Death Saturday At Alma Of Mr. John Barbour

The death occurred Saturday afternoon in Alma, Lot 3, of John Barbour in his 84th year.

The late Mr. Barbour had been in ill health for the past few months and his death was not entirely unexpected. Born in the little rural community of Alma, he had lived there all his life and had always been one of the village's most respected and prosperous farmers.

He is survived by his wife and two sons, Roy is with the R.C.A.F. and Neil farms at Montrose. The late Mr. Barbour is also survived by a sister, Annie, who is 92 and still in good health.

The Hon. George H. Barbour, Minister of Public Works in the Provincial Government, is a nephew. He will be unable to attend the funeral owing to his not receiving the news of his uncle's death until it was too late to go West on Saturday's train.

The funeral will be held this afternoon and interment will be in the United Church cemetery, Montrose.

—STILL MISSING — Mr. James Murphy, 80-year-old resident of Coleman was still unreported over the week-end. The aged man was last seen late in January but it was not until recently that his disappearance was realised by his relatives and friends. He had been visiting in Bloomfield and when he disappeared it was presumed there that he had gone to visit a son, William Murphy at Carleton. The son, meanwhile thought that his father was still in Bloomfield. The man appeared to be in his usual health when last seen walking along the road in Bloomfield late in January. —S.

THE BAPTIST CHURCH

The service of morning worship was conducted by the minister, the Rev. I. Judson Levy B.D. The sermon was "A Man of Sorrows."

One of the most familiar, one of the most loved passages from the Old Testament is the fifty third chapter of Isaiah, wherein we find the word of description "despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." And so, from this passage, Philip, joining the Ethiopian traveller "preached unto him Jesus." Jesus brought joy to the world more than any other, but he was also "A Man of Sorrows." He felt the sorrows of the world more than any other, he sorrowed over broken humanity as no one else has, sorrowful because he moved so continually in a circle of suffering people, blind, lame, lepers, whose griefs he felt completely and who looked to him for relief. As long as there is in the universe one breaking heart, his heart is broken too. Voluntarily, by his own choice he suffers for man and yet there is a compulsion, a compulsion from within, knowing that the fulfilment of his mission meant sorrow and suffering and death "wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities.....with his stripes we are healed."

The anthem of the morning was Farrant's "Lord, For Thy Tender Mercy's sake."

The Church School met with good attendance on the new time table, twelve o'clock immediately following the service of Morning Worship. Superintendent R.J. Rupert was in charge and Mr. J.A. MacNair gave an interesting devotional address on prayer.

Evening worship at 7 P.M. was conducted by Mr. Levy whose sermon was "All Things Are Ready."

Dickenson's arrangement of "Hushed and Still" and Sankey's "The Ninety and Nine" were sung by the choir.

Mrs. G. Elliott Full, organist and director of choir was in charge of the music of the day.

Sacred Concert At Holy Redeemer Hall

Sponsored by the Charlottetown branch of the Knights of Columbus, a Sacred Concert was held last night in the Holy Redeemer Hall. The concert, in aid of the Charlottetown Social Service, was largely attended. The audience showed its appreciation of the fine performance by encoring each participant in the program which was as follows:

Patriotic song, O Canada, — Notre Dame Academy Choir.
Trees — Notre Dame Academy Choir.
Panis Angelicus — Sgt.-Major Frank McIntyre.
Violin Selection, Schubert's Ave Maria—Miss Carrie Kenny.
Solo, Gounod's Ave Maria—Mrs. Yvonne Murray.
"Lovely Lady Dressed in Blue" —Notre Dame Academy Chair.
L'Hirondelle and Evangeline — Misses Rollande Roy, Agathe Langlois, Less Vezina, Lorraine Fortin, Therese Brillant, Charlotte Fournier.
Solo, Holy City—Writer Barry Bugden.
Violin Selection, Traumere — Mr. Alfred McKearney.
Solo, Division, A Passion Hymn—Miss Maureen Brown.
Solo, In a Monastery Garden — Miss Nelida Arsenault.
Quartette, Patriotic — Sound, Bugle Sound, Messrs Connie LeClair, Clark McAulay, James Kelly, Sgt. M. L. Doiron.
Solo, Rosary—Mr. Chester Donovan.
Solo, Smiling Through — Mr. Joseph Corrigan.
Cherubim—Notre Dame Academy Choir.
God Save the King.

