What the Fashionables are Wearing

Illustrated Dressmaking Lesson Furnished With Every Pattern

By Annabelle Worthington

And I'll let you in on the secret of how simple it is to fashion it. The bodice is in two sections. It is cut from centre-neck along the perforated lines and finished for closing. The two-piece circular skirt is seamed and attached to the bodice. Now all you've to do is to set the sleeves into the armholes and stitch the collar at the neckline.

The original was rich mauve-brown coloring. The belt brown suede. The ribbon tie matched the belt. The collar was white linen.

It takes but 2 yards of 35-inch material with 1/2 yard of 35-inch contrasting for the 8-year size.

Style No. 697 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years.

Henna shade ribbed wool jersey is smart with brown jersey collar and suede cuffs, brown leather belt and brown tie.

Be sure to fill in the size of the pattern. Send stamps or coin (coin preferred).

Price of pattern 15 cents.

Dorothy Dix Letter Box

Is the Widow With Grown Children Wise to Marry Again? - Must This Indiscreet Girl of 17 Marry a Man Who is Repulsive to Her?

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a widow of 46 and have raised a family of six children, the youngest of whom is 18. I am now thinking of marrying again. Do you think there is such a thing as second love? My first marriage was very happy. Do you think I could be happy again with another husband? PERPLEXED.

Answer:

Of course there is such a thing as second love, and very often it is a far deeper passion than the first love was. Naturally, second love has not all of the fireworks, the thrills and palpitations and ecstasies, the circling wings and golden glory that first love has, because as we grow older we grow soberer and less romantic; our blood does not run so hot in our veins and we love with our heads as well as our hearts.

But just because of all this, second love is very often a more satisfactory emotion than first love was. It is a beautiful friendship founded on congeniality and companionship, and if it has not all of the hectic thrills of boy-and-girl love, it also lacks its torments of jealousy and despair. That is why second marriages are nearly always happy and successful and seldom end in divorce.

Whether a widow of 46 should marry again or not depends, of course, upon how much she cares for the man she proposes to take for a husband and, most of all, upon how suitable a choice she has made.

The lot of the well-to-do widow with no one to boss her, no man to have to cater to and freedom to do as she chooses is one that has a few worries as falls to mortal lot, and she is a very foolish woman who puts her neck the second time under the yoke unless she is so deeply in love with some man that life without him is cinders, ashes and dust, and unless she knows that she is getting a life partner who will pull his half of the load and be a pleasant and affectionate yokemate.

For her to marry, as so many middle-aged widows do, a man who is younger than herself and who has only an eye on her late husband's insurance money or some man who is a grouchy semi-invalid or some widower with a household of children is to bring certain misery down upon her head. And why so many women precipitate this catastrophe upon themselves is past understanding?

But if the middle-aged widow finds a man who is suitable in years and social position and of an amiable and cheerful disposition and, withal, one whom she can love, I think she does well to marry again. For thereby she saves herself from two evils, loneliness and being a burden on her children.

The curse of the middle-aged woman is loneliness. When her children are little they are company for her and she is so absorbed in them that they fill her life and she has little need of other society, but as soon as they are grown the young birds leave the nest. No matter how much boys and girls love Mother, they don't want to spend their evenings entertaining her. They want to be out with boys and girls of their own age dancing and skylarking and having a good time.

And they can't take Mother along with them, because she doesn't fit into the picture. She doesn't want to do the things they want to do. She wet-blankets every festive occasion just by her presence. So Mother is left at home to play solitaire or listen to the radio or knit, with never a person to exchange a word with unless a neighbor happens to drop in.

And when the children get married it is worse. They go off and set up homes of their own. They are occupied with their own affairs. They are absorbed in their families and while, if they are dutiful children, they may take pity on Mother's loneliness and ask her to live with them, still they won't want her. They are happier and better off without her and she knows it.

The woman of 46 has the prospect of many years of life before her. She is strong and well and full of interest in everything and far from ready to retire to the chimney corner and become a parasite on her children. So I think she is always wise when she sticks to her own home, her own friends, her own occupation and makes her life as independent of her children as she can. That is happiest for her and for them, too.

And if she has found a man whom she likes as a fireside companion she is most wise if she annexes him also. DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—Last summer a 17-year-old high school girl was wronged by a college freshman. He offered to marry her but she refused. Her family has only learned of it now. Should they keep the matter quiet and let dead dogs lie or should they insist on the marriage? He has no means of supporting her. It will be impossible for them to avoid each other entirely next summer. GRATEFUL.

Answer: If it were my daughter, I should certainly not insist upon the marriage, because it would only be making a bad matter worse. The girl's life has been bruised by her indiscretion, but it would be wrecked entirely by forcing her into an unwilling marriage with a boy whom she does not love and who is in no position to marry.

