be?" Miss Brown inquired.

"You may be there a week, perhaps a fortnight," Dessiter announced. "If you have exceptional good luck perhaps only three or four days. From the moment of your arrival I want the names of every one who visits the house, both officially and for any other purpose."

"Is it Lady Hannerton who is the suspect?" Miss Brown inquired.

"It is. Suspect is the word. What we need is definite information. By some means or other an enormous quantity of literature of the worst type is being distributed among the soldiers of Aldershot, Camberley and the whole of that district. A great deal of it is in the shape of cards stuck up on walls and trees during the night, but a large quantity of pamphlets get into the hands of the soldiers themselves, and we believe by means of their wives.

"Lady Hannerton is the widow of a very distinguished general who was killed during the last week of the war. She herself spends half her time on the Continent where her reports tell us that she gambles very high. She has no money except her pension, so that she has without a doubt means of supplementing her income. All these things we want to discover."

"May I suggest something?" Miss Brown ventured.

"Of course."

"You have powers which would enable you to examine Lady Hannerton's banking account. Could you trace any sums that were paid in or out from her pension?"

Dessiter nodded approvingly.

"Quite right, Miss Brown," he said, "but you may be sure that we've tried that. There are very considerable sums paid in at odd times, but these are all by cheque on a foreign bank over which we have no jurisdiction, and which refuses information regarding its clients. Even the latest stopped late, but we believe that Lady Hannerton has money paid to her account at a bank somewhere on the Riviera. There is one other person down there, Miss Brown, whom I want you to look out for—a man named Thornton."

"A friend of Lady Hannerton?"

"Not that we know of. Thornton has been leeching in Hyde Park for the last two years, but he is in a matter of fact, rather one of the tragic figures on the other side. He was a magnificent soldier, did splendidly in the war, got a V. C. and every possible medal. When he came back he found his wife virtually dying of starvation. He had a large family and she'd worked herself to death. His two eldest sons were killed, and unfortunately they were never rather thrown away by a foolish commander."

"Thornton ought to have been

"What salary do you require?" she asked.

"If I live in, two pounds a week."

"That is not excessive," Lady Hannerton admitted pleasantly. "I have a considerable correspondence, some of which is of a confidential nature, and I do not like my affairs discussed outside this house. Are you to be trusted?"

"My references will answer that question," Miss Brown pointed out.

"I am interested in politics," Lady Hannerton went on, her eyes fixed upon her visitor. "I am thinking of standing for Parliament very shortly. For that reason I am collecting a great deal of information about people in all conditions of life, and particularly in the army. My husband was a soldier."

Miss Brown inclined her head.

"The division for which I wish to stand," her prospective employer continued, "includes a large military vote. For that reason I am visiting a great deal among the noncommissioned officers' wives and even the privates' wives. I have them here to tea sometimes, and address them. I am rather an advanced Liberal in politics, and there are a great many abuses in connection with the military regulations with which I desire to do away. I am offering you this rather lengthy explanation because you may be puzzled at some of my activities."

"I am not a curious person," Miss Brown declared. "I am quite used to obeying orders and doing what I am told."

"I feel sure that you are going to suit me," Lady Hannerton decided. "When can you start work?"

"As soon as you like," Lady Hannerton considered.

"Will you come down tomorrow morning at the same hour?" she suggested. "That will give me time to have your room ready."

"I will be here," Miss Brown promised.

Answer: Because when cod-liver oil is emulsified it is more perfectly absorbed, and does not disagree with digestion. Take

SCOTT'S EMULSION

That Car Of Yours

By WILLIAM ULLMAN
Heart-to-Heart Talks With Automobile Owners and Drivers on How to Get the Most Out of Their Cars at the Least Expense.

