Gallup Poll of Canada

POLL REPORTERS LOOK FOR TROUBLE AND FIND LOTS OF DIFFERENT KINDS Only About One in Five Canadians Claim to Have No Big Problems Today

By Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

TORONTO, May 4 - Over 200 Gallup Poll opinion reporters went looking for trouble, over the length and breadth of Canada - and found it in all shapes and sizes.

Point of the survey was to find what individual problems were top-most in the minds of the Canadian public at this time, and the question which reporters put to all types of adults was this:

"WHAT IS THE MOST DIFFICULT PROBLEM YOU, YOURSELF, FACE TODAY?"

The people interviewed were so selected as to make a true cross-section of the grown-up population, and it has been proved that the opinions, attitudes, and convictions of such a sample reflect accurately the opinions, attitudes and convictions of the whole adult population.

The answers to this survey were almost as varied as the types of people interviewed, and ran from the sublime to the ridiculous.

One woman in eastern Canada said, seriously, that her biggest problem was that her husband "just wouldn't stop making money." Another girl was worried as to whether or not she should get married with a family income of $20 a week. One man's sore foot supplied his biggest problem. A farmer was chiefly worried about keeping the spring waters out of his basement. Biggest problem for one lady was to find a "good home for my cat while I go away this summer." A Halifax housewife was worried because there were not sufficient laundries in that city.

In spite of the variety of such answers, however, they did group themselves into several main headings. So that the Institute was able to determine that the predominant worry problem of Canadians was financial-making both ends meet. Second was housing.

Only a blithe 22 per cent of the adult population claim to have no problems. Another 10 per cent declined to divulge what their chief problem was. That left 68 per cent of the population with problems they could talk about, and this 68 per cent grouped themselves into the following main heads. Because some had more than one problem, the total adds to more than 68 per cent:

- Financial; wages; cost of living; family expenses 14%
Housing; a place to live 11%
Domestic problems (food; rationing; maid service; poor coal; bringing up children in the absence of husbands; etc.) 9%
Employment (Trying to find a suitable job; veteran re-establishment, etc.) 7%
Business problems (getting farm, office help; lack of materials; crop conditions; etc.) 7%
Personal problems (the children's future; getting shirts; trying to buy a car; etc.) 5%
Taxes (Income tax forms; high taxation, etc.) 4%
Economic security (Old Age Pensions; "What will happen when I'm too old to work"; "Will I lose my job in a depression" etc.) 4%
Health matters 3%
Miscellaneous 6%

While the question was aimed at ascertaining individual problems, a few replied in terms of the international scene, United Nations, Russia and so forth. These were grouped under "miscellaneous" above. (World Copyright Reserved)

THIRTY new first class passenger cars, which will include many novel features that provide additional comforts, are being built for the Canadian National Railways. They will be longer and wider than those now in use, but will have fewer seats.

A glass partition will divide each car into two main sections, one seating 32 non-smokers and the other 28 smokers. There will be lounge rooms at either end of the cars, one for men and one for women, equipped with double wash basins and dental bowls. Thermostats will control heat in each section and room of the cars. New illuminated drinking fountains will be operated by an air pressure system.

Before the order for the new day coaches was placed with the Canadian Car and Foundry Company, Montreal, a mock-up was made in the C.N.R.'s Point St. Charles Shops. Every detail was inspected and tried out by executive officers and engineering designers, and architects so that not a single feature would be overlooked which might add to the comfort and convenience of the travelling public.

In these photographs of the mock-up, models are shown demonstrating some of the novel features that will be included in the new cars. Above, a four-passenger section at one end of the car shows the large double-table, the new type luggage rack with lights over each of the more comfortable, rotating and adjustable seats, the removable tables which will be available in coaches for the first time, and the bright appearance of the interior decoration to give a highly pleasing, restful effect. Below, the ladies lounge room, shows a new design dressing table with adjustable seat, purse shelf and new type overhead lights, and the wide window with venetian blind opposite the new lounge seat.