Such an unholy union would be bound to end in disaster for both parties. Each would reproach the other with their plight. They would fight like cat and dog. They would bring out what was worst in each other and their characters deteriorate under the ordeal. Two wrongs have never yet made a right and to sacrifice a boy's and girl's every chance of happiness to the conventions is too high a price to pay.

I think God must be very pitiful to the sins of adolescence, when boys and girls stumble so often off the straight and narrow path because they have the passions of men and women with the lack of self-control of children. So my advice to the parents of this young girl would be not to force her to marry the boy who is repulsive to her, because he represents her own wrong doing to her, but to forgive her and to try to blot out the past as completely as they can. Perhaps just because she has made this one mistake she will rise to higher things. DOROTHY DIX.

POMPEIAN PRODUCTS FOR BEAUTY

Dear Miss Dix—I was very much in love with a man who jilted me. In my disappointment I married a splendid man who has been a perfect husband to me. I have everything a woman could want and two lovely children. Now the old lover has come back and tells me he can't forget me and I am miserable thinking of the life and love I might have had with this other man. Can you tell me anything that will give me a different outlook on my difficulty? DOROTHY.

It always seems to me that you like you have neither sense nor pride nor principle, and the pity of it is that with your maudlin sentimentality you can ruin the lives of worthwhile men and bring disgrace on your children.

Where is your intelligence that it doesn't enable you to see that your former lover isn't fit for your husband to wipe his shoes on? Where is your common sense that you cannot see how superior a gentleman is to a cad? Where is your pride that you do not hate and despise the man who humiliated you by casting you aside, who flouted you and jilted you? Where is your principle that makes you disloyal in spirit, if not actually in fact, to your marriage vow? Go to. I have no patience with such foolishness. DOROTHY DIX.

For The Cook

SWEET APPLE PICKLE

Peppers are kinder to housewives this season. They are large, full-shaped, with a beautiful rich red and green color. The finished pickle will serve as an excellent garnish for simple and fancy meals throughout the winter. And such a perfect contrast and complement for luncheon and dinner entrees!

Which reminds me, there is a letter here requesting a recipe for apple pickle. Apples are plentiful, too, and you might like to put up a few jars of these. They are good.

- 1 pint (2 cups) of brown sugar.
1 pint of vinegar.
2 sticks of cinnamon.
1 teaspoon of whole cloves.
1/2 gallon of sweet apples.
Pare, core and quarter the apples.
Make a syrup of the sugar, vinegar and spices. Cook the apples in the syrup until they are soft. Pack in hot sterile jars; cover with the syrup and seal.

Potato Puffs Sift together a half cup of flour and one and a half teaspoons of baking powder, a fourth teaspoon of salt and a little white pepper. To a cup of mashed potatoes add two eggs, well beaten, and then add gradually the flour mixture. Drop by teaspoonfuls into deep hot fat and fry until the puffs are a golden brown.

Women call it "a washday blessing"

NEW RICHER-SUDS SOAP

Speeds washing—saves work—costs less—because of its amazing sudsing power

Here is a bit of washing wisdom that overworked women are learning—suds are the secret of successful washing. It's important to remember that richer suds mean quicker, whiter washings. Old-type soaps make washing unnecessarily hard. So the makers of Ivory Soap have now perfected a new soap discovery—Oxydol—superior to previous soaps because of its almost magical sudsing power.

Women are surprised and delighted to find how much work it saves. That is why they are turning to this new soap sensation, everywhere. Oxydol is supercharged (with pure, rich soap) for 50% more suds than other soaps in granulated form—livelier, instant suds that last longer than others and therefore do more work.

Here are suds that do more work

Don't waste your strength with lazy, shirking suds. Oxydol suds are energetic—they do so much more of the hard work for you.

Weak, old-type suds, as you have surely found, can't get things really clean, because they quickly fizzle away to thin suds-water, which has no cleansing power.

This never happens with Oxydol—its suds always stand up—keep working—until the job is finished.

Soaks clothes white

You can bid farewell to tiresome rubbing when you start using Oxydol. It soaks clothes white.

Its livelier, richer suds lift the dirt right out of even the dirtiest things and float it away.

And everything comes out snowy-white and sweeter smelling—that's because they are really cleaner.

Softens hard water

Oxydol gives you the same rich, extra suds in either hard or soft water. That's important, for don't forget, even the softest water is instantly hardened when you put soiled clothes or dishes into it.

Wonderful for dishes—and so kind to hands

Grease scoots away from dishes, almost magically, in rich Oxydol suds. Women tell us that they would never do without it for dishes even if it had none of its other wonderful uses.

You'll know at once from the pleasant and comfortable way Oxydol leaves your hands that it is the right soap for even your most delicate clothes.

Start today to make your housework easier and quicker with Oxydol. Ask your grocer for the big-sized orange and blue package. It's a real wonder worker.
