..*THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Brace District L. O. L. Lodge, will be held on Tuesday January 9th, 1917, at two o'clock p. m. sharp, at the Orange Hall, Dundas, King's County. 3763,1-4 M2i.

PILES

Are you a sufferer? Know that terrible aching, dragging-down pain, that robs you of pleasure, even of rest, and makes life miserable? Don't you believe in the law of average? If a remedy has cured hundreds of people, don't you think it likely it might at least cure you?

Just give Zam-Buk a fair trial!

Mr. J. McEwen, of Dundas, suffered from piles for fifteen years. He says: "I tried pretty nearly everything, but got no permanent relief until I tried Zam-Buk. This balm relieved the pain; continued use completely and permanently cured me."

The rich herbal essences of which Zam-Buk is composed, quickly remove congestion, relieve the dull, gnawing, burning pain, and cure.

All druggists and stores, or post-paid from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 50c. box, 3 boxes $1.25.

..*A REAL SURPRISE PARTY was given the pastor Rev. F .A. Hubley, of the U. Baptist church, Montague, on Saturday evening, Dec. 30th when, cold as it was, a number of the members assembled at the parsonage. After a social conversation, in behalf of the church and congregation, including Georgetown and Sturgeon, Mr. F. A. Hewitt in well chosen words, delivered a presentation address, while Mr. Jas. Hewitt presented to the pastor a beautiful coon-coat, and to Mrs. Hubley a handsome purse of money. The pastor, in behalf of Mrs. Hubley and himself endeavoured to thank all concerned in making such a liberal gift, after which a sumptuous lunch was served by the ladies and the happy party broke up leaving the pastor much warmer in body and heart. May God's kindest benediction rest upon the givers and the receivers.—B.

..*IMPORTANT MEETING.— A meeting of the citizens and householders of Montague, was held Monday afternoon at 2 p. m. New Year's Day, in the Club Room, to discuss, and advise the citizens the condition of the present first fighting apparatus. It was found that the engine was not in working order, until some few days ago when taken hold by some private individuals and overhauled, and fixed up, and that there was no fire brigade organization, and some new buckets, ladders ,hose and etc where needed to make the equipment complete. Two committees were appointed,the first to get together a volunteer fire brigade. The men on this committee are Messrs J. L. Younker, J. R. Brehaut and H. W. Ives. Another committee was appointed to get information and costs, of buying a gasoline engine to be attached to the fire engine now owned by the village for pumping the water instead of hand power, also the cost of procuring a chemical engine, and the advisibility of building tanks in different parts of the village, as reservoirs to attach the engine to in case of fire, occuring at a distance too far away for connection to be made with the river. The men appointed on this last committee are: Messrs W. L. Poole, Dr. J. D. McIntyre, and Isaac Ives. There will be a meeting called in the auditorium as soon as the different committees get the information required, when a subscription fund will be started, and it is hoped that every citizen will be present and lend all the assistance in his power to help this worthy object.—B.

AN AIRMAN TELLS OF HIS FIGHT IN THE AIR

Northwards to the sea, southwards to where the earth is lost in the mist and cloud, stretches the grim battle area. Down below the roads are thronged with traffic—motor transports, gun-limbers, supply colums, a regiment on the march, a battery of artillery. A little group of white-roofed huts indicates a field hospital; behind the woods groups of old-fashioned bell-tents mark an infantry rest camp.

As we climb higher the view extends, now taking in the misty English coast line and then the occasional flash and smoke burst of a big gun somewhere in front. A kite baloon, unearthed from a sheltered declivity, rises ponderous and ugly from the ground. Aeroplanes seem to come creeping up from all quarters. Every moment we are climbing higher and drawing nearer to the battle area. Now the winding lines of trench are visible, the smoke clouds of the big guns. The enemy is putting some "heavy stuff" into the little town immediately below, which commands two main roads and a railway junction. We get our first dose of "Archies," but it is far out of range.

