Canadian division. Haynes started two pretty plays that resulted in goals and scored another as he sparked an attack that thoroughly humbled the visitors.

Gagnon was moved to Haynes' line and had his best night in weeks, scoring twice and getting an assist. But the entire habitant team was flying in its fourth straight victory and Leafs were never contenders.

Haynes Jackson played only intermittently on the front line and Conny Smythe, Toronto Manager who was spending his birthday, was asked if Jackson was all right. "No, he's all right," Smythe shot back. "He just isn't checking his wing."

Gagnon opened the scoring in the first six minutes while Reg Hamilton of Leafs was serving a penalty and Haynes made it 2-0 before the period close. Hockey Is Pleasing To English Fans But Need Of Homebrews Stressed

LONDON, Feb. 1.—(CP)—Britain is trying hard to understand hockey and the Canadians who serve it up in London's big sports arenas. A great section of the public has already succumbed to the dash and sparkle and each of the seven teams in the National League plays before crowds of 6,000 to 12,000.

While the game has a long way to go before it becomes an accepted institution like soccer and cricket, it is rapidly expanding and newspapers are devoting increasing space to it.

Writing his impressions of his first game, A. J. Cummings, star leader of the News-Chronicle, probably hit the nail on the head when he concluded with: "Ice hockey may come to stay; but not, I think, unless it receives a strong home stimulus through the training of English players to take the place eventually of these clever young exhibitionists from overseas."

The British Ice Hockey Association is already doing something about this. The association has encouraged junior leagues at Wembley and Harringay and young English players have been putting in preliminary to the big games each night. On Saturday and Sunday afternoons a dozen amateur teams made up entirely of English-born players have been meeting in exhibition series.

Meanwhile the game as presented by National League Canadians is undergoing a thorough examination. Cummings had a great time at his first game and he put into writing the general impression of English hockey fans. He found the rink crowded with excited players to take the place eventually with sustained interest and their reactions were very much like those of other sport crowds.

Let me say at once that, seen as I saw it for the first time, modern ice hockey is a fast and fascinating spectacle. It did not seem to be quite so skillful as soccer or so varied as the rugby code. It was roughish but no more rough than ordinary club football.

Speakers of the awarding of penalties the writer said: "The offenders, ordered to the arena usually for two minutes, occupy a small penalty box outside the barrier; and there they sit until their 'time expires,' all view of the spectators, like naughty boys in a school class room sent to the corner by a stern teacher."

The spoke of the fans, who are rapidly becoming as vigorous as their Canadian contemporaries: "But there was no menace in these familiar human cries. They were an accepted part of the ring-side technique. The crowd's ferocity might be described as Puckish in content rather than Simian."

After a series of pitched battles on the ice which resulted in long suspensions for the combatants, J. F. Ahearne, B. I. H. A. secretary explained to English sports writers: "But there is nothing vicious about the boys. The fact is the physical strain of ice hockey is so terrific that you must have extraordinary mental balance to keep yourself in rein. Tempers are recovered as quickly as they are lost."

Charles Buchan, sports editor of The News-Chronicle, added his voice to the argument. He puts hockey at the head of the list of the games giving the greatest opportunities for bad temper and explains: "When you are travelling on ice at 40 miles an hour and someone willfully or accidentally trips you up, you are liable to get seriously annoyed. The faster the same the more chances of temper. Ice hockey is the fastest of all games."

Baseball Season Opens April 19

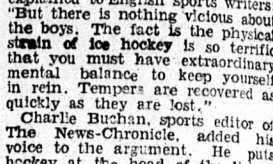

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—(AP)—The National Baseball League schedule for 1938, devoid of anything in the novelty line, was made public tonight following its formal adoption at the league schedule meeting.

As in the past few years, it calls for each team to make four trips into the other sector of the league, and splits up the Sunday and holidays dates as even as possible. The season will open April 19 and end Oct. 1. Last year the opening and closing came one day later.

The opening day's schedule calls for Boston to play at New York, Brooklyn at Philadelphia, Chicago at Cincinnati and St. Louis at Pittsburgh.