Mr. Albert Blanchard was accompanist for the solos and Mother St. Adolph for the choir. The concert will be repeated next Sunday evening at the Holy Name Hall. The Knights are very grateful to the Rev. Fathers of Holy Redeemer for the use of their hall and their caretaker Mr. James Monaghan for his assistance. Mr. Connie LeClair was master of ceremonies. The Grand Knight, Mr. R. A. MacDonald thanked the audience, the different performers, the choir and all that helped to make the concert the success it was.

Knights Celebrate Founder's Month

The Knights of Columbus yesterday in honor of their founder, Rev. Michael J. McGivney, attended holy communion at St. Dunstan's Basilica at the 8 o'clock mass, after which they assembled at the Charlottetown Hotel for breakfast.

Deputy Grand Knight, Mr. D.E. Noonan presided and seated at the head table with him were His Excellency Most Rev. James Boyle, the guest speaker, Rev. G. Dowcet, Rev. J.W. McCardle, Dr. W.J.P. MacMillan, O.B.E., Commander J. J. Connolly, Surgeon Lieutenant L. C. Mahoney and the Grand Knight, Mr. R.A. MacDonald.

Prayer was offered by Bishop Boyle and the large number of members present sat down to a tasty breakfast.

Following the meal the chairman introduced Father Dowcet who gave a very interesting address on the international situation which was thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated. In his closing remarks he told the gathering that the "new world" after the war would see charity predominating over greed, making it a better place to live in.

Mr. W.J. Brawders moved a hearty and unanimous vote of thanks to the speaker which Mr. Charles McQuaid seconded and the Deputy Grand Knight conveyed to the speaker.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close.

and potatoes—the first vegetables they had tasted since their ordeal began.

One woman gave birth to a son in a cave only 10 days before she was rescued. Other women carried with them babies born only a week or two before their homes were set afire.

A young engineer from Oslo and his fiancee said they had been living in caves for the most part and there was little food to be had. There was plenty on the black market, they added, if you had the money to pay for it.

Their rescue — at a date not specified — came shortly after a small Norwegian military mission was landed and informed the patriots to be ready. The destroyers steamed in unexpectedly, took the Germans by surprise and returned the Norwegians to a British port.

"The Norwegian high command desires to emphasize the alacrity and efficiency displayed by the Royal Navy during this operation and to place on record the helpfulness and kindness shown to the evacuees by the officers and men of the ships which carried the Norwegians to the United Kingdom," the Norwegian communique said.

For the Sioux, this was a welcome break in the dangerous monotony of Arctic patrolling and, it was learned, it came unexpectedly.

The Canadian destroyer, which has established the reputation of being one of the fastest of its type afloat, was with a convoy when called to help Royal Navy ships with the tricky operation. After the Norwegian coast was cleared, she transferred the rescued to another ship and rejoined the convoy.

The pallbearers were: John McFadyen, Gordon Taylor, Daniel Taylor, James Taylor, Weldon Taylor and Robert McDonald.

Mr. J. Lester Douglas, M.P., left by the noon plane yesterday for Ottawa.

THE KIRK PULPIT

Preaching last evening from the text, "Did not our heart burn within us, while He talked with us by the way?" (St. Luke 24:32), the Minister, the Rev. T.H. Bussell Somers, said: We see this distinctive feature of the gospel very clearly in its earliest days. What most impresses us in the Acts is not the heroism nor the resource of the first preachers. It is the extraordinary way in which the gospel reached to the very centre of men's lives, and filled them, sometimes in an instant, with a glowing ardour that was rich in promise.

In the dead of winter, when the frost is keen, you know how sometimes our windows get frosted over. The glass is dimmed like the fine gold of which the prophet speaks, and ceases to be transparent through its frosted veil. We can not see the figures in the streets, nor the trees in their beauty of ten thousand diamonds, nor the infinite depths of the cloudless winter sky — they are all hidden from us by that icy covering. Now, it is possible for a child to take his knife, and doggedly and steadily to scrape that frost away; but there is a simpler and surer and quicker way than that. Kindle the fire; set wood and coals a-burning; heighten the temperature of the room within the window, and in an hour the warmth will achieve for you what a whole day's rasping never would accomplish.

