P.E.I. ARMY CHAPLAIN ARRIVES IN ENGLAND—Letters have been received from Rev. R. Macdonald by friends in Kensington and Indian River. Father Macdonald left an Eastern Canada port a short time ago with a contingent of the 2nd Division of Indian River and Kensington for the past ten years. He returned on the tranquil, uneventful trip across the ocean which was as nearly as a joke. He said there was a wave that a "north side" story would not "take". On the deck of the ship, he met the Irish and the poetic inspiration of Scott and Moore came to his mind. He and Father Macdonald (another Islander) made the trip together and attached to military hospitals in England. Father Macdonald had the pleasure of being directed through the hospital by Miss McLean of Charlottetown who is a niece of Harry Macdonald. He seems to have acquired the British spirit very quickly. He says in England we might have an air raid at any time, at any place yet no one seems to be afraid. We just move along, hoping for the best and not afraid of

Ontario Plants Quicken Output To Aid Britain

TORONTO, Aug. 12—(CP)—Ontario, with the largest population and the greatest industrial development of the Canadian provinces, assumed a leading role in many phases of the national war effort from the start of hostilities.

Factories went into high speed production on uniforms, arms, motor transport, aircraft, volunteers flocked to recruiting stations, and exhibition buildings were transformed into barracks as the patriotic sentiments of the people of Ontario were translated into action.

Industrial activity was perhaps Ontario's greatest contribution to the national war effort. With other provinces Ontario shared the honor of sending men into the armed forces of the British Empire as well as fitted to provide a wide variety of the articles required in war.

These included guns, ships, aircraft, munitions, clothing, tents, rubber tires, gas masks and ground sheets.

Possibly the most important industrial enterprises were the machine tool manufacturing plants, producing Bren light machine guns at Toronto and the great Ford and General Motors automobile at Windsor and St. Catharines, respectively.

The two motor companies pooled their facilities to produce a complete line of army transport, trucks, gun tractors and all the motor means to move in the field. Each company specialized in certain parts for the vehicles and some parts were bought from other Ontario plants. The Canadian forces overseas and are being supplied to the British forces as well.

Steel Mills Busy

A number of the large explosives and other war plants being set up under government auspices are located in Ontario. Ontario's steel mills are a valuable link in the industrial front of the Empire. From them comes much of the metal used in war industries throughout Canada.

Formation of the 1st and 2nd divisions on the outbreak of war set some eight Ontario infantry units, not to speak of numerous artillery and servicing units, to work.

Recruiting was brisk and the units soon reached war strength. It was again brisk when the 3rd and 4th regiments claimed more militia equipment and the big drive for militia volunteers was launched by Deputy Minister Ralston a few weeks ago.

The huge grounds of the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto with their spacious exhibition property were turned into military quarters for soldiers and old men throughout the province.

Kensington, Ontario's old military city, saw but city spring into being at nearby Barriefield where signals troops from all over Canada were concentrated for training.

As much of the activity of the Royal Canadian Air Force centred in Ontario even before the war, at Borden and Trenton, it was not surprising that the first establishments of the British Commonwealth Air Training plan should open in Ontario.

The first trainees under the plan received their initial training at a school established in Toronto. Apart from this initial training school, the plan calls for many other establishments in Ontario, a number of which are in operation. They include eight elementary flying training schools, three service flying schools, three air observer training schools, three bombing and gunnery schools and an air navigation school.

These are for the training of pilots, air observers and air gunners. Apart from many establishments for the training of personnel who will serve in the various trades required to make them usefully employed in the flying aircraft.

The provision of guards for Ontario's vital power plants, the Welland Canal and industrial establishments was a problem which occurred

S'side Town Council Meets

The regular monthly meeting of the Summerside town council was held last night in the council chamber. Mayor Campbell presiding.

After the usual routine business, the meeting was adjourned until Wednesday evening, when the matter of purchasing two new units for the electrical plant will be discussed. The matter was laid over until Wednesday, so that the council can meet a representative from a Montreal firm in regards to the purchase of the units.

