"We can only exterminate, we can only destroy it at its source." That was why he said Jean Paul Sabourin of St. Isidore, Prescott, Que., who this week shot down three enemy planes in Libya in a single day, was fighting for Canada. He said Joseph G. L. Robillard of Hull, Que., who last week was decorated for gallantry in the skies over France was fighting for Canada. Why the hundreds of young men from his own city of Quebec who are on garrison duty in Hong Kong were fighting for Canada "volunteers, all of them," he said, "to keep danger and death and destruction from our homes and families. They are fighting for Canada. The women in the munition factories are fighting for Canada, you, in your daily life, and of you, on the trains, in the hotels, in offices, in country stores, when you tell the thousands you meet the cold, hard truth, not as whispers of fear, but as harbingers of fortitude, of courage, of faith, of union, you are fighting for Canada."

Maj. Power said he firmly believes that in the circumstances confronting the nation the people of Canada will accept cheerfully and willingly the additional burdens which dire necessity would compel. "There will be regimentation," he said, "personally, I abhor the word, and I detest the deed, but this country must work as one. You know something of the wartime prices and trade board and the price ceiling. Soon you will know more. Perhaps it may hurt you personally... it cannot prevent business from being hurt, but it can and will prevent business from being ruined. Through income tax and other taxation we have already taken much of your wealth. It is not unlikely that we will have to give, or have referred to the national resources mobilization act, and said the Dominion government proposes to use its provisions to bring about national selective service. "In this, the greatest crisis in our history," he said, "it is only by unselfish devotion to duty, by all sharing the common burden, by all joining in the common task... that we can overcome the common enemy. "When this has been done, when you have done your job, then we shall go forward as a race, and as a nation with prayers on our lips, hope in our hearts, and strength in our arms, to meet and overthrow the enemies who would destroy us all."

mans attacked the Minsk-Moscow highway threatening Gorky, little more than 20 miles west and almost within artillery range of the capital. A wall of fire from a long pile of straw and dry sticks, a third of a mile wide, sent flames skyward and blocked a German tank advance in this sector, he disclosed. Then the tables turned with Red army counter-attacks which threw the Germans behind the Nara and Moscow rivers. Other counter-attacks at the same time along the arc about Moscow sent the Germans reeling in retreat which at some points turned into disorderly flight. Confusion in the Nazi ranks spread, Govorov continued, when Soviet infantry, cavalry, artillery and planes saw their chance and threw everything they had at the Germans. The Germans, already ousted from Rostov, had retreated to Taganrog and sought to establish defensive positions there. A communique broadcasted by the Moscow radio also said the railway station of Uzlovaya, 40 miles southwest of Tu'a, Dubna to the west of Tu'a, and Verkhoze, northeast of Livny were recaptured in day-long fighting which raged on all fronts.

British mechanized division had been destroyed in a Japanese advance over the Malayan frontier toward Singapore, and the Japanese press claimed that 21 American and British naval vessels had been sunk or put out of commission in the week-old war of the Pacific. A headquarters communique claimed the latest naval damage inflicted upon American forces including the sinking of a submarine by a Japanese destroyer off the Philippines on Saturday. The claimed destruction of the British mechanized division was said by headquarters to have occurred Friday. Twenty tanks and sixty trucks were captured in the advance, the Japanese claimed. tion of the danger and a grimmer determination to face it bravely, but boldly and above all unitedly," Maj. Power said. "Before the imminent peril which confronts us we can do nothing else." Only a day or so ago the "imminent Japs" had appeared in war to the Pacific. The United States—a month ago hesitant, uncertain, undecided—took up the sword with breath-taking speed and unanimity. "We, too, are a nation of the Americas," said Maj. Power, "and one of those who have preached the doctrine that Canada was a 'pays d'Amerique' with its future and its interests centered on this continent. I still believe that doctrine. "But America knows, both north and south, and we in Canada know, that we cannot immunize ourselves, we cannot isolate ourselves against an evil which is omnivorous, malignant, deadly. "The source of the most insidious, most destructive evil which the world has ever known is wherever the hordes of Hitler, the slaves of Mussolini, the murderers of Japan, are to be found.

