THE SOLAR PLEXUS

Is the largest nerve centre in the sympathetic nervous system, is situated just back of the stomach, and supplies nervous energy, the vital force of the human body, to the stomach, heart, lungs, kidneys, liver etc. By creating nerve force Dr. Chase's Nerve Food directly aids the solar plexus in supplying the power which runs the machinery of digestion and so cures nervous dyspepsia, headache, dizzy spells and bodily weakness.

TEND TO DIMINISH STORMS.

Electric Overhead Wires Dissipate Violence of Lightning.

It is agreeable to be able to dissipate the idea which prompts unacquainted with the ways of thunder storms and of earthly electrical systems have lately been entertaining—that the municipality of electrical wires is causing an increase in the number of storms says an English change. The tendency is just the other way.

According to the simple explanation which Dr. Sowerby Wallis, the rainfall expert, of Camden Square, gave the reason is this—The disruptive explosion in a thunderstorm is an effort on the part of nature to adjust the distribution of electricity between earth and sky. But just as a lightning conductor provides an easy passage for the electricity from sky to earth, so every bare wire acts as a conductor and helps dissipate the aerial electricity which would otherwise cause thunder.

The influence of the wires in London Dr. Wallis said, is very perceptible, so that with the ever extending system of telegraphs, telephones, and other electric works thunderstorms should show a tendency to decrease.

But as to whether there are more or fewer storms than there were a few years ago Dr. Wallis pointed out that the question arises: What is a thunderstorm? Are one clap of thunder and one flash of lightning a storm? The meteorological method is to measure the rain, as heavy rain is a notable feature of thunderstorms.

"There occur in an irregular manner," said Dr. Wallis, "groups of years with frequent thunderstorms and groups with a marked absence of them. As far as I know, this cannot be ascribed to any specific cause. Storms are less frequent over towns than in the country, as the chimneys and steeples tend to prevent electrical explosions."

DRINK AND LUNACY.

Much of Litter Caused by Adulteration of the Former.

In 1859 there was one insane person to every 536 sane individuals. The average has since risen until now one person in every 299 is mentally afflicted.

"What is the reason of this?" asked Professor H. W. White, in delivering his presidential address to the members of the Medico-Psychological Association, at London, England.

One cause was the fact that fewer eligible aliens settled in the country and intermarried with our people. There was therefore less infusion of fresh blood into the race than was formerly the case. The foreigners who did land on our shores tended to weaken the stock, for they were mostly town dwellers of poor physique, with constitutions undermined by disease.

The frequent marriages of neurotics with those inheriting the taint of insanity was another cause, and the increased tendency to marry late in life was anything but desirable. The abuse of alcohol was another great cause of lunacy. We were now a spirit drinking race, which we were not half a century back.

"There is no standard of purity for these spirits," said the speaker. "If the adulteration by noxious constituents be important factors in the causation of insanity, should not the Legislature enforce both the maturity and the purity of all alcoholic drinks?"

"The survival of the weaklings who would formerly have died in infancy, the fact that we are rapidly becoming a nation of town dwellers, unnatural excitement, over-education, late hours, badly selected and badly cooked food, and overcrowding were all responsible causes for the terrible increase in the lunacy rate."
