VICTORIA TEAM WINS INTERMEDIATE TITLE

Three Goal Scoring Splurge In Final Period Sends L.P.U. Down To Defeat

Scoring three goals with a torrid third period attack Victoria Juniors, a fast, tricky passing squad of hockeyists last night captured the Island intermediate title by defeating the L.P.U. squad 3-1 in the second game of the finals...

Holding on desperately to a 1-0 lead from late in the first period when Joe Murnaghan skated through alone for the first goal of the game, the losers saw their lead fade in the third minute of the final session when Danny McLeod skated in close on Lester McLeod's pass to give the Union goal no chance...

The game was in its final minutes with the score unchanged when the same Victoria duo combined for the winning goal and then in the last minute as the L.P.U. threw five forwards into the fray G. McLeod broke away alone on Knox's pass to shoot the third Victoria goal.

The game was a thriller from start to finish with the winners' tricky passing attack giving them an edge over their city opponents. It was also rugged in spots and no less than four players had to be carried from the ice in the third period. The first casualty came to Rory McLeod as he suffered a bad cut on the chin; then Danny McLeod and Barrett, the L.P.U. goalies were knocked senseless in the same moment, Barrett stopping McLeod's hard drive on the jaw and the Victoria player crashing headfirst into the boards over Barrett's falling form.

leave the ice, this time crashing to the boards just after scoring the final goal of the game, but after repairs had been made all players were able to return to play. Victoria now meets Picou in a two-game semi-final series for the Maritime title.

Bucky Harris Predicts Close Pennant Race

(By Paul Mickel on Associated Press Sports Writer)

ORLANDO, Fla., March 11—Bucky Harris, head man of the up and coming Washington Senators, things the American Baseball League has got something this year. He is willing to bet on it. "If the Yankees take the rest of us on another buggy ride and copy the pennant by 19 games, I will give Joe McCarthy a piggy back ride from Yankee Stadium to Brooklyn and apply for citizenship papers in Flatbush," promised Bucky. "Laugh all you want to, but in my books the race is going to be the closest in years."

Bucky, a right throwing fellow when it comes to analyzing ball clubs, explained how he came to his conclusions.

"Sure, you got to give the Yanks the call as the heavy favorite, the one team to beat, but they're going to have some woe. Not only has every club in the league improved but does any one think the Yanks can do better than last season?"

"If Pat Malone and Bump Hadley win 26 and lose only eight between them, I'll give them a free ride in a wheel barrow down Fifth Avenue. They won't do it. Lefty Gomez is bound to do better, but not enough to offset the slips by Bump and Pat. Dimaggio unquestionably is a real fine ball player, but he'll have to be plenty good to hit 323 his second year."

Bucky called attention to the finish made by DeVoy last season and believed the Tigers were a cinch to be tough. "From all I hear," said Bucky, "Hank Greenberg is in fine fettle. He's a truly remarkable hitter. With the terrific power he has he means a lot of ball games to a club."

"I think Chicago will have a hard time doing as well as it did last year, but don't forget Cleveland, maybe this year that Bob Feller will give 'em that necessary spark."

Another reason why the race can't help but be closer is Boston. The Red Sox can't do as badly as they did last year. A team with all the power and class can slump one year but not two years in succession.

As for the Senators, they are out to get some revenge on Chicago White Sox and Cleveland Indians, in particular, this year.

Sportsdom Pays Final Tribute To Hockey Immortal — Morenz

(By John LeBlanc Canadian Press Staff Writer)

MONTREAL, March 11—Howie Morenz was buried today, amid the sorrow of sportsdom.

As the afternoon sun sank slowly below Mount Royal, a grave in the pine-clad hill received his body, shrouded now of all the magnificent speed and fire that had carried his name to the top of hockey's immortals.

And as Howie the peerless went to the grave, the world of sport accorded him such tributes as few athletes had been given before. Some said no man of sport ever had received such homage in death.

For 10,000 persons massed for that last service at the Forum, filling row on row the seats of the great ice arena where Howie and the Canadians had swept on together to mutual triumph in his National Hockey League years. The dim-lit palace of hockey could have held few more.

Over the centre-ice spot where he had faced off a thousand pucks Howie Morenz, dead in the midst of his combats after two years of slump. And many in the throng, still stunned by the sudden fall of his great heart Monday night, seemed scarcely able to believe he never again would tramp that puck and speed down the centre lane as only Morenz could speed.

They said a brief and simple service over his still body out on the board-covered surface that once knew the ring of Howie's flying skates. They sang a hymn, and they uttered a prayer. And then they walked out silently as Howie left for the last time the clean, sharp ice he loved so well.

