"Vogues Of 1938" At Capitol Summerside

Warner Baxter and Joan Bennett will be seen for the first time in Technicolor in "Walter Wanger's Vogues of 1938," the spectacular musical comedy which begins a two days engagement at the Capitol Theatre today.

Offering a glimpse of next year's fashions in girls, gags, gowns, love, and dances, this merry story of Manhattan centers around the romance of New York's leading courtesier, played by Baxter, and a charming debutante played by Joan, who jilts a millionaire (Alan Mowbray) on her wedding day to become a mannequin.

Also featured in the cast are Helen Vinson, as Baxter's selfish, stage-struck wife; Mischa Auer, as a penniless Russian prince; Jerome Cowan as the shady theatrical producer who stars Helen in a flop show that it takes Baxter's last cent to back; and those gorgeous Walter Wanger Models, the most photographed girls in the world.

Other prominent names are Marjorie Gateson, Alma Kruger, Dorothy McNulty, Polly Rowles and an imposing lineup of internationally famous stage and nightclub entertainers.

The film introduces several tuneful new songs, including "That Old Fashioned 'Lovely One'" and "Red Hot Heat."

"Walter Wanger's Vogues of 1938" was directed by Irving Cummings for release through United Artists.

Inspired by the shamrock, Eire's pavilion at New York World's Fair, 1939, will be unique both in design and construction. Conceived by the Dublin architect, Michael Scott, the two-story structure will have 250 feet of wall in glass, giving an exceptional feeling of airiness. One interior wall, 80 feet long, will present a panorama in which photomontage, paint and glass and metal relief work will be combined. To the left of the entrance will be a pool containing an island similar in outline to Ireland.

CONSERVATION

A WEEKLY COLUMN OF PRACTICAL OPINIONS OF THE VITAL ISSUES AFFECTING THE USES AND ABUSES OF NATURAL RESOURCES BY MR. LUDLOW JENKINS, MARSHFIELD.

MUNITIONS AND HUNTING

A part of the story of the relationship between the munitions industry and the hunting industry is told by H. C. Engelbrecht in the American Spectator for October. Next to war, hunting brings the greatest share of the gun-makers' money. Of the hunters' annual expenditures—about $300,000,000—forty millions are spent for guns and shells. This, of course, leaves a vast amount of money for the beneficiaries of sport. But the gun-makers' share is a tidy sum.

All hunting, since first firearms were invented, has enriched the gun-makers, but it was not until about 1900, when game began to get alarmingly scarce, that the manufacturers got their business money-making really organized. Soon they had their own conservation organizations, and these have continued. Their brand of conservation mainly involves the opposition of restrictions, and finding new creatures to shoot at. Their technique includes the influencing of State Legislatures and even Federal procedure.

Here the author hits only the high spots, and not all of them. His membership of the Sporting Arms and Ammunition Manufacturers Institute, and names a few of its affiliates, accomplished and attempted. However, he does not mention that the Institute hired experts to find out why game birds had decreased, and that ignored their findings. If those in authority had allowed the advice of one of these experts, waterfowl killing would have been out of business. But that would have hurt business!

UNCALLED FOR

"I had a surprise this morning," remarked the business man. "I put on another suit, and in one of the pockets found a roll of bills, which I had entirely forgotten."

Asked a pessimist: "Were any of them received?"

HARDLY RECOGNIZABLE

Author (whose plot has been so altered that it is hardly recognizable)—No. I only wrote the knock on the door in the opening scene.

FRUIT PRESERVING

YARMOOUTH, N. S.—(CP)—A new process to preserve strawberries and small fruit over a long period, permitting the opening of a large potential market in Great Britain, was demonstrated to a group of Yarmouth fruit growers by C. C. Eld of the experimental farm at Kentville, N. S.

ENJOYABLE MEAL

HALIFAX—(CP)—Halifax city home inmates dined on thick juicy deer steaks, even though the hunting season has been over for months. The luxury was a result of the death of an over-ambitious deer that jumped over a wall in the north end of the city and fell 40 feet to the railway tracks below.
