HORSE NOTES

When they step at North Tryon speedway on July 23rd.

The North Tryon Driving Park is not new by any means. It is one of the oldest in this section and a correct half mile and recognized by National Trotting Association. The buildings are now being reconstructed and when finished will be as spacious and as new as a dollar.

Public trainer G. B. Thomas, of the Sea View Stables has the following horses in training:

Minnie Marshall, the handsome grey pacer by J. Malcolm Forbes.

Royal Worthy, trotter by Royal Watts, a real trotter.

Baby K. pacer, the dapper little chestnut by Protrilla.

Miss Bell Aquira, pacer, the lofty big daughter of Aquira.

Beatrice S. pacer, by Grand Eclair. This is going to make a fast pacer.

Jack Dempsey, trotter, by Lacopia. This fellow is green but very promising.

The North Tryon Driving Park Track Record made by Upton Prince is 2:19.

Minard's Liniment gives quick relief.

Norway had fewer tourist visitors this year than last.

American machinery is being used in 70 countries throughout the world.

A can that measures definite quantities of its contents when they are poured out of a spout has been invented for coffee, sugar, and several other household commodities.

Operated by wires from the pilot's seat, a searchlight that can be turned 30 degrees in all directions has been invented to assist aviators in landing airplanes at night.

France has organized a force of airplane police to control the movement of fliers, especially tourists, over that country, signals being given by smoke bombs.

Closed cars represented 89.4 per cent of the passenger automobile production of the United States and Canada last year, a greater proportion than ever before.

France's annual production of footwear, has been estimated at 100,000,000 pairs, the industry consuming between 75 and 80 per cent of the country's leather output.

How to Help Your Husband

Dorothy Dix

Says: "Have Faith in Him"

Wives, if You Want to Help Your Husbands Succeed, Believe in Them, for a Man's Faith in Himself Sets the Measure of His Achievements, and if a Wife Destroys This She Has Destroyed His Ability to Succeed, Says Dorothy Dix

There is no question that women ask me oftener than this: "How can I help my husband to succeed?"

To which I can reply almost in a word: Believe in him. Have faith in him. Keep him on his tiptoes by making him feel that you expect him to achieve great things.

Somehow his wife's admiration seems to be absolutely necessary to a man. As long as she thinks he is a world beater, he puts up the best fight that is in him, but when he knows that she considers him nothing but a poor weakling, without the brains or strength or courage to win out, he quits cold. His morale is gone and he is eternally atrophied, his ambition killed. Many a wife's belief that her husband is a failure turns him into a failure.

I knew two young men who started out in business together. They were of about equal ability. Both were intelligent, hard-working chaps, full of pep and go, but through a series of misfortunes for which they were not responsible, their venture ended disastrously.

One of the young men had a wife who believed in him. "Of course, this is bad," she said to him. "It is a terrible disappointment, after all the work and thought and struggle you have put into it to see it all go blooey, but don't worry over it. It is just a temporary setback. They can't keep a good man down, and with your ability you will soon be on the top again. You'll show them."

"Suppose we do have to give up the house and the car and economize for a while. It will be fun helping you get on your feet again, and I'll yet be riding around in Rolls-Royces and wearing diamonds as big as turnpike rocks. So cheerio, my dear. Up and at them again, and this time you will land at the top. I'm your prophet, for I know my man."

And that man, because his wife was a brace and a tonic and breathed fresh hope and courage into him, has succeeded and his wife is a millionaire who could buy out an automobile or a jewelry shop if she wanted to.

The other man's wife was of a different caliber. When the business went to pot, she sat down and wept and lamented, and beat upon her breast over their misfortune and reproached her husband with his lack of judgment, and wondered why he didn't have enough sense to make money as he never would succeed, anyway.

She croaked failure at the poor fellow until she killed the last bit of self-confidence he had, and he lost faith in his own ability. She went about telling everybody that poor dear John just didn't seem to have any business faculty, or know how to get along, until she made John actually achieve himself that he was so incompetent that there was no use in his trying anything for himself again.