Outside, more thousands choked the streets for blocks as the hearse bore away the body of the late-called hockey's greatest had lain in state for 1-2 hours. It rested directly in centre ice, circled with flowers and guarded, at each corner of the bier, by players of his Canadian team.

Little Aurel Joliat stood there for a while, his mate of the "Red Devil" line for years, now a forlorn figure, slumped in dejection and strangely different from that darting, elusive imp of the ice. And old Johnny Gagnon, the other Iremate, staring tight-lipped at some spot on the floor.

Perhaps Howie would have liked it that way; Aurel on one side, the Black Cat on the other, as they used to wing along in the old days.

Others of the National Hockey League were there. The Toronto Maple Leafs were in town for a game with Maroons. King Clancy came over and shook Aurel's hand; Chuck Conacher had a last look at the pallid, upturned face; Horner, Metz, Fowler and the others came in.

The Maroons were there in a body, for the last service over the man who was the spirit of Canadian hockey, their greatest rivals.

Meanwhile, the tiers of the arena were filling. The crowd shuffled in silently, here and there a handkerchief raised to face. A few cried openly as they looked down at the casket centred in the Forum's vast hallows.

Strange to this sport arena was the riot of floral color banking it, and the scent of flowers. But they stood for the collective sentiment of the sport world for the dead figure.

All major hockey was represented in the bank of flowers. The N. H. L. teams: President Frank Calder; Howie's mates, and the fans. The referees, too.

The organ music rose in muted cadences—another strange note. They closed the coffin. A Presbyterian Minister, Dr. Malcolm Campbell, walked in and took his stand at the coffin's head.

He named a hymn "Nearer My God To Thee." The organist played. The thousands joined in, falteringly at first, then swelling.

The clergyman's eulogy then: "He was a hero in the true sense of the term. A Presbyterian minister, Dr. Malcolm Campbell, walked in and took his stand at the coffin's head. He named a hymn 'Nearer My God To Thee.' The organist played. The thousands joined in, falteringly at first, then swelling.

"He made straight for the goal," the Minister said in measured tones, in life as he did in the game of hockey. "There were no needless curves or loops in his course." He spoke of Howie's love for his wife, sitting in a front row seat, and for Howie, Jr., of whom he wanted to make another star.

"We are here," he said, "to pledge our undying interest for his sake in their welfare." And multitudes elsewhere, he said, joined in the sentiment.

A vagrant, single ray of sun darted down through the dimness from a window high above the topmost tier. Its light struck the clergyman as he uttered the prayer and the farewell words for Howie: "The loneliness and the silence thou hast made."

Six stalwart Canadians swung the coffin to their shoulders and carried their fellow off the ice for ever. "Pit! Lepin, George Mantha, Babe Siebert, Armand Mondou, George Brown, Paul Haynes—all had raced down the lanes in the breath-catching dashes with Morenz.

The Forum emptied slowly. As the depressed crowd fyled out in silence Tommy Gorman, manager of the Maroons, looked once at the coffin going through the door and said: "It was the greatest tribute ever paid an athlete."

From there they went to the Mount, covered with snow and lit with the sun of a bright winter day. On the gentle slope of a hillside, far above the city that took Howie to its heart, they laid the great-hearted player amid the silences and the stillness he never knew, nor wanted, in life.

Maroons And Bruins Open Series Tonight

(By Bob Cavagnaro)

KENTVILLE, N. S., March 11—Kentville prepared tonight for the crowds of hockey-mad Annapolis Valley fans who will come to see Berwick Bruins battle Moncton Maroons for the Maritime hockey championship and the right to enter Allan Cup playdowns.

Apparently fresh and confident after the 5-2 lacing they gave the Antigonish last night to win the Nova Scotia championship, Bruins arrived home today to be greeted by Mayor Hiram Thomas and a delegation that included almost every citizen of Berwick. Tonight they were banqueted by the club executive.

Valley fans were unable to estimate the strength of the goal-crazy Moncton Maroons and were somewhat bewildered by the 20-2 crushing they administered to Charlottetown Abbies in the two games of the first interprovincial series of the year.

But, it was maintained, Berwick's great record this year would stand them in good stead. The fighting, fast-skating Apple Kings were undefeated in home games during the season and in the play-off stretch, they won five games and tied one in series against Bridgewater, Halifax and Antigonish.

Not since the days of the 1927 edition of the Kentville Wildcats has a Valley team entered the Maritime hockey finals. Indications were the Moncton game tomorrow night would draw an all-time record attendance for Kentville.

The 300 reserved seat tickets could have been sold several times over. The block of tickets allotted to Berwick was sold by noon and a smaller section for Kentville fans was snapped up even more quickly.

