BRIEF STORY OF THE LAST GAME OF THE WORLD SERIES.

BOSTON, Oct. 14.—Yesterday the Braves finished the contract. The briefest of all world's series for the Baseball Championship came to an end at Fenway Park.

It was only four games long, and the Braves won them all. They beat the Athletics yesterday afternoon 3 to 1.

Here they are, the lords of baseball creation, after carrying out the most remarkable campaign the U. S. National sport ever has known.

There were two out in the fifth inning and small prospects of anybody reaching first base, when the Boston got to work and broke up the game.

Rudolph, Moran and Evers collaborated in the concentration of attack which carried the day.

THE VICTROLA AND THE FAMILY—No. 1

and the Victrola are great friends. "I like to sit back and dream of the days gone by, while the Victrola, through its magic, recalls the old songs and singers to me.

"There's Tamagno and Plancon, Patti and Melba who still sing for me just as I used to hear them, at their best, although two are now dead and one has permanently retired from the stage. And the younger generation of singers, although I have never had an opportunity of hearing them personally, seem like old friends to me, so familiar have their voices become through their wonderfully beautiful Victor Records.

"All the rest of the family enjoy the Victrola just as much as I do. They all have their favorite music and their favorite singers and musicians. It doesn't seem to me as though there could be anything that could give so much pleasure to everybody as the Victrola does."

VICTROLA IV $20 With 15 double-sided, ten-inch Victor Records, $33.50
