"THE JANITOR" COMEDY RIOT

Santa Claus Cannot do it All Without The Help Of His Pals—Be One

pression on the mind of the average person. A vision rises of mother's smile as the stockings were hung around the chimney, of firm resolutions, never kept, of staying awake all night in hopes of hearing the reindeer on the roof, of a mad rush to the fireplace as soon as day dawned, while sleep still dimmed the eyes. "Breathes there the man with soul so dead," who will not be affected by such a picture. But there is another side, the "dark" side. There are children who will not smile or laugh on Christmas morning. There are children whom Santa Claus cannot visit unless you become a Santa Pal. Guardian readers with these two pictures in your minds will you allow needy children to remain Santaless without your intervention?

The number of new Santa-Pals which are being added to the list daily is very gratifying, but many children yet remain to be cared for on Christmas Eve. Applicants to the list of needy children should remember that toys, candy and fruit are the only articles of distribution this year.

Following are the names of needy children with those who have been already adopted omitted:
