be weighed with equal and kindly appreciation, where sacrifices called for the higher good of the human family are not shirked, where good will and exemplary loyalty to the plighted word reign supremely."

The Pope addressed himself to "individuals, peoples and governors" and renewed the peace plea he broadcast to the world from the Sistine Chapel shortly after his election March 2 to succeed the late Pius XI, "the Pope of peace."

Throughout his 12-minute homily, the Pontiff plainly expressed his concern at the world unrest.

"There is abroad in the world a feeling of agitation and discontent," he told the hushed throngs. "A fearful, unbalanced forerunner of worse ills seems to reign in many regions.

"When the arm of violence is substituted for the sceptre of justice no one need marvel at the appearance on the horizon of dull flashes of war in place of the longed-for dawn of peace."

Some of those remaining in the city gathered at Downing Street early this morning to cheer Mr. Chamberlain as he drove home.

Later a small crowd sang "He's A Jolly Good Fellow" when the Prime Minister and Mrs. Chamberlain went to Kew Gardens for tea, and in the evening police struggled with the biggest crowd which has jammed Downing Street since the September crisis.

Pimples Kill Many a Romance

The lives of many young people are made miserable by the breaking out of pimples on the face.

The trouble is not so much physical pain, but it is the mental suffering caused by the embarrassing disfigurement of the face which very often makes the sufferer ashamed to go out in company.

The quickest way to get rid of pimples is to improve the general health by a thorough cleansing of the blood of its impurities.

Unfavorable Weather For Easter Parade

NEW YORK, April 9—A spanking wind and near-freezing temperature chilled New York's multi-million-dollar Easter parade today and kept much of the lighter finery under winter wraps.

Early-morning snow flakes shortened Easter dawn services and despite a kindly sun at noon the publicized fashions had to be covered-mostly by mink and black caracul.

A crowd estimated at 75,000 jammed Fifth Avenue to watch the exit of dignitaries from St. Patrick's Cathedral.

What they saw, sartorially speaking, were the currently favored white straws and poke bonnets, incongruous adjuncts to winter furs; a few brave society lads holding top hats against the gusts —at a loss of dignity; and the season's crop of debutantes inaugurating their Easter special—carrying hats—but never wearing them.

Brenda Frazier, $5,000,000 heiress-glamor girl, who attended St. Thomas's on Fifth Avenue, wore a black poke bonnet festooned with purple and turquois ribbons, and a mink coat over her black crepe dress. Dianna Barrymore Blythe, deb daughter of Mrs. Harrison Tweed and of John Barrymore, wore a black crepe dress with fine pleated skirt, and no hat.

Umbrellas were in style in most of New England today, as rain and snow flurries dampened the Eastern parade. Easter ensembles peeked from beneath the protecting umbrellas and raincoats.

Silent British M. P.'s

(Manchester Guardian)

Sir Edward Campbell's record of 18 months' silence in the House of Commons, while (Cynically speaking) creditable, does not entitle him to any really proud place among the records of reticence. Major J. D. Hope, who was elected for Berwick in 1900 and retained his seat until 1922, did not during the whole of that time open his mouth in the House of Commons.

Another silent member achieved the remarkable feat of attaining front bench honors and actually becoming chief Government Whip without ever addressing the Speaker. This was Mr. Glyn, who, in 1872, when Disraeli called for an explanation from the Whips, mentioned that this was his first speech in 15 years.

But even these remarkable records shrink before the achievement of General Forester, who represented Much Wenlock for 40 years without finding it necessary or desirable to open his mouth on the affairs of his country or constituents.

A certain Sir Charles Burrell, who represented Westminster, might have beaten General Forester's record but for a single unhappy lapse into loquacity. Sir Charles sat for 60 years in the House and broke silence only once—to comment on a bill providing that housemaids should be forbidden to clean windows from the outside.

EXPECTED

sisters and wished Geraldine a long and happy reign.

He reported immediately to Il Duce on the way Italian troops had established control in the little kingdom wedged between Yugoslavia and Greece on the Adriatic.

