ABBIES VS RAMBLERS at Arena tonight. First class hockey.

A CORRECTION.—With reference to an item in yesterday's Guardian on the purchase of speed in the United States, it should have been stated that the purchase was made by Mr. F. G. Kennedy, and not by Messrs Kennedy and McNeill. The mare is not intended for racing, but for breeding purposes only.

AMHERST VS. CHARLOTTE TOWN.—Best hockey of season at Arena tonight.

AMHERST VS ABBIES.—The postponed game between the Ramblers of Amherst and the Abbeys will take place tonight at the Arena. This is the first game on local ice between these teams, and as the contest is between them in Amherst were very closely fought, a thrilling encounter will doubtless be seen. The Amherst team is now on the crest of championship form, having won out in the Nova Scotia and New Brunswick League with flying colors. Local pride will stimulate the Red and Black to put forth their best endeavors to win from the visitors. These games are the finals of a home and home series, and the outcome will be awaited with great interest by hockey fans.

NORTH RIVER NOTES.—The people of this vicinity regret very much the departure of their pastor, Rev. H. R. Bell.—Mrs. Nelson Williams is slowly recovering after her recent illness.—The friends of Miss Lillian McKinnon are sorry to learn that she is confined to her bed through sickness.—The people of North River regret very much to learn of the illness of Mr. Furnun.—Mrs. John Jewell, Sr. has returned home after spending the week-end in Charlottetown, the guest of Mrs. William Vickerson.—Mr. Harold Yeo was in the city Wednesday on business.—East Wiltshire school is progressing very favorably under the management of Miss Mabel Cruwys.—The people of North River were very much surprised to hear of the sudden departure of Mr. Daniel MacArthur to Halifax, but are greatly pleased to learn that he has returned.—Mr. John A. Jewell's speedy mare is recovering from her sickness.—Mr. James Morisset of North River has sold a beautiful herd of cattle, for which he received a handsome sum.—Mr. James Jewell returned home after visiting friends in Kingston.—Mr. Eddie Yeo and Mr. Fred Jewell, paid a flying visit recently to Warren Grove.

FULFILLED

Sometimes a stranger's face among the crowd Tugs at our heart-strings, calls our souls aloud And not as aliens do our glances meet.

Some day, some day, But as a friend long loved our hearts would greet. Life's burdens closely press on us today.

We have not time just now to learn the way That leads between our souls, Beneath heaven's vernal trees we shall sit free

And sweet acquaintance know. For thee and me There shall be time and all eternity On earth, so many fair hopes unfulfilled.

On earth so many joys too early chilled; Such blessed hours were ours, had God but willed—

We'll know them all, in Heaven. The flowers that I added here for frost to blast; Those fair and rosy morns too bright to last; Sweet memories we all hold in our past—

Shall bloom for us in Heaven. No joy is lost tho' but the memory stays; No love eclipsed, but brightens all our days; Clouds cannot steal from us our sunny days.

They were for us, in Heaven. Some day! Some day—our dreams will all come true; Some day, will come to comfort me and you

More than we think or ask for, Or hope can fancy in youth's brightest gleams; For God's own hand shall lead us by Life's stream

Of pure delight, and then our eyes shall see The joys laid up in heaven for you and me.

And when we walk with Him, the Crucified— We shall be satisfied. —Bernice S. Ladeau, in Zion's Herald.

SHARK SKIN FOOTWEAR

Shod by the skin of the shark, mankind may come into the enjoyment of low prices in footwear and a soft, but investigation to find an occasional wanderer wearing sharkleather shoes, though they are few in this part of the country and not numerous yet even in Alaska, where the shark abound.

Thus far the world has relied on the horse the cow, the sheep and the goat to supply it with leather and skins for shoes, gloves, upholstery articles, bags and wallets. It will turn its attention next to the almost inexhaustible supply of marine life, for it has been demonstrated that the shark, the whale, the eel and other fish, yield hides that have promising leather qualities in them. This is especially true of the shark, whose hide has been going through the tannery for some time and found its way to the leather category of industries.