And John today is holding down a small job that barely makes a poor living. He is a failure, sunk by his wife's lack of faith in him.

When women think about helping their husbands, they always have some chimerical dream of writing a book or a play that will make a vast fortune, or being offered a million-dollar contract to go into the movies, none of which ever happens. Or else they try to do it by pinching nickels and nursing dimes and cutting down on the grocery bill and wearing their year-before-last's hats.

Now, of course, when a woman marries a poor man who is ambitious to succeed, thrift is absolutely essential, for it takes money to make money and the door of opportunity is only opened with a golden key.

But thrift is only a small part of the technique of success, and it is far more important for a woman to inspire her husband to make money than it is for her to save it. Far more important for her to keep up his fighting spirit, to bolster up his belief in his star, to keep his faith in himself alive, than it is for her to do without things. Far better for her to be a fluttering flag of victory always waving before his eyes than to be a bundle of rags at home.

For, while a man may not always be able to do all he thinks he can do, he assuredly can do nothing that he thinks he cannot do. His faith in himself sets the measure of his achievements, and if his wife destroys this, she has destroyed his ability to succeed. It is the man who never knows when he is beaten who is unbeatable.

It is a common thing to see men slow down as soon as they are married. All of us know men who, when they were young, were full of promise, and who have just fizzled out and amounted to nothing. Before marriage they were keenly interested in their professions or their business they read and studied and talked of nothing but their cases, or the bridges they were building, or the cotton business, and we fully expected them to become big doctors or lawyers or engineers or big business men. But after marriage they just seemed to lose their grip and settled down into mediocrity.

Nine ties out of ten the secret of these men's failure is that they married women who were human wet blankets. They had wives who didn't believe in them, wives who had no faith in their ability, and who knocked everything they did and belittled all their achievements until they killed their self-confidence and made failures of them.

So I say: Wives, if you want to help your husbands, believe in them. DOROTHY DIX.

FAREWELL AT BRADALBANE

On the evening of June 30th, 1930, a goodly number gathered at the manse, Bradalbane, to bid farewell to Miss Gwendolyn Paethorpe, prior to her departure for Nova Scotia. Mrs. Hugh F. McKay, presided and called on Mrs. John A. McLeod who read an address, Mrs. Gordon McKay, making the presentation, Miss Paethorpe replied in a very pleasing manner and fitting words were also spoken by several present. A dainty luncheon was served and all joined in singing Bless be the tie that binds.

so your efficient work in the Sunday School and Mission Band. You came among us a stranger and willingly entered into the work of the church. You have endeared yourself to all who had the opportunity of working with you. We have seen in you the traits of character that will make you a leader, especially among the young. As you go from us to further your education may the blessing of God attend you is the earnest wish of your many friends. Please accept this purse as a small token of our esteem, in behalf of the congregation.

ADDRESS TO TEACHER

Dear Miss Paethorpe: The members of Bradalbane congregation, of the United Church of Canada, wish at this time to express our appreciation of your services as organist in our church during the past year. al-

Dear Miss Craig: Again, in our school, we have come to another closing term and are looking forward to spending a happy vacation, but it is with feelings of regret that

Etiquette

Q. At a wedding breakfast, who enters the dining room first?

A. The bride and groom.

Q. When one is sending a bon voyage gift, how should the package be addressed?

A. The address should include the name of the vessel, the line to which it belongs, and the number of the pier.

Q. Is it good taste to have the nails highly polished and much colored?

A. No; the nails should be immaculate and dull-polished.

A Morning Smile

SUCH NONSENSE

Doctor (to new patient): "Have you been to see any one before coming to me?"

Patient: "Yes, sir, I went to the chemist for a little advice."

Doctor: "And what nonsense did he tell you?"

Patient: "He told me to come to you!"

The patient was examined without further remark.