OVER THE LINES

Who can describe one's true feelings in that first flight across the lines. Fear and bravado, nervousness, desperation, hope, and despair all are experienced. Before the next "dose" we climb higher; the latter may have been a chance shot, but the next attention, when they have us under observation and have gauged the range, will be more methodical.

Now the earth is Lilliputian—a toy world, where men crawl like ants,and there are tiny pin-pricks that deal out death and destruction. Whole armies are crowded into spaces that appear to be only a few square yeards. Can this be the greatest war in history, this pigmy affair; this scattered collection of darkish shapes, units of the two greatest armies in Christendom? Convincing proof is not long in coming; two shrapnel shells burst in unpleasant proximity, and high explosive jolts and jars the machine in nerve-racking fashion.

Down below the most prominent landmarks are the trenches—winding, turning lines of grey and white, serried across the deep grey surface of the earth. It is a curious phenomenon this—that when the surface of the earth has been disturbed in any way it should be always shown up so prominently from above.

Over the lines and well into the enemy country, we are not long in finding our objective, From behind a bank of cloud a great Albana across appears coming "down wind" and at a rapid pace. Now for it!

THE COMBAT

An analysis of one's feelings would shatter every recognized theory of psychology. First one measures the opponent with his eye guages, always incorrectly, his capabilities. What is his speed. Can he climb? Is he higher or lower in attitude? A mad joy, a wild impetuosity seizes the pilot. He wants to get at close grips, but that is impossible in the air, and there is something unsatisfying, something disappointing, in "potting" at a man from a distance, wheeling by him at sixty miles an hour without even a glimpse of his face. What is he thinking of? What will he do?

Then there comes a feeverish anxiety to know whether the observer is ready. Why is he fumbling with the Lewis gun like that? Can't he fix the tray? At last all is ready! He turns, with a smile.

Still half a mile away, the enemy appears to be slightly above us. We open out the engine and climb as fast as we can. Now we are level with him, but a quarter of a mile to the right. A few passing shots and he has flashed by. We wheel back and turn slightly, inwards, very close this time. The machine gun at his nose spits red and ours replies; the fight resolves itself into a machine gun duel between the observers.

A few bullets flash past the wings, one rippling the fabric, but no harm is done. Again we wheel, again plunge into the fight, again engage in the machine gun duel. The foe is wheeling and climbing until he gets above us, and our danger is very real when his observer turns his machine gun on us. It is a tense moment for a few seconds will decide whether we live or die, return home again in comfort or go spinning down broken and uncontrollable to hideous death beneath.

The observer has been hit in the arm and the blood shows thru his thick tan coat. Must we give in and go? No; the observer is a plucky chap, and, tying up the wound as best he can, he signals smillingly to go on. We climb gradually, until at last we are rising above the enemy, and ours is proving the more powerful machine.

VICTORY

At last the moment arrives when we almost hover over him. Zipp-zipp-zipp, goes the machine gun. He staggers, recovers himself, staggers again, and then begins to climb rapidly. It is his last chance to live. We 'open out' 'as fast as we can and follow him, the machine gun yapping in the prow. Earth and sky, danger and safety, everything is forgotten in this mad rush thru the air, with the wind whistling by and our ears deadened by the roar of the racing engine. All that is most primitive, most savage, rises in a man's breast at a moment like this. The only desire is to kill, kill, kill.

Now the enemy is struggling on as only a man can when it is a matter of life and death. Now! But the machine-gun tray has run out, Another tray! Quick, or we shall miss him.

Just in time! The other staggers, his machine begins to plunge and lurch, then suddenly it "noses" over and falls with a sickening speed towards the earth.

The glow of victory, the feeling that cannot be equalled in this world, seizes one—but with it a feeling of genuine sorrow for an opponent who has fought like a sportsman and a man.

When pain is severe and doctors distant, you are fortunate if you have a bottle of wonderfully soothing, healing and penetrating
