

Barbara Brent's BUYS AND WHYS

MONTREAL, July 21st—Wonderful for quick sandwich fillings, between meal and bedtime snacks, the jams and jellies are almost endless! So take full advantage of the tangy currants and juicy, flavoured cherries now in season. Make a supply of jams and jellies the quick, sure, easy way with CERTO Fruit Pectin. Anyone can make perfect jams and jellies by following exactly the recipes under the label of each Certo bottle. Do try Certo—you'll love it.

The Best In Home Too Good For Baby's Formula! That's why so many thousands of mothers keep a good supply of LIBBY'S EVAPORATED MILK on hand. You see, Libby's is pure, country-fresh milk with half the water removed... all the original cream left in! It's so rich it whips! And it contains all the top quality nutrients which you expect from fresh milk. It's a wonderful for growing children! That's why I'd like to urge mothers to keep Libby's Evaporated Milk handy for baby meals.

IN MEMORIAM

MR. FRANK COYLE

One of the Old Guard war veterans went West in the sudden passing of Mr. Frank Coyle Tuesday at his home, 289 Sydney Street.

Mr. Coyle served in the First World War in the Mounted Rifle Brigade landing in France in 1915 and remained continually at the front until the close of hostilities in November, 1918. He was present at the various engagements of Ypres, the battle of the Somme, Arras, Amiens and in the advance to Mons. He was buried by a high explosive shell on one occasion during a night attack on Moquet Farm on the Somme in 1916 and suffered the effects throughout his life.

General Arthur Currie, Commander of the Canadian Corps, in World War I once remarked in an after-the-war speech, that his veterans of the old Canadian Corps belonged to an Army to which there could come no recruits, and the passing of Frank Coyle a reminder of the late Commander's words.

Mr. Coyle enlisted with the Prince Edward Island Light Horse detachment which later became organized with other Maritime Units into the 6th Canadian Mounted Rifles. Still later many members of this Unit became members of the 5th Canadian Mounted Rifles.

Not very many members of the original detachment which left the Province now survive. Eleven were killed in France out of a total of about sixty; others were wounded, and time has taken its toll of the remainder. Mr. Coyle was a fine soldier, a staunch comrade, and had a fine sense of humor. He was a well read man, and was a most pleasant companion. He was quiet and amiable in his disposition. In his younger days, he was athletic and possessed of an exceptionally fine physique. For some years he was a time-keeper of the Earl Grey, one of the island's famous icebreakers. He served as well on the local Government at the time of the war.

He related that while driving not long ago he had been overtaken by a car from which a young man alighted—a "foreign" auto it had been, the passenger strangers. The lad begged to be taken into the carriage to ride a piece with the farmer to enjoy his new experience of riding by horse and wagon. "And I put the lines in his hands," this good man said, "so that he might do the driving himself, and he enjoyed it immensely." And we knew that this one of our Summers guests would take away with him pleasant memories of his visit to our Island shores.

We too have enjoyed and survived a new experience today, one which will be relieved we expect when wintry winds howl and snow heaps against the windows. Then we shall sigh wistfully and wish for this afternoon's sun warm on our back, the fragrance of the clover meadow beside and the glint of the water of the Strait beyond. This cleared afternoon, when all about was fresh and lovely, we picked recent visit to Alderlea. A penny which had escaped from an overall pocket had also eluded the broom in our sweeping and rolled aside. "Finder's keeper" we laughed to him, but Jamie was of another mind. "You may as well let it lie there," he said, "unless a fellow has four others, it's very little you can buy!"

The rain of last night which had patterned through our dreams had been succeeded by a welcome dampness which if it interrupted the haying in its initial stages brought needed refreshment to other crops. Roses in gardens lifted freshened faces to the rain-washed day and we fancied it was with more enthusiasm the birds chorused their songs. But it's not too good having weather this! was the current comment of the farmers we met who of course must speak of the interest nearest their hearts. One of them was who spoke of the tourist season at hand as cars with strange markings moved along the highway which is the main street of the village. This man is well content to travel in a horse-drawn conveyance, a pleasant means of transportation if it were not for the present dust nuisance and the hazard of being run down by some hastening machine.
