In Memoriam

MR. EDWARD TURNER

On February 28th, the death of Mr. Edward Charles Turner occurred at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James MacBeth, in Montague. Mr. Turner had not enjoyed good health for some time, though able to be up and around until about three weeks before his passing. He was born at Dundas in September, 1861, and was the son of George and Susan Turner, and until about ten years ago, when he moved to Montague, had lived all his life in Dundas, following his trade as a blacksmith. He was united in marriage to Catherine MacDonald of Dundas 58 years ago by whom he is survived.

Mr. Turner was a man of kindly disposition and well respected everywhere. During his sickness, though deprived of the power of speech, he yet wore his genial smile of welcome to the many friends who visited him. That he was well liked by those who knew him best was proved by the large number who drove out to the cemetery at Dundas for the interment, as well as by the number present at the service in the church in Montague.

Those left to mourn his loss, besides his widow, are one son, John, of Halifax; and four daughters, (Minnie) Mrs. John Beaton, Dundas; (Anna) Mrs. Malcolm McLeod; (Florrie) Mrs. Angus McLeod, both of Jamaica Plains, Mass. and (Ina) Mrs. James McBeth, Montague. Also two brothers, Thomas of Dundas and Wellington in the U.S.A., a brother, Havelock, predeceased him last year in the U. S. A.

The funeral service was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Montague, and was conducted by Rev. T. Owen Hughes. During the service a favourite hymn of Mr. Turner "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Saviour," was sung by Mr. John Beer, Brooklyn. Interment was at the old cemetery in Dundas.

Pallbearers were: Messrs. Maynard MacDonald, Norman J. MacPherson, Guy Nelson, Russell Burhoe, Norman Nicholson, Alex. McLeod, Athol MacKinnon and James Currie.

NEW YORK.—Full silver foxes brought a top of $107.50 and an average of $45.58 at the beginning of the sale of Nieman & Co. pelts by the New York Auction Company. About 93 per cent. of the initial offering of 4,000 skins was sold. The best types of the silvers sold to best advantage and showed advances up to 10 per cent., while the ordinary qualities held firm. Some 12,000 skins were offered at the sale. Canada's quota has been filled for the year.

BIRTHS

SMITH—At the Prince Edward Island Hospital on March 19, 1941, to Mr. and Mrs. Ivor Smith, Rocky Point, a daughter

"The Bright Idea Club" composed of teenage pupils of Montague High School recently sent a cheque for $100. to Red Cross Headquarters for war work. This grand amount was raised by the members of the club staging a playette in their local theatre and by selling candy. These young people are to be congratulated on this their first attempt at raising money for the supplying of comforts for men of the services and for refugees.

Many Red Cross Juniors are busily engaged these days in knitting for refugees. A number of attractive afghans are on display at Headquarters and may be seen by Juniors and others who wish to inspect them.

Recently a number of pupils of Prince Street School, headed by Frankie Clarke, held a Peanut Sale and contributed the proceeds, $1.61 to the Red Cross for war work. Those who helped with the sale were Bruce Leitch, Earl Perry, Al Goss and Billie Howatt. This is not the first amount these young Juniors have raised for war work,—several other amounts were previously contributed from candy sales, etc.

Interpreting The War

By Kirke L. Simpson
Associated Press Staff Writer

A cabinet crisis in Belgrade appears to have caused some delay in the Yugoslav government's plans to line itself up, in a limited way, with the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis. But even if the plan finally goes through, there are several factors which tend to lessen the impact of the development of the Greek-British allies.

For one thing, it is taking much more time than Berlin expected to wear down Yugoslavian resistance. Time was vital for Britain in mustering forces to support the Greeks against a German flank attack from Bulgaria.

Three weeks or more have passed since the Nazi legions poured into Bulgaria. Those weeks may make all the difference in what happens if and when the Germans actually strike. Their most glittering opportunity to flatten Greece swiftly has gone by.

Well-founded Balkan reports credit Britain with having massed more than 100,000 fully equipped troops in northeastern Greece. She has also managed to furnish Greek army reserves with weapons and other fighting equipment.

Full-scale Greek mobilization to fight on two fronts is indicated. The ironic note about that is that presumably a substantial share of the battle equipment in Greek hands is of Italian origin. It came from British spoils, captured from Mussolini's shattered North African army.

Pending disclosure of reported Yugoslavian reservations, the full significance of her plan to align herself with the axis is not clear. If the Vardar Valley and its standard gauge railroad, running southward from Yugoosslavia to Salonika, is closed to German army use, the German clash with the Greek-British allies must come on a narrow front.

The main German attack, assuming that Salonika would be its objective, must depend on long and difficult supply lines. The valley of the Struma River is the other Balkan gateway to Salonika. It is far from being as suitable as to mass troop movements as the Yugoslavian route via the Vardar.

There is considerable significance in reports from Belgrade that active cabinet opposition to the deal with Germany stemmed from Serb representatives. While some 90 per cent of the 16,000,000 population of Yugoslavia is of Slavic origin, the Serbs, in whose behalf Russia moved in 1914 to bring on the first great war, are closest to their Russian kin. There have been widespread rumors that Russia was working undercover in Yugoslavia to stir up opposition to Germany.

In the same year, he became Rhodes Scholar for Prince Edward Island, and received honors in the Modern History School in Oxford University (B.A. 1913, M.A. 1917) After teaching in the universities of McGill, Manitoba and British Columbia (there Head of the Department of History, 1928-1931), he became Archivist for the Province of Nova Scotia and Special Lecturer in History, Dalhousie University. He is the author of many articles and books.

Mr. C. B. Sherwood of the Valley View Fur Farm, Norton, N.B., was a return passenger by the Canadian Airways on a business trip to Summerside and Charlottetown this week. While here he visited his aunt, Mrs. B. W. Sherwood at the Dominion Experimental Station.

Red Cross Supplies fill Needs overseas

A terse cable from Canadian Red Cross Headquarters in London, England, has called for unlimited quantities of blankets, quilts and relief clothing, Dr. Fred W. Routley, National Commissioner, announced yesterday. More shipments of socks, sweaters, scarves, helmets, gloves, mitts, pyjamas, bed jackets, dressing gowns, T bandages and wash cloths will be urgently needed soon, the cable from the Society's Overseas Commissioner, Major, C. A. Scott, revealed.

"We have already disposed of all available supplies for which there was a demand, amounting since the first of the year to 1,211,657 articles," the cable concluded.

This figure illuminates the urgency of Britain's desperate need, Dr. Routley pointed out, for these articles, given out since January, represent as great a total as distribution of comforts for the whole of 1940. In addition, 502,660 surgical dressings have been requisitioned as well as 596 cases of relief clothing which contain from 30 to 70 complete outfits, Dr. Routley said.

Unceasing air raids have created staggering demands for relief and the three great warehouses of the Canadian Red Cross Overseas have pumped steady streams of supplies into devastated areas. Huge amounts of clothing, woollen comforts, blankets and surgical dressings have also gone to all branches of the fighting services. In the past two months the R.C.A.F. and the C.A.S.C. in England have received 81,604 articles; Merchant Navy Comforts Service 23,378 articles; Canadian Hospitals and Medical units, 7,554 woollen comforts and 116,470 surgical dressings; Free French Hospital 1,260 articles; British Fire Brigades, 115,000 woollen comforts; British Red Cross and Greek Red Cross, 607,806 articles and 386,190 surgical dressings; Women's Voluntary Services Companies, soldiers', sailors' and airmen's families, Gibraltar, Czech, Belgian and Polish Refugee Committees 376,055 woollen comforts and 567 cases relief clothing.

And, the Canadian Red Cross is happy to be able to report that it has quantities of comforts of all kinds on the way to England and ready to be shipped to replace the depleted stores. All organizations doing war work through the Red Cross are now being asked to concentrate on the making of knitted and sewn garments for refugees, evacuees and civilians. Patterns and materials for these are now being prepared by the Women's War Work Committee in Prince Edward Island and will be sent to the different groups just as soon as possible. For the time being, at least, no further yarn is being given out for the making of knitted comforts for men of the services since it is felt that there is a sufficient quantity of these in readiness and in the process of being made.

War poem from Rotary Governor In South Africa

The following inspiring war poem has been received by Dr. J. A. Clark, Past District Governor and member of the Canadian advisory committee of Rotary International, from Cecil J. Sibbell, District Governor of Rotary, South Africa:

Whilst thud of bomb, the crash and roar of gun
Herald the approach of 1941,
We, with a cloudless, noiseless sky, above,
We, from a calm and peaceful sea, send love,
To those in England.

And if the future holds for us as well
The terror of the diving plane, the Hell
Wherein's destroyed all that is held most pure,
We shall be proud if we can but endure
As those in England

Then when a peaceful New Year dawns, and greets
Our ship returning, sees the crippled streets,
Bleeding, but still untrodden by the Hun,
They will bear witness that this war was won
By those in England.

Reports on Marketing of Lobster pack

OTTAWA, March 21 —(CP) — At a cost of $12,000 the fisheries department secured a market for the canned lobsters of the Maritime Provinces, to replace British and European markets wiped out by the war, Fisheries Minister Michaud told the House of Commons today.

That sum, he said was deficit on operations of the lobster controller, Dr. D. B. Finn. This year, provision of $600,000 of working capital for the lobster controller had been made in the war appropriation bill.

If the whole amount were used, he predicted, there would be a profit on the operations. The lobster controller bought up all canned lobsters offered to him and marketed them, but at the same time encouraged canners to market their own product as far as possible. Last year the lobster controller had only been required to handle 20 per cent of the pack and the same small volume was the cause of the deficit.

Answering questions from Conservative House leader Hanson, Mr. Michaud gave a brief outline of the procedure of lobster control. He said lobsters were the only cash crop in many areas of the Maritime Provinces. When war broke out European markets were cut off and the British government placed an embargo on canned lobster which was regarded as a luxury food.

A market for the $20,000,000 crop was found in Canada and the United States. American buyers who formerly considered Canadian lobsters of inferior quality were induced to give them a new trial with the result large sales were made.

Mr. Hanson asked if it would not be a good idea to give the lobster industry a rest in wartime in order to give the lobsters a chance to multiply. He said conservation measures were necessary as lobsters were smaller and scarcer than in earlier days, due to constant fishing.

Mr. Michaud said it would be hard to stop lobster fishing altogether as many people were dependent on it. The department was applying conservation methods by limiting the season for fishing, the size of lobster which could be taken and licensing fishermen.

It was also encouraging people to keep lobsters in pools from which they could be taken the year round for the live lobster trade.

Campaign Workers In Supper Meeting

Final details settled prior to opening of drive for funds on Monday.

Last evening at six o'clock about 200 workers of the Charlottetown organization for the War Services campaign sat down to supper in Zion Church Hall. Capt. Lowther, local chairman for the campaign, was in the chair. Grace was said by Adjutant Hawkes. After full justice was done to the delightful supper provided by the ladies of Zion church, and during the clearing away of the dishes, a short singsong took place under the direction of Mr. Roy Quigley.

The Chairman welcomed all and thanked them for their presence, and stated that all were delighted to work under direction of the Provincial chairman, Mr. Duncan Bonnell. This one great united campaign would save time and costs, and would sustain and strengthen the morale of the fighting men. The objective for the Island was $30,500 and that of the City $15,000. To obtain this amount in the City, six divisions had been set up. Each division consists of five teams of six men each. In addition there was a special names committee, which was already at work, and meeting with a wonderful response from the citizens called upon. There was also a committe of ladies to call on the schools, and another committee of ladies who would make a house-to-house visitation next Thursday.

Captain Lowther then explained in detail much information regarding the pledge cards and other matters in which the workers would be interested.

Mr. Bonnell on being called upon, paid tribute to the work of the chairman for his work in connection with the city campaign. The City merchants had shown a fine spirit and generosity, and he felt sure of success, and asked all for the closest co-operation in the great endeavor which lay in front of us

Mr. Alban Farmer spoke briefly in connection with his duties as Provincial Treasurer, and explained what was desired of the workers in regard to making returns of money collected.

Mr. Neil MacLean spoke briefly regarding publicity of the campaign and stated that it was hoped that on Monday morning there would be a Naval and Military display in the city combined with operations from the air by the Royal Air Force.

Nine o'clock Monday morning is zero hour. Workers be ready to call on the citizens, who, no doubt, realizing the gravity of the war situation, and of the necessity of keeping the morale of our armed forces at the highest possible pitch, will do their best to meet you kindly and make as large a contribution as is possible for so worthy a cause.

was re-taken by British forces.

Operations at Cheren, under a British pounding by land and air for weeks, "continue to develop slowly but satisfactorily," the war bulletin said.

The Italian counter-attack there was the latest of a number attempted in recent days by the 35,000 defenders of that key to Asmara, the colonial capital, and Massaua, its chief seaport.

Completing the picture of the disintegration of Italy's East African empire, the high command added:—

"In Central and southern Ethiopia pressure in all areas is being maintained on the withdrawing Italian forces."

The Royal Air Force and the South African air force teamed up to drop "many tons" of bombs on the Italians' lofty defence positions around Cheren.

British land forces must pass this stronghold —said to be defended by 35,000 Italian and native troops —to reach the Eritrean capital, Asmara, and the Red Sea port of Massaua, all of which are linked by rail.

For two days past, a communique said, bombing planes have been taking dead aim on the Italian troops and positions, giving them little respite as the softening-up process continues. No planes have been lot in the concerted raids.

News Causes Unrest

The news, trickling out into the country via grapevine, increased the growing discontent, particularly among the Serbs who constitute one-third of the population of 15,000,000.

Cabinet members who resigned were Dr. Srdjan Budisavijevic, minister of social welfare, Dr. Branko Cubrilovic, minister of agriculture; and Mihailo Konstantinovic, minister of justice. Their fellow-dissenter was said to be Milan Protisch, minister of supplies.

Cubrilovic, who heads the Serb peasant party, called a meeting of his party chiefs to discuss the situation.

Prince Paul, too, met with leaders of the parties represented by the retiring cabinet members to see if they would agree on more complacent substitutes. What he learned was not disclosed, but it was after this season that Paul accepted the resignations.

Minister to Russia Gaverilovic was said to have sent his resignation to Prince Paul also in protest against the axis plan.

The press disclosed that Prince Paul last night asked the advice of the patriarch of the Serbian church but that the patriarch said his interest was to preserve peace.

Disclosure that four of the country's most prominent generals were pensioned earlier this week merely as "routine" increased the national tension. The general staff was said to have advised an understanding with Germany, but lesser officers and the rank and file among the country's army of 1,000,000 were bitter.

This capital was made nervous when street car, telephone and lighting services were cut off for a short time at midday, but the interruption was described as technical trouble.

"A travesty Of justice" Says Law Journal

The following report and editorial comment on a recent Prince Edward Island law case appears in the current issue of the Fortnightly Law Journal:

Prince Edward Island
Supreme Court.
Arsenault, J.
Re May, December 3rd, 1940.

Criminal Law—Magistrate —Appearance of bias—Certiorari— Appeal available.

The applicant for a writ of certiorari had been convicted of having intoxicating liquor contrary to the P. E. I. Prohibition Act, by a magistrate who before and at the time of the trial, was acting as counsel for the federal Department of Customs and Excise in a prosecution under the Customs and Excise Act. When the applicant's case came on for hearing his counsel asked the prosecution whether it was intended to take proceedings against the applicant for a violation of the Excise Act in respect to the same matter. The Crown replied that it was, and the applicant's counsel thereupon objected to the jurisdiction of the magistrate. The trial was, however, proceeded with, the applicant convicted and the application for a writ of certiorari to quash the conviction was then brought.

In Cottle v. Cottle, (1939) 2 All E.R. 535, it was held that it is not necessary to show that a justice is biased if there is sufficient evidence upon which a litigant may reasonably form the impression that the justice cannot give the case an unbiased hearing. In the case at bar there was sufficient evidence but at the same time if the applicant considered that he did not have an unbiased and impartial hearing, he had a remedy by way of appeal from the magistrate's decision available to him under the provisions of the Prohibition Act. He had not chosen to avail himself of this remedy but proceeded by way of certiorari and consequently must have considered the conviction was justified. In Cottle v. Cottle, the remedy given was a new trial before an impartial tribunal. The applicant could have had this by way of appeal. Arsenault, J., consequently exercised his discretion by refusing the writ of certiorari, without costs.