VALVES MUST BE SEATED

Widespread use of highly volatile, non-detonating gasolines is resulting in a great reduction of the number of valve grinding jobs that need a job, of course, but he wasn't. He took to drink at odd times. No one seems to have looked after him, and then he got into other hands. He was mixed up in a brawl and sent to prison, notwithstanding his record. That finished him. Today he's one of the most dangerous men on the other side. I had a talk with him once. He showed me the photographs of his dead wife and the account of his own conviction at Bow Street. He'd had it framed. He'll go on to the end now, and I'm afraid it will be a bad end."

Miss Brown glanced once more at the clock. Dessiter nodded.

"What you have to do," he summarized, "sounds simple enough, but you may find it not so easy as it seems. I want the names of every one who visits Lady Hannerton. I want to know particularly if Thornton is ever there. I want to fathom the nature of Lady Hannerton's activities among the soldiers' wives and naturally I want you to discover, if you can, whether any of this infernal literature is distributed through her."

Miss Brown inclined her head gravely.

"I think I understand," she said. "You will probably get the job all right," but if there's any trouble about it come straight back and report."

MISS BROWN duly caught her train and was driven from Camberley station in a taxicab to the address given—a very modest villa on the edge of the heath. A trim maid-servant ushered her into an ordinary sitting room of the furnished house type, and a few minutes later transferred her to a larger apartment where a woman was seated writing at a table.

"Miss Brown, my lady," the maid announced.

The woman turned around—a tall, dark woman, handsome but with restless eyes and gestures. She was apparently still quite young and her voice when she spoke was pleasant enough, but there was a queer sort of uneasiness in her manner as though she were all the time watching for and fearing some untoward happening.

"Have you come from Miss Hannerton's agency?" she inquired.

Miss Brown acquiesced and presented her testimonials, with which Lady Hannerton, after a brief examination, was evidently impressed.

"What salary do you require?" she asked.

"If I live in, two pounds a week."

"That is not excessive," Lady Hannerton admitted pleasantly. "I have a considerable correspondence, some of which is of a confidential nature, and I do not like my affairs discussed outside this house. Are you to be trusted?"

"My references will answer that question," Miss Brown pointed out.

LOOK AROUND AND PROFIT

Cast a glance here and there about one's favorite repair shop or service station is a profitable occupation at times. An instance is to be found in the case of the price schedules which go in for "flat rate work." Under the impression that it is too expensive, the car owner frequently defers having a necessary repair made to the automobile. The shop's price schedule often teaches the error of such a surmise. Repair prices are well worth knowing and every motorist should arm himself with this knowledge.

LEAVE CLEANER ARM SET

When wiping the windshield to remove snow, ice or rain, be careful not to move the windshield cleaner arm, provided the device is of the electrical type. Manual movement often results in breakage of the pinion and gear mechanism. Incidentally, it is well to know that such breakage can be replaced.

ITCHING PILES

Instantly Relieved and soon stopped by applying PAZO OINTMENT. It Stops Irritation, Swelling, Itching, Bleeding, and Discharge. All Druggists have PAZO OINTMENT in tubes with push-up attachment at 75c; and in tin boxes at 60c.

YOUNG WOMEN SUFFER MOST

These Two Found Relief by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ayer's Cliff, Quebec.—"I have been teaching for three years, and at the end of the year I always feel tired and have no appetite. I was a awful sick each month, too, having pains in my back until sometimes I was obliged to stop working. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and I heard many women telling how good it was so I thought it would help me. And it did. Now I take six bottles every year and recommend it to others."—DONALDA FANTEUX, Ayer's Cliff, Quebec.

"Unable to Work"
Canning, Nova Scotia.—"I had irregular periods and great suffering at those times, the pains causing vomiting and fainting. I was teaching school and often for some hours I would be unable to attend to my work. Through an advertisement in the papers I knew of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has been of great benefit to me, the troubles being completely relieved."—LAURA J. EATON, Canning, King's County, Nova Scotia.

DANGER

Your tongue is the best barometer of your physical condition. Look at it every morning before breakfast. If it is coated with white, yellow or brown coloring, and does not have a clean red appearance you are constipated and not well.