After a petition had been read from a number of citizens it was decided to send the matter to Standard time, commencing on Wednesday.

A petition was read from residents on Ottawa street, asking that the condition of certain posts there be looked after by the town clerk was instructed to enquire of the town recorder what authority the council had in this matter.

Apple Seeds Have Health Giving Substance

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE Associated Press Science Editor

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 12—(AP)—Apple seeds are rich in a muscle-regulating substance, probably a vitamin, whose discovery was described today at the University of Oregon Medical School. Eating ground apple seeds, or drinking the oil which is pressed from them, both caused remarkable recoveries in animals near death with wasted muscles.

The apple seed properties were found in experiments in the nutritional research laboratory, under the direction of Dr. Ira A. Manville, clinical associate professor of medicine.

The muscular diseases from which the animals, rabbits, guinea pigs and rats, suffered were experiments that is, induced, but they were precisely the same as a serious class of human ills. Lou Gehrig's trouble is one of the animals'.

Dr. Manville said there may be some other missing factor of diet besides Vitamin E. The nature of this other factor is unknown.

Animals with muscles so flabby that they seemed paralyzed, were restored to near normal appearance in 24 hours by apple seed oil. They had been too weak to eat. In two or three days they were eating and grooming themselves.

The oil was a complete preventative for the muscular paralysis even when all vitamin E was removed from the diet.

Wheat germ oil also is a cure for this muscular trouble in animals, but Dr. Manville said it costs about $12 a pint, while the new apple seed remedy would be cheap.

NO MORE WEDDINGS AT GRETNA SMITHY

GRETNA GREEN, Scotland, Aug. 12—(CP)—The anvil can be carried back into the blacksmith shop of this noted Dumfriesshire village, no longer to serve as an improvised altar.

Changes in the Scottish marriage law have ended the practice, long in vogue, of couples getting married in front of the anvil, a custom that dates back to 1754.

Ever since the village became known as the scene of clandestine marriages after abolition of "Pled Marriage" nearly 200 years ago, it had become a tradition for the village smithy to perform the rites for those seeking to avoid customary ceremony.

From generation to generation the "right" of the village smithy was handed down. Mrs. Jessie Graham, 80, had held the office since performing the first ceremony at the anvil this century, and she stood at her old post when Allison B. Gibson, a miner and Agnes Brown were married just before changes in the statutes, outlawed such ceremonies.

Now marriages in Scotland must be performed by a sheriff, registrar or minister.

To mark the end of the unique tradition, villagers arranged for Gibson and his bride to be driven to the smithy in an ancient gold-painted coach that carried runaway lovers on similar trips for many years back.

Borden Line Shipping Club Hold Annual

The annual meeting of the Borden Line Live Stock Club was held in the school house at Albany, P.E.I. on Monday evening, July 19, when the business of the previous year, ending May 31, 1940 came under review.

It is gratifying to report that, even although operating under adverse conditions during the latter part of the year, the club came through with a slightly increased volume of business. The decision to "carry on" even more energetically during the year upon which the club had just entered, was decided upon, and the new Board of Directors was called to meet for the transaction of business on Monday night, July 22. This meeting took place as per schedule and the following officers were appointed: Pres., Vernon Craig, vice-pres., Irvine Toombs, secretary, George McKay. This executive working together with the other members of the Board of Directors, are determined that the Borden Line Shipping Club which has served for the past 12 years, with a marketing service that has put the local price of hogs practically on a par with the price of hogs in other parts of Canada, shall continue giving this useful service, and with improvements if possible.

The new secretary, Mr. McKay, is a farmer who injects considerable energy in the prosecution of his own agricultural pursuits, and of the fact that he is prepared to devote a portion of his time to this public service, should be enough to warrant expectation of the practical support and co-operation of every hog producer in the district. Here is an opportunity for a more complete co-operation of the members of the club, and the virus of true co-operation. Let's have your support.