Counsel for Applicant: J.J. Johnston, K. C., of Charlottetwn.

Counsel for the Crown: C. St. C Trainor, of Charlottetown.

(Editorial Note. Without discussing the merits of this case, it appears to be a travesty of justice that a judge in one case should be counsel in another case arising out of the same facts. The appearance of bias is so obvious that no reasonable man could feel that the accused under the circumstances had had a fair trial. A similar situation arises in local traffic courts where it is found that the constable who laid the charge and is the chief if not the only witness for the prosecution is also the prosecutor and may even share in the fine imposed upon a conviction. This latter vicious practice is gradually being stamped out. But it all shows that there are still many abuses in criminal procedure that require attention if the civil liberties for which the world is now fighting are to be preserved from all dictatorial tendencies.)

Milk Producers, Vendors Assn. Re-elects slate

Officers of the Charlottetown Milk Producers and Vendors' Association were re-elected at the annual meeting of the organization here last night The session was held in the Agricultural Hall. It has been postponed from an earlier date when bad weather made attendance insufficient.

The officers include: President, Ambrose Mallett, Union Road; vice-president, Walter Heartz, East Royalty; secretary, Eugene Cullen, Sherwood. Members of the board of directors: Fred MacRae, Sydney Taylor, Guy Rodd, Wendell Mutch.

Speakers at last night's meeting included the Hon. W. H. Dennis, Minister of Agriculture, and G. Claude Smith, of East Royalty.

Routine business was transacted.

Ethiopian Campaign near Final stage

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Pres Staff Writer

With the British mobile columns closing in from all sides and Haile Selassie's native forces conducting guerilla warfare in the interior, the campaign in Ethiopia appears to be nearing a final stage.

Italian aviation is practically grounded, British forces are getting close to cutting the Addis Ababa-Jibouti railway at Diredawa while the native rebellion, under the little, bearded man who ruled the country until the Italian conquest in 1936, is gaining momentum.

Anticipating the collapse of Italian resistance in Ethiopia and perhaps fearing that vengeful Ethiopian tribesmen might attempt to massacre Italy's 200,000 colonists there, a British spokesman in London has announced the Italians must submit to a "general capitulation" and ask for an armistice before safe conduct will be granted the colonists.

The Ethiopian campaign is only three months old and everything points to a shorter fight than the Italian conquest which took nine months. It has been estimated Mussolini's original Ethiopian garrison numbered 230,000 men, of which 60,000 were Italians and the remainder natives from various Italian colonies.

It is becoming clear that the Duke of Aosta, a cousin of King Victor Emmanuel, who has been the Italian commander-in-chief in Ethiopia, made a tactical error in scattering his forces in small detachments over a wide perimeter, instead of concentrating them in the centre of the country.

Although the Italian garrison has been cut off from outside supplies for months, it has been reported that its only serious shortage has been in aviation gasoline.

At the present time, what is probably the biggest and best equipped Italian force in East Africa is making a stubborn fight at Cheren, the strategic key to Asmara, the capital of Eritrea This force has been estimated variably from 15,000 to 25,000 men but its surrender appears to be imminent because of constant dive-bombing attacks by the Royal Air Force and the capture of outlying positions by British troops.

From the Sudan, columns are heading direct for Addis Ababa and it is understood that they contain a high percentage of native Ethiopian warriors under British officers.

One of the most effective tricks of the guerilla forces is to surround an Italian outpost by pre-arrangement with the R.A.F. Then, when the planes are heard, they light brush fires circling the target —and sit back and watch the bombs fall.

Urges value of Good pasture land

HALIFAX, March 20 —Fertilizing pastures reduces the acreage otherwise required by two thirds, thus releasing that much more land for other crops, declared J. E. McIntyre, of Moncton, N. B., agricultural agent for the Canadian National Railways in an interview yesterday.

"There are no crops in the Maritime Provinces," he said "that can produce protein and dry matter for cattle feed as cheaply as good pasture which furnishes grazing animals with minerals and proteins necessary for healthy development. Improvement not only increases feed volume but extends the grazing season by an average of from five to seven weeks."

Listeners were advised to obtain from the nearest agricultural office the free bulletin of the maritime fertilizer council on fertilizer recommendations.