For The Cook

BANANA PINEAPPLE SALAD

Place slices of canned pineapple on crisp lettuce on individual plates. Cover with mayonnaise containing lemon juice. Slice bananas, and coat each slice with well-ground pecans. Cover the pineapple with these slices, and in the centre place a roll of cheese relish mixed with a little cayenne pepper. Have all ingredients very cold.

We learn that you are aiding your departure from amongst us. As our teacher for the past year, you have won our love and respect. You have diligently and untiringly helped us in our studies, for which we thank you, and have faithfully urged us to be diligent, also, in our tasks. Altho sometimes we may have been very trying, you have been patient with us, and conscientiously endeavored to direct our young minds to acquire knowledge, which we are told is more to be desired than riches. In the social life of the community where you have always taken a pleasing and helpful part, you shall be greatly missed but, as we have come to the parting of our ways, where we must say farewell, our hearty good wishes go with you for the future. Please accept this small gift as a token of our esteem and sincere good-will. Signed, Pupils of Wheatley River School.

The correct summer beverage for children

COLD or iced, Ovaltine is far more than a delicious summer drink. It is a builder of necessary nervous energy, a creator of bodily vitality and strength, and is not overheating to the blood.

COLD OVALTINE, more than all beverages, is the correct summer drink for children, because it combines in easily digested and quickly assimilated form, all the essential vitamins and other food elements conducive to growth. Ovaltine is good for both young and old.

Tom Thumb's Golf

One of the business romances of a year which has been not too kind to business is found in the story of the Tom Thumb miniature golf courses. The details are from the magazine Time:

"Inventor of and apparently chief investor in this new industry is Garnet Carter, the mild, easy-going drawing owner, of Fairlyland Inn, Lookout Mountain, Tennessee. About a year ago Mr. Carter did what many a U. S. hosteler had done in the past—installed a miniature putting course on his lawn. Finding guests used this more than they did his $340,000 regular course, he made improvements. Tunnels, bunkers, miniature traps were added. Then he invented a putting green made of cotton seed hulls, sure to wear long and well.

"Guests saw the course, paid Mr. Carter to build others in their home cities. The U. S. asked him to design one for a District of Columbia park. At this point a great idea came to the Master of Fairlyland Inn. He patented his special greens, the name 'Tom Thumb Golf.' Patents for his hollow log hazard and other features are pending. Tom Thumb Golf courses became his private property, to use as he would. And he used them shrewdly. A. Mr. J. P. Young of Florida, land of many real estate schemes joined with him and they started to organize. Regional districts were created in which were started manufacturing and distributing companies for Tom Thumb Golf courses.

"This was inaugurated the newest U. S. industry, miniature golf. The Carter course consists of 18 holes, each from 26 ft. to 50 ft. long. There are runways, small bunkers,

Old Age Pensions

(From the Halifax Citizen, an Independent Labor Journal)

One of the chief planks of Organized Labor is Old Age Pensions. That has been a battle cry of Labor for many years, and Labor is not concerned as to which of the two political parties, Liberal or Conservative, brings such legislation into force. Labor's one concern is to realize a long cherished goal—to see Old Age Pensions written into the Legislation of the Dominion.

We are on the eve of a general election—what do rival leaders say ament, this question of such grave interest to the toiling masses?

Premier King, whilst a believer in Old Age Pensions, declares that "the payment of money to the provinces in Old Age Pensions is a vicious principle."

What does Hon. R. B. Bennett, Conservative leader, have to say? He makes a definite, clear-cut statement: "If the Conservative Government succeeds on July 28, and I have every reason to believe it will, I will see to it that Old Age Pensions are paid to every province of the Dominion from the Federal Treasury."

"That is my answer to a prime minister who is not concerned with the importation into Canada of Russian coal and New Zealand butter."

"That is my answer to a prime minister who says the payment of money to the provinces in Old Age Pensions is a vicious principle. It is a national obligation. Premier King says it cannot be done constitutionally. If the Dominion can pay 80 per cent of Old Age Pensions, why can not it pay 99 per cent?"
