HOW CROPS USE WATER

One of the most interesting studies in connection with crop production is moisture supply and its relation to crop growth. In this regard the following extract from Bulletin No. 98 (N. S.) of the Dominion Department of Agriculture on crop rotations and soil management is of special interest:

"Plants growing in the soil have the power of extracting water held by the soil through their roots. This water which also contains dissolved material from the soil, enables the plant to function normally; the water is afterwards passed off through the leaves of the plant. If additional supplies in the form of rain do not arrive the reserve of moisture in the soil is soon exhausted and the crop is injured.

A growing crop of grain begins to make a perceptible use of water when it is about 4 to 6 inches in height. If an ample supply be available the rate of use of water increases with the growth until the grain begins to head out. The rate is then maintained at the maximum until ripening of the grain begins when the amount of water used falls off rapidly. If for any cause the supply of water runs short the crop is forced to adjust itself to the deficiency and the yield is lessened. Under very favourable conditions a crop of wheat can use as much as half an inch of water daily when at its maximum requirement, and experiments have shown that such a crop can easily dispose of as much as 20 inches during its growth. When it is remembered that 20 inches of precipitation is considered a good total annual amount for the prairies, many districts receiving considerably less than this, and further, that under ordinary conditions a large part of the annual rainfall is lost to crops by evaporation and run off, it is remarkable that satisfactory yields can be secured under such comparatively low rainfall. Fortunately the distribution of the rainfall on the prairies, as a rule, fits in admirably with the needs of spring seeded grain crops, the greatest amounts being received at the time of greatest need.

high esteem in which he was held in the city.

During the service a mixed choir sang the hymns "Softly and Tenderly Jesus Is Calling," "God Will Take Care of You," "Nearer My God To Thee" and "Abide With Me" and a vocal solo, "In The Garden" was sung by Mrs. R. L. Steves.

The pall-bearers were John B. MacDonald, P. C. Johnson, Peter MacLean, T. T. Goodwin, J. M. Queen and A. S. Stillwell.

Among those from out of town attending were Miss Helen Hubbard, Montreal, J. M. Queen, Arthur S. Stillwell and Gordon Banks, Sain John, Mrs. I. J. Cale, Richibucto and Clarence Miller, Boundary Creek.

Raymond MacMurdo, of Spencer Mass., a brother was also among those attending, as were the sons of the dead man Jack, Jewel and family, St. Catharines, Becher, Medford, Mass., and Reginald and Family, Truro.

At the conclusion of the service the casket was conveyed to the waiting hearse and a long cortege slowly formed and proceeded to Elmwood cemetery, where interment was made.

MRS. PETER GILLIS

The many friends on Prince Edward Island will be sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Peter Gillis who died in Newport, R. I. A sister of John J. MacDonald, Pisquid and a aunt of Mrs. (Dr.) W. J. MacMillan, Charlottetown.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Ellen Gillis, wife of Peter Gillis, took place Monday from her late home on Brandt street to St. Joseph's Church. Rev. Charles J. Mahoney, formerly of this city and now of Providence, celebrated a mass of requiem, and Rev. Edward A. Higney, pastor of St. Joseph's and Rev. John W. Marren officiated at the grave in St. Columba's cemetery. The bearers were Dougald, Herman, Everett, and Charles Gillis, nephews, Philip McDougall and Robert Horton.
