WHERE 200 TOWNS AND 900 VILLAGES ARE WAR-WRECKED

LONDON, March 16.—Concurrently with the Petrograd announcement that an important decree relating to the autonomy of Poland will shortly be issued, the Daily Chronicle publishes the following: "For no country, not even stricken Belgium, has the war spelt greater tragedy than for unhappy Poland. The people of Belgium, despite their intense sufferings, can find some comfort in the knowledge that their misfortunes spring from a common cause and are mitigated by a common inspiration. But the Poles have no such satisfaction. An appeal by the general relief committee of the victims of the war in Poland brings home the meaning of the war to that distracted country. Over a line of 650 miles some 3,000,000 Austro-Germans and four million Russians are fighting each other. For more than six months they have been trampling down and tearing up in the Polish land and annihilating and exterminating its inhabitants. Forced to a cause which is not their own, the Poles must engage in fratricidal strife and put by both sides in the first line of battle, that they often kill one another in bayonet charges.

The Poles have hitherto furnished 1,500,000 soldiers, almost equally divided between the Russian and Austro-German armies. Up to now four hundred thousand of them have been lost, killed, wounded or taken prisoners. Repeatedly over the past year the land has been submerged about 200 towns and 9,000 villages. The material damages amount to more than $600,000,000. About five thousand of these villages have been razed to the ground either in battle or in retreat. To stay pursuit of the German hordes, the Poles have been burned. More than one hundred churches have been pulled down and more than one thousand badly damaged. "All stores of corn and forage have been seized or destroyed, and one million horses and two million cattle have been taken to the rear. They have perished for want of pasture. Ruin has come equally upon the peasant population and the great landowners, who have forfeited considerable investments. The rural population of 7,000,000 is reduced to beggary. Three quarters of the towns are equally in the midst of the operations of war. Some, like Kalisz, with 50,000 inhabitants, have been destroyed. Others, great industrial centres, such as Czenstochowa and Sosnowice, of 70,000 inhabitants each, and Lodz, which was twice captured with 450,000 inhabitants, are suffering a terrible financial crisis. Warsaw, the capital, with its 900,000 inhabitants, nearly twice as populous as Brussels, or Rome, has been sorely tried by being constantly threatened with capture, overwhelmed by aerial bombardment and cut out from the world. "All factories have stopped working. Many are greatly damaged; one hundred very important ones have been destroyed. The whole of the industrial production, amounting to above $400,000,000 yearly, has been ruined, and 400,000 workmen are now without means of subsistence together with a multitude of artisans and tradesmen deprived with their families of any earnings. The great majority of townsmen, three million in number, are destitute. "In these circumstances, Poland appeals to the civilized nations for aid. Donations may be sent to the Swiss National Bank at Lausanne."

Red Cross Society

The numerous branches and affiliated societies have been doing splendid work in the past months. The demand for money contributions and Hospital supplies are greater now than ever. We urge upon all even at great sacrifice to continue to put forward their best efforts to provide our suffering soldiers at the front with first aid necessities. Never before was the call so urgent, never before a loyal response be more fully appreciated than now.

FROM FRANCE

The following letters have been sent the Patriot by Capt. A. R. B. Duck: Northern France, Feb. 18th, 1915.

Sir:—Well I am here at last so must write you at once for fear I may not get a chance to do so for some time, as we will be in the trenches in a few days. At present we are billeted in a small village about 10 miles from the hottest part of the battle line. You can hear the boom of the big guns and the flash of the bursting shells light up the whole sky at night, but we sleep soundly and are just as lazy in the morning as ever. We get very little news of what is actually going on at the front only what we pick up from the supply column and the ambulance trains passing through. I wish I could give you an account of our trip here from Salisbury but cannot on account of rules and regulations, so I will not say anything about it except that it took just a week to reach here. We passed through a large part of France on our way and one thing was distinctly impressed on all of us. Never did we see a young Frenchman except in uniform. All the work on the farms is being done by the old men and women. Oh, if the boys at home could only see conditions here they would be rushing for the front. It will take a long time I'm afraid to bring it home to them at home what the British Empire is up against. If you could just walk through the village and see the marks left by the shells, bullets, etc., and hear the stories told by the peasants, it would beat any recruiting sergeant. Women violated, clergymen shot, murder, arson and common decency forbids writing of what those outlaws have perpetrated. Surely there must be a day of reckoning for such beasts. Well, the 10th Battalion is in good condition. They are a fine bunch of men. We have a good bunch of officers. The staff consists of Lieut. Col. Boyle, Major McLaren, Major Ormond, Capt. Duck, Capt. Ross, Q. M., Capt. Glidden, M. D. Our first mail from home arrived today and never was anything so welcome. I don't know where the rest of the brigade are. Some of them are in the first brigade and are already fighting for Canada and Old England. After a week or two when it will make no difference I will write you an extended trip, etc. It is wonderful how smoothly everything works. We did not lose a single man or a strap on our trip here. She speaks well for discipline and our Q. M. and Transport Officer, Well, it will soon be March, and spring, but when we will see Canada again no one knows. It looks as if we will want every man available in the Empire to push this thing to an end. Well, I must close now.