It was the dead of winter when the gospel came, and men were trying to scrape away the frost. Every honest effort that was being made to lead mankind to better and nobler things was like the child with his knife upon the pane. Then Christ, through His love and sacrifice, kindled the fire—heightened the temperature of the secret and mystical chamber — and the frost melted with incredible speed, and men recognized their brother in the streets, and nature was clothed in unexpected glory, and in the depths of heaven there was home. All that forces itself on us in the Book of Acts. That book is like the most valiant human lives: there is no glitter in it, but abundant glow. From the day of Pentecost with its tongues of fire, we hear as it were the echo of our text, "Did not our heart burn within us?"

SELECTIVE SERVICE

amount to "misconduct" was subject to review under the terms of the union agreement in the case of any trade union member belonging to a union with an agreement providing a procedure for the review of such cases. Under the amendment every employee, whether or not a trade union member, will be entitled to have his case reviewed under the terms of any such agreement in force on the job.

Any person in employment contrary to the provisions of Selective Service will be regarded as "unemployed" for the purpose of the regulations and subject to direction to essential work.

Lesser penalties of fine or imprisonment will be added as options to cover a case of refusal to accept a work direction issued by a Selective Service officer. The penalty of direction to an alternative service work camp remains in force.

In connection with labor transfers, the Labor Minister will be given authority to authorize the payment of workers' transportation and the removal expenses of workers' families in such areas and during such periods as he may approve.

Another amendment provides for summary means of requiring payment through court action from employers who have failed to pay sums they contracted to pay regarding employment of conscientious objectors.

Changes also will be made in the appeal procedure under the regulations. At present appeals are made to the courts of referees, set up under the Unemployment Insurance Act. These courts will continue to deal with appeals, but doubts now have been removed as to whether the courts may hear cetrain types of cases.

"Broadly speaking any person feeling aggrieved may now lodge an appeal with his court of referees, and while formerly no second appeal was provided for, the arrangement now will be that a rehearing of a case may be allowed, where, for example, additional facts are disclosed shortly after the court reaches its first decision," the minister said.

Commenting on the regulations, Mr. Mitchell said certain operating difficulties have arisen since the last consolidation of the regulations in January, 1943.

"Moreover, employment conditions have changed, and are changing, and situations will develop when the war in Europe terminates which must be accommodated under Selective Service. It is felt that the present changes bring the regulations up to date, and provide a more effective instrument for meeting conditions immediately following the termination of European hostilities."

Local Man Aids In Keeping Tanks In Action In Italy

WITH THE CANADIAN ARMY IN ITALY — (Delayed — Keeping the highest possible number of tanks in action at all times is the job of First Canadian Armoured Brigade workshops. This involves repair work on radios, guns, wheeled vehicles and equipment for well over a thousand vehicles. How successful the workshops are at doing their job is illustrated, says Major W. G. Cooke of Dingwall, N.S., who is officer commanding the workshops, by the Gari river show. There tank casualties were repaired so quickly that they were back in action when replacement tanks arrived a matter of hours later. Standing joke of the workshops for some time after was that the tank regiments came out of that show with more tanks than they went in with.

On a cold snowy afternoon in late January work around the armament section was going something like this. Craftsman Charles C. Murphy of Windsor, Ont., and Craftsman Eldon Gullinger of Mille Roches, Ont. were welding. Across the farm yard in a machine lorry Craftsman Ken Kenworthy of Pointe Claire, Que. was turning a plug gauge device for measuring the wear on gun bores. In a wagon shed belonging to the farm, Craftsman George Ricketts of Owen Sound, Ont. and Craftsman Dick Hogan of Charlottetown, P. E.I. were making a large tent for winter conditions. Craftsman Ricketts does a roaring business making leather watch straps in his spare time.

This busy scene is the normal day of some of the men from just two of the seven sections of the First Armoured Brigade Workshop. Replacing tank parts and vehicles when squadrons are scattered over wide areas of mountains may take days. By keeping the repair work constantly up to the minute First Canadian Armoured Brigade assures that at least no tank will be put out of action through mechanical failure.