After leaving Mussolini's office, Ciano went to the Foreign Ministry where he received the British Ambassador, the Earl of Perth.

Lord Perth was believed to have called in connection with reports that Britain might regard Italy's action as a violation of the 1938 Anglo-Italian Agreement to maintain the status quo in the Mediterranean.

Gives Assurances

Italians rejected any interference in their assumption of control over their little Mohammedan neighbor, reassured other anxious Balkan states the Good Friday invasion was not a hostile gesture toward Yugoslavia and insisted it was no violation of the accord with Britain.

"Italy does not know and does not recognize any particular vital interest of Great Britain and France in Albania," wrote Virginio Gayda, Fascism's chief newspaper mouthpiece, in La Voce D'italia.

An article in Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo D'italia of Milan declared that Italy's action in Albania, far from being a move against Yugoslavia, was undertaken for the welfare of that state and for the preservation of good relations between Albania and Italy

Neither, said the article, was the move in violation of the Anglo-Italian accord since no vital interests of Great Britain were affected.

Gayda declared Italy considered she had stayed within the letter and spirit of the accord. With the charge that Britain had designs for an economic and strategic monopoly over Albania, he declared that if she wanted to take a view in opposition to Italy she also would have to take the consequences.

Duce To Speak Today

Mussolini was expected to fly to Tirana tomorrow and it was believed the world then might learn through a speech by Il Duce whether Italy's King Emanuele would succeed to the Throne of exiled Zog as he did to the abandoned throne of Haile Selassie after Ethiopia was brought within Italy's growing empire.

An Italian communique indicated about 30,000 soldiers were used in the swift occupation of Albania. The Fascist troops encountered resistance when they landed at dawn Friday on the Albanian coast but quickly sent Zog's outnumbered and ill-armed tribesmen scurrying to the hills.

It said the heaviest resistance was encountered by the main Italian column which landed at Durazzo.

The navy's most important role was in transporting troops and patrolling the Straits of Otranto, a neck of the Adriatic between Albania and Italy's east coast, the communique said. Fascist naval and air forces also supported the army of occupation with bombardments Friday of Albanian coastal cities.

A total of 384 airplanes engaged in the operations, Italian officials said, chiefly in dropping circulars on Albanian centres urging the populace to accept Italian occupation as a move for Albanian welfare.

PRAYERS

some centres reporting snow and rain.

In most churches pastors offered prayers that world peace may be maintained. Petitions also were offered on behalf of those countries subjected to the horrors of war and on behalf of persecuted refugees throughout the world.

Many persons braved unfavorable weather to attend open-air sunrise services. More than 1,500 attended a seven o'clock service in Toronto's Willowvale Park. Bright sunshine prevailed for the service but later in the day skies became overcast. Temperatures were in the low 30s.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King spent the Easter week-end at his Kingsmere country estate on the Gatineau River where he was believed to have been kept fully informed on the unsettled European situation. Most of the Dominion cabinet ministers spent the week-end away from the capital where snow reduced the Easter parade turnout.

Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General, and Lady Tweedsmuir spent the day on a train en route east from Calgary. Their Excellencies have been holidaying on the Pacific coast.

Accident Victim Was Native Of This Province

Mr. E. N. Easter of North Wiltshire, P. E. I., received the sad news that his brother Wm. H. Easter of St. Vincent, Minnesota, U. S. A., had died. Mr. Easter had been breaking a road open with the tractor and grader and in some way got caught in the lugs of the tractor, he was very seriously injured and was taken to Drayton Hospital for treatment. Sixteen stitches were placed in the fractured leg. Pleural pneumonia then set in but he became much improved and was about to leave the hospital when he suddenly collapsed and passed away. It is said he died from a heart condition aggravated by clotting in the blood stream.

Mr. Easter was a well known farmer and in addition to his farming activities conducted an extensive cattle buying business. He was 64 years of age. During the many years he lived in the St. Vincent section he earned the respect and esteem of the populace of North Kittson County. His death was a big loss to the community.