Sincerely,
A. R. B. DUCK.

LETTER NO. 2.

France 24th Feb. 1915. (At a hot point.)

Well we are in the thick of it at last. We left England on the 13th of February and after a week's travelling a night train journey through the most beautiful country imaginable brought us to our billeting area. I fully understand the term La Belle France now; I had no idea that France was such a beautiful and peaceful looking place. Miles and miles of comfortable looking homes, vineyards, orchards, growing trees, etc., and a lack of young men. I never saw one young man not in uniform during the whole three days' run. At one place the train stopped, a couple of us ran to a farm house to buy some eggs and found a woman all alone in tears with an open letter on the table. She seemed glad to see us and explained that her husband had been wounded a month or two ago and was still in the hospital and the notice she had just received was from her son's C. O. informing her that her son was killed. I gave her a few lines of comfort and a letter to her mother and she was extremely sorry to hear of it. That is an end as far as the official is concerned but in the little home among the vine clad hills a mother sits wondering if her other two boys are still living or if this war is never to cease and if one crazy monarch can defy the whole world, if a country peaceful and happy is to be torn to pieces by the Prussian craze for a world wide Empire. I don't want to see any more homes like this one. It makes one wonder if all things he has listened to and believed can be a reality. I'm writing this in the range of the German guns, but we have not been shelled yet, one reason is it has been foggy since we came and their air craft cannot spot us. I saw an interesting thing the first day we were here, a French aeroplane was soaring over the German positions giving our gunners the range and the Germans were doing their best to get him. Shells! the air seemed full of them, but that fellow dodged like a cornered hare and came back untouched. They fly over the artillery and drop what they call daylight bombs which explode in the air showing our gunners the exact position of the enemy's guns. Speaking about the guns it is wonderful the way they have been hidden. You walk right past a 9.6 gun and never know it is there, but when they unmask and let fly, well you imagine you are gone for good. As I am writing the windows and doors of our house are shaking like everything but everything is going along with their work as if they were in a training camp. My Orderly has just brought in two copies of the Patriot so the Patriot is under fire for once, not the first time you were it? Our mail comes from the men in the trenches and hear them quite plainly. Last night two men were shot in the trenches with the Canadians.

They were working with a captured of the Canadians at the time. Part of each Battalion are trained to throw grenades. They are shaped somewhat like a baseball bat with a long piece of tape at the end to keep them straight, when you fire them, they do excellent work when you get a chance to use them. The most we will get and get an issue of tobacco and cigarettes weekly. Well this letter is rather a mixture of things but it is hard to keep to one subject long enough to describe it. After a week or two I will send you a long account of actual work in the trenches, etc., as I keep a diary and will write my next letter from it; today I just had a few minutes so scribbled this off as fast as possible. Thanks very much for the papers.

Sincerely,
A. R. B. DUCK.

ASSERTS GERMANY WILL NEVER GIVE BACK BELGIUM

MANCHESTER, Eng., March 18.—The Hague correspondent of the Manchester Guardian writes that the feature of an interview with one of the principal leaders of the Centre Party in Germany that was accorded to a Dutch Journalist was his emphatic declaration that Germany would not relinquish Belgium. The interview took place in Belgium and is published in the weekly Voorhoede. "We shall not give back Belgium," said the German politician. "That is entirely out of the question. A land that we have had to conquer at the cost of so much blood and so many tears we shall never relinquish. Against that we shall always set ourselves." The speaker went on to make the usual accusations against Belgium having become the dupe of England and having been sold to her. "Do you think this war will last long?" he was asked. "I suppose it will," was the answer, "unless Germany is soon placed in a position to conclude a glorious peace. Germany will open no peace negotiations unless it has prospects of such a peace." The German political leader, whose name is not given, went on to assert that Belgium was backward in social laws and institutions compared with Holland, and that workmen had lived under an out of date regime and enjoyed nothing like the welfare of the German or Dutch workman. The moral was, of course, the need for the advent of a German administration. The Journalist observed that there were many in Holland who thought that the fault for all that had happened lay at the door of the Kaiser, and that confirmation of this was to be found in the fact that everything was in such a state of readiness for war in Germany.

"It is an infamous libel to assert that Germany sought this war," was the reply. "But it has been known to us for some years that British forces were working in the dark in order to force us to force war upon us. Since 1907—and that secret I may now make public—our army really always stood ready for war."
