DOCTORS SAVE LIFE OF BOY BURIED IN SNOW

STRATFORD, Ont., Feb. 3.—The life of the little McDougall boy, who was buried in a box in snow by playmates is now believed out of danger, but serious permanent nervous disorders due to shock are feared. His frozen form had been saved, the doctors believed Little McDougall, through the thoughtful act of a playmate, six-year-old Jack Craig, was whipped, partly undressed and incarcerated in a box where he spent the night and when found both feet were frozen and the child was almost dead. Owing to the extreme youth of the lad responsible the police refrained from punishing him.

CANADIAN TOMMY HAS AMUSING EXPERIENCE.

That some of the Canadian Tommies at Salisbury Plain are pretty popular in the old country is brought out in a letter from a member of the "fourteenth" battalion. The soldier in question was about to enter his fourth year in engineering at McGill when the war broke out, and joined the Grenadier Guards in the first week of August. The letter reads:—

"I had a rather odd experience over in Ireland a few days ago. Some folks over there had sent an invitation bearing my name and address, 'Montreal Brigade, Canadian Contingent,' to spend a few days with them. The note came to me, and though I had never heard of them before, I supposed that they were relations of my father, who first saw the light in Donegal, well, happening to be in Dublin on leave last week, I ran up to Dundalk and called on my 'relations.' 'A dear little 'aunt' of twenty years welcomed me in a most affectionate manner at the door (it was dark), and ushered me into the house. After exchanging endearments with her sister, I was asked if I remembered my aunt's visit to Montreal eight years ago. I informed them that I had never seen that gay city until four years ago, and after a short conversation it was established that another person of my name is a resident of Montreal. The little aunt seemed 'fabbergasted' for a few moments and then started to laugh about the loving reception she had given me. She was a jolly decent little sort, though, and I was pressed to stay with them, an invitation which I accepted without hesitation. 'It was an odd situation, but I had an extremely good time, and took my leave in the same spirit in which I had been received. I now have a higher opinion than ever of the warm-hearted Irish.'

MY LITTLE BOY THAT DIED.

Look at his pretty face for just one minute!
His braided frock and dainty buttoned shoes,
His firm-shut hand, the favorite playing in it,
Then, tell me, mothers, was it not hard to lose
And miss him from my side,—
My little boy that died?
How many another boy, as dear and charming,
His father's hope his mother's one delight,
Slips through strange sickness, all fear disarming,
And live a long, long life in parents' sight
Mine was so short a pride:
And then—my poor boy died.
I see him rocking in his wooden charger;
I hear him pattering through the house all day;
I watch his great blue eyes grow large and larger,
Listening to stories, whether grave or gay
Told at the bright fireside—
So dark now, since he died.
But yet I often think my boy is living,
As living as my other children are.
When good-night kisses I all round am giving
I keep one for him, though he is so far.
Can a mere grave divide
Me from him—though he died?
So, when I come and plant it o'er with daisies
(Nothing but childish daisies all year round)
Continually God's hand the curtain rises,
And I can hear his merry voices' sound,
And I feel him at my side—
My little boy that died.
—AUSTIN DOBSON.

FROM THE FRONT

The following letter has been received by Mr. Alex M. Beaton of Flat River and will be of interest all over this Province.

Jan. 17th 1915.
Dear Mr. Beaton:
We were all very pleased to find your note of which you had enclosed in a sack of oats sent to the post. It came to light in the 134 in Battery R. T. A., which is now in action close to the Belgian frontier.
A personal touch such as this brought home to us the real good will and patriotism of the Dominion over the sea.
We have not had the good fortune to fight alongside any of the Canadian Contingent as yet, but live in hopes of doing so. You may be interested to hear that this battery has been through all the operations since the beginning of the war, and are still going strong.
Yours,
H. WARD,
Major R. T. A.,
Comd. 134 in Bat. R. T. A.
On behalf of the officers and men of the Battery.

ISLANDER AT SCENE OF WRECK

MONCTON, Feb. 3.—Mr. Ephraim Phillips, of Truro Valley, P. E. I., arrived in the city last evening on the delayed C. P. R. express from Boston and is a guest at the Minto House. In conversation with a Times reporter, Mr. Phillips said that he and several other passengers were held at Vanceboro for about two hours and a half, until the bridge, which was partially blown up by the German officer, could be repaired. He stated that he witnessed the prisoner being taken to the jail by the officer and he was very poorly clad and seemed to be suffering from the cold. Mr. Phillips stated that the German admitted his guilt to the officers, through an interpreter, and talked about the fair as a matter of fact way, taking his arrest very coolly. The police allowed the man to eat in a restaurant and during that time an interested crowd collected and watched the prisoner. During the meal, according to Mr. Phillips, he started to cry, but "braced up." The affair caused great excitement in Vanceboro and the people in general were very indignant.
Mr. Phillips stated that he walked out to the bridge and found that four of the ties had been blown off close to the rails, although the rails remained intact. A portion of the uprights were blown off and set up. He said that he understood that the German said that he had used twenty-eight sticks of dynamite. A large charge was found with fuse burnt out on the American side, and it was only through the fuse being extinguished by some wet snow that the whole bridge was not blown up. The German could not talk very good English and he police secured two German residents as interpreters. He readily admitted his guilt, saying he was a German officer. He recently came from Mexico and left his wife and family in New York. The prisoner was informed that he did not make a very good job of the affair and he replied in a cool manner that it was too cold and windy. The police found a hole drilled in the stone abutment and it is evident that the prisoner intended to put his dynamite in the abutment and make a better job, but was unable to work successfully owing to the cold and wind.
When searched at the police station a good revolver was found in his possession, as well as the blue prints of the bridge. When asked for attempting to blow up the bridge, Mr. Phillips stated that he understood the German to have said that he wished to break up traffic between the Maritime Provinces and Montreal, so that produce, etc., could not be sent to Montreal and then shipped to England.
Mr. Phillips said some of the passengers felt quite nervous about the matter and breathed a sigh of relief when the train had passed over the bridge.