Heed Its Warning

Constipation causes more ailments than all other diseases, and is the result of not having a daily bowel movement. Sick-headache, indigestion, biliousness and sallow complexion follow. Ask your druggist for a 25c red paper package of CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS "Safe Laxative". Take a dose to-night and continue one pill after each meal. Don't stop—until your tongue is clean. You will be surprised at the tonic effect this doctor's formula will have on you.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

The average repair shop does. This is to be expected and for the most part is entirely satisfactory. But, it happens frequently that the car owner goes too far with the assumption that the valves are seated properly. Even with the best of gasolines, the valves do "stick up" after a certain period of usage. The car owner who grinds in the valves or has them ground in after, say, a year of service will be regret this by the difference in the car's performance.

TOO MUCH HEAT DOES IT

Winter street surfaces induce considerable clutch slipping on the driver's part. After a period of such a practice, the clutch is inclined to start slipping on its own account. This is a forecast of trouble unless the motorist acts with reasonable rapidity. The friction caused by the slipping of the clutch plates generates an excessive amount of heat which may cause the plates to buckle or bend. This will lead to an expensive repair and replacement job.

EVEN HORNS NEED OILING

It always is an interesting argument, this one as to which unit of the automobile is most regularly and readily forgotten when the car is being oiled. How about the horns? It really does not require much lubricant and for this fact many motorists can be grateful. Water driving, which necessitates greater care in every respect, calls for the highest type of horn efficiency. This should begin with giving the device a few drops of light lubricating oil.

DON'T LET AIR ENTER

Brake adjustments get the greatest amount of attention during winter weather. In the hydraulic variety, this takes the form of "bleeding" to expel air from the lines. The task should begin with filling the supply tank with the proper fluid. Then, as each wheel cylinder is "bled" the master cylinder should be replenished by the amount of fluid withdrawn. If the main tank is allowed to empty while the process, the system will fill again with air and the whole operation will need to be repeated.

THEY CLEAN THEMSELVES

"Clean the points," is a bit of advice that recurs frequently in every instruction book on the automobile. There is one set of points, however, about which the motorist is not advised and for this reason the points referred to are those of the starter switch. In most cars this operation is altogether unnecessary due to the fact that the starter switch is equipped with self-cleaning points.

NEW HEAD OFFICE OF PROVINCIAL BANK OF CANADA IN MONTREAL

The Provincial Bank of Canada, finding its present antiquated premises inadequate for the handling of its steadily expanding business, has decided to move to larger quarters on May next. Unlike most moving operations, however, instead of being an expense the change will be accomplished with an actual profit to the bank.

This has been made possible by the acceptance of an offer from the firm Aldred & Co., Ltd., of the Shawinigan group to purchase the bank's building on Place d'Armes for the sum of $600,000, which has been paid in cash, the transaction having been completed just a few days ago.

The second step in the undertaking has been the acquisition by the Provincial Bank of the present Royal Bank head office building, with the complete fixtures and equipment, which will be vacated in May of this year. The actual cost of this building when built some few years ago was about $800,000. The present assessed valuation is $480,000. It is modern in all respects and will provide improved facilities and accommodation for the bank's administration. Of special advantage will be the up-to-date vaults which form so important a part of the equipment of banking quarters.

The Main Branch of the Bank will be located on the ground floor where are installed marble counters with art bronze railings, and will be provided with all modern facilities. The Board Room, General Manager's Office and Head Office staff quarters will occupy the two upper floors where spacious accommodation will be enjoyed by every one.

The purchase was made from Nesbit, Thomson & Company, for the price of $500,000, which was also paid in cash. By the transaction, therefore, the Provincial Bank made a profit of $100,000, and at the same time added materially to the value of its physical assets.

An instance is to be found in the case of the price schedules which go in for "flat rate work." Under the impression that it is too expensive, the car owner frequently defers having a necessary repair made to the automobile. The shop's price schedule often teaches the error of such a surmise.
