PRINCE EDWARD ISLE.

Bonnie Prince Edward Isle,
I love thee well,
Thy charms and beauties fair,
No tongue can tell!

Thy woods and streams and hills
With loveliness abound,
Each landscape has its own sweet spell,
Each brook its sound.

Thy fields and meadows green,
Spread far and wide;
Thy lakes reflect both sun and moon,
And mountain side.

Thy fertile soil, well tilled,
Yields rich reward;
While flocks and cattle rove and feed
On thy green sward.

Thy sons and daughters happy are
On thee that dwell.

To Him whose hand enriches all
Let praises swell.

—Rev. A. Craise, New Dominion.

THE VALUE OF TIME.

People often make the excuse for not trying to improve themselves by reading and studying that "they cannot find time." We may not find time, but we can make time for the thing that really interests us. If Gladstone with the weight of an empire on his mind thought it necessary to make time for self-improvement, always carrying a book in his pocket least an unexpected spare moment slip through his grasp, wha should we common mortals not resort to, to save the precious moments? The fact is most people manage somehow to make time for the thing which lies nearest to their hearts, and there are few of us, who lead such busy lives that we cannot spend systematically at least a few minutes, half an hour or an hour out of the twenty-four for the mind's improvement. Even half an hour a day systematically and faithfully devoted to study will do wonders in a few years. Every young person should start out with a determination to invest just as much as possible in himself. This self-investment is the best one can ever make, for no panic, bankruptcy or failure can destroy it. Every good book you read, every line of poetry you treasure up, every conscientious visit to an art gallery or museum you make, every glance of beautiful art or nature you can get will add just so much to your personal value and will be worth more to you than silver or gold. Gladstone said: "Believe me when I tell you that thrift of time will pay you in after life with an usury of profit beyond your most sanguine dreams and that waste of it will make you dwindle alike in intellectural and moral statue beyond your darkest reckoning.

Scarcely anything else seems so positively wicked as waste of time. If you lose money you may be able to restore it, if you lose friends you may get others, but loss of time can never be restored.

AS IT WAS IN THE BEGINNING.

"Oh, dear, I just wish we had never bought a motor car!" exclaimed Mrs. Guthrie impatiently, as she and her husband sat in their new car and waited while the chauffeur tried over and over again to crank the refactory engine. "I don't care for motoring at all."

Mr. Guthrie laughed heartily. He was a hale, care-free-looking man o seventy-five. "And we haven't had our first ride yet in our own car," he said, "Dou you know, Nancy, of what I'm reminded?"

"No, John, how should I know?" answered Mrs. Guthrie, rather absently, for her mind and eyes were both on the chauffeur, still working patiently at his task.

"Well, I am reminded of a day pretty nearly fifty years ago when I saw a little woman, who was just getting ready to cook her first meal with a glass pitcher in her hand I in her own house, climb over a stile remember just how she looked with her yellow curls falling out round her face under a poke bonnet, which was trimmed with roses and tied with broad magenta ribbons. She was mighty pretty."

"Oh, John!" expostulated Mrs. Guthrie, but she smiled.

"Then I remember, as I ran to meet her, leaving the timber I was splitting for our first kitchen fire, how she caught her hoopskirt on a nail on that stile, and I just saved her from a bad fall. But I didn't save the cream. I spilled out of the pitcher and went all over those beautiful magenta ribbons. And what do you think that little woman said, she who hadn't yet had a meal in her own little home? She said, very crossly indeed, "Oh, dear, I just wish I'd never gone into housekeeping!" Now, Nancy, we're off. The car run beautifully, doesn't it?"

"Yes, it does, you dear old—dear."