People have now been looking to the sea very long for leather, as their acquaintance with fish skin generally is limited to the varieties that are soft, but investigation into this subject demonstrates that toughness resides in fish skin in more generous measure than can be found among land animals, for green shark hide is several times tougher than the hide of a steer and eel skin is 25 times as tough.

Mr. Lavarne applied his skill in the tanning art to some eel skins once and secured a pair of gloves from them that will never wear out. Quality of the eel skin long ago and two parts of the flail, the old-fashioned instrument for threshing, which subjects the skin to the supreme test.—Boston Transcript.

TRAVEL IN JAPAN

With the advent of the "modern hotel" in Japan the old inns, or resthouses, have been to a large extent relegated to obscurity, but some still survive in parts where European travelers seldom penetrate.

The king of welcome according to visitors in one of the village inns is very far removed from western ideas of hospitality. Here is the interesting experience of a traveler as related in The Caterer and Hotelkeepers' Gazette:

"As soon as I arrived I was conducted by the polite hostess into the chief guestroom, which looked out upon the cool orchard of a temple.

"Cushions were brought in, and bright kimonos I took off my dusty English clothes, and put on first the lower kimono, made of cotton, and then a gaudy silk one, bright with the colors of the hotel.

"The room, like all Japanese rooms, was bare except for a single decoration. There is always a special corner for the room's ornament, which is sometimes a vase of flowers, sometimes a piece of china, sometimes simply a painting upon silk or a woodcut. The subjects are not seldom such as bring a blush to the European cheek, but they have no such effect on the Japanese, who seem more concerned with the arrangement than the subject of the ornament. There are strict rules for decoration; it is laid down, for example, that flowers of different colors should not be mixed in one vase.

"At length, because I was fasting, a low table and a brazier were brought in and set in front of me and my cushions.

"Every time I thought I had finished, the hostess or one of the maids would trip in with another tray of dishes and put them before me on the table. Had I not been able to use chopsticks before, I should certainly have become expert by the end of that meal.

"A little while after the meal—for it did not last—I was told that the bath was ready. I was taken to the open courtyard and introduced to the arrangements there.

"Two huge barrels were sunk in the earth, one filled with hot, the other with cold water. There was a thin screen on two sides—not against prying eyes, but simply to keep off the wind. Indeed, as I began to take off my kimonos an interested audience of both sexes turned to watch me. This was unpleasant, and I did my best to dodge their gaze behind the screen.

"I might have saved myself the trouble. A moment later, in reply to the eels of the innkeeper, and his wife, their daughter came up hastily to bathe me, as her duty was. She was not in the least embarrassed—and I soon had other things to worry me, for when, at the young lady's direction, I let myself down into the hot tub I discovered that, in the usual Japanese fashion, the heat of the water in it was not less than 115 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Up to my neck in that hot bath I suffered excruciating torture, which turned to the most excruciating agony when I stepped on the still hotter kettle lying on the bottom of the tub. The innkeeper's daughter pulled me out, red as a lobster and very nearly boiled. She dropped me, more dead than alive, into the cold tub, pulled me out again and dried me.

"Then she bowed politely, and left me to return to my room."

DRANK SHIP DRY.

Although the Cunard liner Mauretania had a record stock of liquors placed on her at New York, the steamer's lockers were empty on her arrival at Southampton.

The liner's bar was besieged by thirsty passengers from the moment she passed outside the three-mile zone. The Mauretania's stewards declare that increased storage room for beverages is absolutely necessary for her future trips.

"Why don't you go out before your people and tell them you have earned this great office and you want it because you are entitled to it?"

"That procedure," rejoined Senator Sorghum, "would be extremely unbusinesslike. No polished politician thinks of accepting public responsibility excepting with reluctance and as great favor to his fellow men."—Washington Star.

NO LOSS OF ANIMATION "I suppose, Crimson Gulch is quieter since the bar closed." "Not yet," said Cactus Joe. "All tions" and everybody begins to argue at the top of his voice."
