Especially were those in attendance treated to a thrill when in the 2.22 class Little June Bug, owned by H. T. Fulton of Stewiacke, and driven by J. W. Smith outmanoeuvred W. E. EXPERTS EXPECT BATTLE TO RUN LIMIT OF 7 GAMES

Although Many Wagers Are Placed at Odds of 6 to 5 on New York, Tendency Towards Even Money Develops.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—With another day's practice under their belts, the Yankees and Cardinals believe themselves primed for a finish fight in the battle for the world's baseball championship that starts Saturday in the open spaces of the Yankee Stadium. Experts who watched the rival teams put in brisk workouts at the American League park this afternoon as well as the advance guard of fanboys, are confident that the series will equal as hotly contested as those of 1924 and 1925, each of which went the full limit of seven games.

The closely matched playing strength of the two teams as well as the ability of each to rally under reverses, strengthens the prospect of a keenly fought title battle. Although Wall Street betting commissions have established the Yankees as slight favorites, many wagers being placed at odds of 6 to 5, a tendency toward even money was indicated today as Yankee supporters encountered the rush of incoming Cardinal rooters.

Those who favor the Cardinals—and the National League's backing isn't all from St. Louis—believe that Rogers Hornsby and his men will ride to triumph on the same "wave of destiny" that propelled Washington to victory in its first world's series in 1924. Indomitable fighting spirit carried the Cardinals to their first National League pennant. Observers believe this spirit, backed by tremendous home town enthusiasm will fire the St. Louis outfit to championship accomplishment.

The spirit on conquest was evident in today's betting and field drill of the Cardinals. Hornsby still was visibly affected by the death of his mother and courageously put as much zest as possible into his own efforts. The manager's ordeal has strengthened for him by his men and his decision through the series appears to have fired them to renewed determination.

Neither Hornsby nor Miller Huggins, Yankee pilot, shed further light on their pitching selections. Hornsby said he would not make any choice before tomorrow night, but the Cardinal camp seems certain it will be either Willie Sherdel or Grover Cleveland Alexander. The annoying effects of a slowball on the energy of the Yankees' attack may sway Hornsby's selection to Sherdel who possesses a tantalizing twist of this variety. The Yankee twirling choice is understood to rest between Herb Pennington and Earl Clark of the latter's trial here.

Norwegian Pole Vault Champ Seeks $100,000 Balm Off Amateur Body

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 1.—The Times says that Charles Hoff, Norwegian pole vault champion, who turned professional recently, has filed a suit for $100,000 against officials of the Amateur Athletic Union charging that they have influenced United States immigration authorities to deny him an extension of a permit to remain in the country. Hoff has been notified that it will be necessary for him to leave Oct. 12th. An attempt to take out naturalization papers brought the information that Hoff must first return to Norway, Hoff said, and wait three years before he can make application for citizenship. The vaulter charges that he was forced into professionalism to earn a living, following his suspension by the A. A. U. last May, for failing to appear in an athletic meet in San Francisco. U. S. officials claimed they had barred Hoff from further competition for his own good, alleging that their only other alternative was to professionalize him.

Morgan Defends Lightweight Title

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Tod Morgan, of Seattle, successfully defended his lightweight championship against an onslaught by Joe Glick, of Brooklyn, when he won a decision in a 15-round bout here tonight.

Morgan was able to avoid the jinx pursuing champions in all branches of sport, at least since 1925 by taking no chances with his opponent who brought a dangerous but wild left to the championship arena. The champion was cautious throughout the early rounds but grew less timid as the bout progressed and finally after the tenth round began to show aggressiveness lacking in the earlier stages. Glick was floored for a count of five in the eleventh round but came back in impressive fashion and finished the round fighting. This was the only semblance of a knockdown, during the fifteen rounds. Morgan weighed 128 1/2 and Glick was one pound heavier.