Rev. Mr. Corbett who was a personal friend conducted the funeral service.

Those left to mourn are his wife, one son and two daughters, besides three brothers and four sisters.

Mr. W. S. Easter was formerly a native of North Wiltshire, Prince Edward Island.

In George VI Dominion Will See First "King Of Canada"

BY THOMAS WAYLING

NEA Service Special Correspondent

OTTAWA, Canada,— Half way across Canada on his transcontinental tour King George VI will stop at old Fort Garry Gate in Winnipeg, Manitoba.

As his private car comes to a halt, an officer of the Hudson's Bay Company will step forward, welcome the royal couple to the company's domain and present the King with two elk heads and two beaver skins. This tribute, mandatory under the company's ancient charter whenever a British sovereign might visit its domain will be the first—and perhaps the only —one King George VI ever will receive from his Canadian subjects.

The moment His Majesty enters Canadian waters next May his status immediately changes. His position and his relationship to the Canadian government are established—unlike the elk-head-and-beaver-skin tribute — by recent law.

Once in Canada, George VI becomes King of Canada, which he was specifically crowned in Westminster Abbey in 1937. He acquires an entirely new set of advisors. His prime minister no longer is umbrella-toting Neville Chamberlain but the gracious Canadian premier, W. L. Mackenzie King. Technically, at least, Chamberlain is out of a job as long as the King is in Canada.

The King's expenses are paid, not by the British but by the Canadian Parliament. Responsibility for his safety rests not with Scotland Yard but with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

George VI will be the first British king ever to reign in person in Canada and he was the first one ever to be crowned specifically King of Canada. His coronation was with a definite reference to Canada as a nation "equal in status" with the United Kingdom and all other British dominions and with its own king. Other monarchs had been crowned "King of Great Britain and Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the Seas," with Canada still considered a British "possession."

In 1926 Canad led the British dominions into full nationhood. They brought about at the Imperial Conference of that year the Declaration of London, confirming Canada's full autonomy, with the crown the only empire link. Today, only the Canadian government can advise the King on any affair respecting the dominion.

The King's permanent representative in Canada is Lord Tweedsmuir, the governor-general, sent to Canada from England with the consent of the Canadian government. But Lord Tweedsumir, after greeting Their Majesties, will fade into the background, remain in Ottawa while the King and Queen go touring.

The Prime Minister will accompany the royal party on their journey. The program for the visit is under his direction with details being handled by the Under-Secretary of State.

In each province the leading dignitaries will be the dominion cabinet ministers from the province. The lieutenant-governors, Canadians who represent the Crown in the provinces, will be in charge of affairs.

King George decided to visit Canada on the suggestion of Prime Minister King at the time the premier was in London for the coronation and advised His Majesty on Canadian affairs. The King agreed, but before the trip could be undertaken, the consent of his British prime minister was necessary.

The Canadian government has appropriated $350,000 for the royal tour and an additional $75,000 for the program in the Capitol. Most of the $350,000 will be spent on transportation. Each province will bear the cost of entertaining the King's party in its own domain and each city will finance its own show.

And while the King is in Canada, the King can do not wrong. The Prime Minister must shoulder all responsibility for all the King says and does. But the King will say and do all that the Prime Minister says he should say and do.

When at his coronation King George VI received the imperial crown of state he wears above, he became the first British sovereign to be specifically crowned "King of Canada."

Canada's governor-general, Lord Tweedsmuir, above, is George VI's permanent representative in the Dominion when the King is not there. The coming visit of the King and Queen will be the first time that any Dominion governor-general has been superseded by his royal principal.

How Soon WILL IT Lay Eggs?

JUST when the new chicks will begin to produce is a vital question to all poultry raisers.

A similar problem confronts the business man who invests in advertising. How soon will it show results?

The answer of course depends on the nature of his business, the amount, and the frequency of his advertising . . . but most important of all . . . the medium which he uses.