Wings Clinch First Place, Aurie Injured

(C.P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

NEW YORK, March 11—(CP)—The champion Detroit Red Wings stepped out into a nine-point lead over the National Hockey League's United States section tonight as they handed New York Rangers a 4-2 trimming before 9,000 fans.

Victory qualified the Detroiters to meet the leading team of the Canadian group starting March 23 for the league crown. The triumph may prove costly, however, for Larry Aurie, right wingman and the league's leading scorer, was carried from the ice late in the second period with a badly bruised leg after crashing into the boards with Art Coulter, husky Ranger defenceman.

The Ranger club physician announced an X-ray would be necessary to ascertain if Aurie had broken a small bone in his leg.

First Period 1—Rangers, Keeling, (Murdoch, Heller) 5:10. 2—Detroit, Aurie, 5:20. 3—Detroit, Pettinger, (Goodfellow) 11:45. Penalties: none. Second Period Scoring: none. Penalties: none. Third Period 4—Detroit, Howe (W. Kilrea) 6:53. 5—Rangers, M. Colville (Shibicky) 11:50. 6—Detroit, H. Kilrea (Barry) 18:31. Penalties: none.

Heavyweight Pot Boils Merrily As Jacobs Says Chicago Bout "A Phoney"

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, March 11—If nothing else, the heavyweight hulla-balloo is crashing the headlines and it's barely possible that's what the boys want.

Joe Jacobs, Max Schmeling's American manager, kept the pot boiling today by branding the Jim Braddock-Joe Louis Chicago fight "a phoney," and said that Braddock realizes he has a bonafide contract with Madison Square Garden to meet Schmeling June 3.

"Joe Gould, Braddock's manager, tipped the world off that the Chicago fight is a phoney when he said he'd fight Schmeling in Berlin for $400,000," roared Jacobs. "He's supposed to get $500,000 for fighting Louis, and now he says he'll fight Schmeling for $400,000. Somethings screwy there, ain't it?"

Fight managers, as a rule, aren't interested in facts, and Yussel Jacobs apparently is no exception. Gould did rally quickly to Schmeling's offer of $250,000 and motion picture rights which he figures will net another $150,000, but not as a swap for the Chicago fight.

Gould figures if Schmeling boosts the guarantee to $400,000 flat, he said Braddock can handle both fights. The champion's manager expressed the belief that, if necessary, the Chicago engagement, scheduled for June 22, can be postponed.

So it looks as though Yussel went down swinging on the "phoney" angle. On his other "discovery," Jacobs said Gould and Braddock "fear" the contract they have with Madison Square Garden.

"He (Gould) also stipulated that we'd have to get them out of the law suit with the Garden," said Jacobs. "Doesn't that prove he and Braddock realize they have a bonafide contract with the Garden? It certainly does."

Schmeling's offer of $250,000 and motion picture and radio rights is tops, Jacobs said. "If Gould won't accept it then we'll combine with the Garden in a law suit to force Braddock to meet Schmeling June 3 as the contract calls for," he said.

GERMANS AWAIT WORD BERLIN, March 11—(CP)—Havas—International affairs were shoved into the background tonight before the popular question of the hour—will James J. Braddock come to Berlin to risk his world heavyweight boxing title against Max Schmeling?

Although Braddock's decision was not expected for three or four days, intensive plans were already underway to prepare the huge Olympic Stadium for a record-breaking crowd.

The matter of $400,000 demanded by the title-holder threw a damper over the German sporting world, but not enough to dim their hopes entirely. The offer already made by Schmeling on cabled instructions from Berlin is more generous than any made outside the United States. It was argued, sportsmen declared Braddock "put his cards on the table."

It would be impossible to pay the champion $400,000, even supposing 150,000 turned out to fill the huge stadium built for last summer's Olympic Games. If Braddock stands pat, it means he intends to defend his title in the United States. It was stated here. If he does, he ought to lose no time declaring whether he intends to meet Schmeling or not, German fans insisted.

Bruins Drub Chihawks 6-2

CHICAGO, March 11—Chicago Black Hawks, out of the National Hockey League playoffs and with nothing to lose, tried out their American rookies tonight and succeeded only in dropping a 6-2 verdict to the Boston Bruins.

This was the first time the Black Hawks had brought out their five-American born rookies to make their team an all-American aggregation.

The game was played as Frank Calder, League President considered a protest from Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings and Lester Patrick of New York Rangers over use of the new players. Patrick and Adams contend they should not have been used while teams still are battling for Stanley Cup playoff positions.

Although the rookies did not figure in any scoring, McLaughlin said he was pleased with their work.