Old Nazi Pilots Let Youngsters Take The Risks

By Frank Elcherty Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Aug. 12—(CP)—Despite the use of many young and inexperienced pilots the German air force bombed with deadly accuracy in the battle of France, according to a young American veteran of the French Air Force.

Some units in the Ottawa command, for instance, are taking 500 men to camp. Others are taking only 350. But at one time or another all the volunteer militiamen will train for a week or two in camp in addition to their drills two or three nights a week at unit headquarters.

Training Continuous

Starting with the militia summer camps now functioning in different parts of Canada training will be practically continuous in the militia until the end of the year. It will not be continuous for the individual militiamen but there will always be some men in training under a cadre of permanently employed instructors and administrative officers.

Except for extra training and greater possibilities of being placed on active service the duties of a militiaman differ little in wartime from the duties in peacetime.

He is expected to take a certain amount of training which is arranged in such a way as to interfere as little as possible with his civilian occupation. He is liable to be called out for duty with his unit for service in Canada in case of an emergency.

In peacetime enlistment in the militia is voluntary and camps is voluntary, for practical purposes. In peacetime a man signs on for three years when he enlists.

Under war conditions to date enlistment in the militia has been voluntary but men sign on for three years or the duration of the war, whichever is longer. After Aug. 15 no more voluntary enlistments will be accepted. Men will be called into the militia by age groups starting with single men aged 21.

There are 193,000 single men in Canada of 21 and 22 years but some of them, of course, are already in the militia. Others may be judged medically unfit for compulsory training, scheduled to start about Oct. 1. The number of 30 days' basic training in one of

Non-permanent Active Militia Destined To Play Big Role In War

OTTAWA, Aug. 12—(CP)—The Non-Permanent Active Militia of Canada is destined to play a big role in the present war, so big in fact that the term "non-permanent" is much less descriptive than in peacetime.

This is the branch of the army which Canadians have been joining by the thousands in the past three weeks or so. In the militia they become part-time soldiers and upwards of 50,000 of them will receive training at militia camps between now and the time snow flies.

But, apart from serving as the foundation for and the gateway to the Canadian Active Service Force which serves full time both at home and overseas, the militia stands by to meet emergencies which may arise in or close to Canada.

The step from militia to the Canadian Active Service Force for service anywhere is taken voluntarily, however. Should militia units be mobilized into the C. A. S. F. men will have the choice of re-enlisting for service anywhere or remaining as militiamen.

Latest official figures show N. P. A. M. strength at 68,349 on Aug. 8 and since then the number has increased. Some men, however, will not get a stretch of training at camp before autumn ends because facilities would be overtaxed.

Some units in the Ottawa command, for instance, are taking 500 men to camp. Others are taking only 350. But at one time or another all the volunteer militiamen will train for a week or two in camp in addition to their drills two or three nights a week at unit headquarters.

Military necessity will also decide the amount of training to be given when another year rolls around to men now in the militia and those who will enter within the next 12 months.

Under the National Resources Mobilization Act which authorized the compulsory call, the militia will serve more as stepping stone to service in the Canadian Active Service Force than ever before. To some extent it will also be a pathway to service in the air force and the navy.

For many volunteers are required the tendency will be to look to the militia who have received their basic training in the militia in preference to men with no training at all. Thus volunteers from the militia will stand a better chance of getting into the full-time services than outsiders.

SAYS WORLD'S FATE HANGS IN BALANCE

JOHANNESBURG, Aug. 12—(CP)—An appeal to women to join men in taking the place of men released for active service was voiced by Mrs. Jan Smuts in address to members of the National Council here.

"We are fighting Nazism, murder, torture—call it what you like—but we are up against something terrible," the wife of the South African Prime Minister said. "We have gone back centuries to barbarism, to things which we thought could never happen again."

The fate of millions, she said, hangs in the balance and it is essential that every South African strengthen the hands of the government in its effort to combat Nazism.

MAINTAIN YEAST SUPPLY