McNaughton Sends message To Troops

By Ross Munro
Canadian Press War Correspondent

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Dec. 14 — (CP Cable) — Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the Canadian Corps in Britain, tonight sent this message to the troops upon the occasion of Christmas and of the second anniversary of the arrival in December 1939, of leading elements of the 1st division. His message follows:—

It now is two years since leading elements of the Canadian Army arrived in this country. The equipment and training of these formations was completed and since then a steadily-increasing force has been held ready for any service which might be required; meanwhile other forces have been organized by Canada and dispatched to the far east and to our own western shore, now menaced by a new foe. So far it has been our principal duty to stand guard in these islands, to be ready to meet any sudden decision for, with the enemy's hordes within a few short miles of this vital centre of civilization, the reason is evident to all. Nevertheless through long months on watch and in repeated routine training there have been many disappointments at action deferred and great patience has been required; it has been given without complaint and I count it a privilege and a satisfaction to be able to say so and to thank all ranks for the steady purpose and acceptance of conditions which they have shown. On behalf of all our force I thank the people of Britain also for their continued hospitality and friendliness which have done so much to ease our path. From a very small beginning the Canadian army has now grown to many tens of thousands of men and women. New units and formations and reserves have come to us as quickly as ships could be found to bring them here and as they have arrived the organization of our military units, hospitals, schools, repair establishments and many other needed facilities have been pressed forward; meanwhile our engineer and signal and forestry corps have made their contribution to the life and welfare of the community. Throughout this long period of preparation which circumstance has given us, the corps, divisions, armored formations and other field units have been completed in equipment and trained together and with squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force assigned to army co-operation. These tasks have been pursued with untiring attention and the whole has been made ready for decisive employment when the opportunity comes to take full effect on the enemy. The future holds great difficulties and dangers, and much hardship; there is no doubt, but we go forward firm in our confidence in the ultimate result—the triumph of justice and right over the dark forces of evil which oppose us.

New bombing raids On Wake Island

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14 — (AP) — The United States navy reported today two additional bombing attacks on Wake Island. Two Japanese bombers were shot down. The island, the navy said in a communique, still is being defended by marines. One of the two latest attacks on Wake Island, a mid-ocean stepping stone on the severed air route to the far east, was said to have been "undertaken in great force," but damage on the island was termed inconsequential.

Canadas Women Boom war aids As year turns

By PATRICIA CONNOLLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Dec. 14 — (CP) — Canadian women stepped far beyond their homes, offices and "the common task" in 1944 and as wives, mothers and sisters answered the call to help wage war. Right from the vice-regal residence of the governor-general came royal inspiration in the exhortatory effect of Princess Alice in various phases of women's war work. Canadian women took employment in war factories, armament and munitions plants, and in industry late in the year, the formation of the Canadian Women's Army Corp. and the Canadian Women's Auxiliary Air Force brought further opportunity for even more active service. Speaking of the part played by Canadian Women as a whole Mr. Thorson said "women of Canada are playing an increasingly important part in the war effort. For the first time in the history of this country, with the exception of women in the nursing services, women of Canada are taking their place side by side with the men in the armed forces, in munitions plants and war factories."

Winnipeg Airman Faces charge

GLACE BAY, N. S., Dec. 14 — Sgt. Pilot Robert Parker of Winnipeg, member of the Royal Canadian Air Force, has been charged with manslaughter as the result of the death in hospital here Sept. 15 of Sgt. Pilot D. R. Heathcote of Grimsby, Ont., after an automobile accident near here. Parker's preliminary hearing opened here Saturday but was adjourned for a week. Crown authorities were unable to say whether the accused, transferred to western Canada since the accident, would be brought back. Heathcote died of injuries suffered when he was killed through the windshield of an automobile driven by Parker when it crashed into the rear of a truck Aug. 23.

Women In The News

Several women made their contributions directly through government war endeavor, among them Mrs. Phyllis Turner, economic adviser to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board; Mrs. Irene Bls Espy, also economic adviser to the Board; Miss Laura Pepper of the Agriculture department who continued in her efforts to educate Canadian people to get value for their food dollar. Miss Marion Harlow, newly appointed assistant director of Nutrition Services, is assisting in the formative plans of the nation-wide nutrition campaign.
