

Woman's Realm Social and Personal Fashions Literature

Living & Leisure The Woman's Realm

GOOD MANNERS No broadsword courtesy of the courtier style...

Politeness is the filly spoken word. The accent turn of conversation's sway...

In Persia, most breadmakers stick the dough on the walls of the oven and peel it off in huge pancake sheets when baked...

French dressing poured over hot cooked broccoli, Brussels sprouts or spinach is a new way of seasoning that will make you write your family or friends...

Rubber-headed tacks nailed into the top of your clothes pole will keep clothes hangers apart...

"PANCAKE GREAZE" The succulent pancake will be tossed with time-honored ceremonial in many homes today...

Practical Rubber-headed tacks nailed into the top of your clothes pole will keep clothes hangers apart...

PERFUMES WHIFFS NOT NICE MIXED You didn't catch grandma dousing on perfume just as she left the house...

And grandma had the right idea. She used her similarly-scented toilet preparation...

It's even easier to achieve perfume harmony nowadays. However, do resolve that when your present bottle of toilet water gives out...

Send twenty cents (20) coin preferred for pattern. Enclose plain your Name Address and style number. Be sure to state size you wish.

MOTHERS For Quicker Relief of KIDDIES' CHEST COLDS Use BUCKLEY'S Stainless WHITERUB 100% satisfaction, or your money back. TWO SIZES—30c and 50c. still penitential season of Lent, Shrove tide customs are numerous throughout the world. Shrove Tuesday is Mardi Gras, or Fat Tuesday to the French...

Ancient customs die hard and the famous "Pancake Grease" at Westminster School is a red letter day for the 19 pupils selected to participate in the annual battle staged in the Great Schoolroom...

Quadequina, brother of the famous Massachusetts introduced pop corn to the English colonists on their first Thanksgiving Day, in 1630.

Lobsters have 20 pairs of limbs; some of which are used in chewing up food.

Also, I should say that when a man lets the girl do all the love-making and is cautious about committing himself, he isn't hard hit, Cupid says.

Other tests of love that, while not conclusive, are important in showing how your temperature is running are these: Has something happened to your eyesight that makes you see a homely girl as more beautiful than a cinema star?

How much of a girl's society can you stand when she doesn't talk about you? Can you listen to a little canary bird twitter for hours at a stretch and still ask for more? What are your feelings towards the girl's family—rude or do you regard them as delightful people? And, above all, ask yourself, honestly and truly, would you rather have Mary Jane or a new streamlined car?

But in the end, no matter how careful you are, you will have to take a chance on your own heart. You never know how the old pump is going to work.

TEAMWORK IS CHILD REARING DEAR DOROTHY DIX—We have a sweet little girl almost two years old. Here is my problem: Her father spoils her to death and doesn't cooperate with me at all in correcting her and supervising her diet.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

PRINCESS SOUP 1 quart stock, cleared 1-2 cup green peas 3-4 cup cooked chicken, diced. Heat stock and peas and chicken. Reheat and serve with a topping of finely chopped parsley or chives. Serves 6.

MACARONI SOUP 1 quart stock 1-2 cup cooked macaroni or noodles. Add macaroni to stock. Heat and serve. Garnish with chopped parsley and crisp toast sticks. Serves 6.

BARLEY SOUP 1 quart stock 1-3 cup pearl barley. Add barley to stock; cook until barley is tender. Garnish with toast croutons. Serves 6.

BROWN SOUP STOCK 6 lb. shin of beef 4 qts. cold water 1-2 cup sliced onion 1-2 cup sliced carrots 1-2 cup diced turnips 1-2 cup diced celery and leaves 2-3 sprigs parsley 2 small bayleaves 8 cloves Spring or pinch marjoram 1-4 teaspoon pepper 3 teaspoons salt. Cut meat in small pieces; crack bone. Put half of meat in soup kettle, add water, let stand 30-40 minutes. Scrape marrow from bones, melt and when hot add remaining meat and brown on all sides. Add to meat and water in kettle; bring slowly to boiling point. Simmer 3-4 hours. Add vegetables and seasonings, continue simmering 2 hours. Strain and cool. Makes 3 quarts stock.

WHITE SOUP STOCK Substitute 4-5 lb. veal knuckle for the beef in Brown Soup Stock. Do not brown the veal. Add water, vegetables, seasonings and proceed according to the above recipe. (The turnip may be omitted if desired).

CHICKEN STOCK Substitute a 4-5 lb. fowl (cut in pieces) for beef or veal. Omit turnip and cloves. To cook: remove hardened fat from surface. Pour the quantity desired into a saucepan. For each quart, mix in 1 egg white (slightly beaten) and 1 egg-shell (crushed). Heat slowly to boiling; boil 2-3 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand 20 minutes without stirring. Strain through double cheese cloth or a very fine sieve. With any one of these stocks (cleared or not cleared) as a base, many varieties of soups...

Send 20c in coins for your copy of "Good Letter-Writing Made Easy" to The Guardian Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of the booklet.

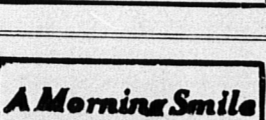

Send 20c in coins for your copy of "Good Letter-Writing Made Easy" to The Guardian Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of the booklet.

Send 20c in coins for your copy of "Good Letter-Writing Made Easy" to The Guardian Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of the booklet.

COLDS

Your child's own reserves of energy are even more important than warm clothes in fighting winter ills. Help build up resistance with Father John's Medicine. This time-tried body-builder—proven by over 85 years of use—is rich in the essential vitamins A and D...

MALE STYLE Dave having had a good week, decided to buy his wife a present. He picked up the dining-room table, carried it out of the house, put it on top of his head, and was ambled down the road when Bill Smith met him.

Other tests of love that, while not conclusive, are important in showing how your temperature is running are these: Has something happened to your eyesight that makes you see a homely girl as more beautiful than a cinema star?

How much of a girl's society can you stand when she doesn't talk about you? Can you listen to a little canary bird twitter for hours at a stretch and still ask for more? What are your feelings towards the girl's family—rude or do you regard them as delightful people? And, above all, ask yourself, honestly and truly, would you rather have Mary Jane or a new streamlined car?

But in the end, no matter how careful you are, you will have to take a chance on your own heart. You never know how the old pump is going to work.

TEAMWORK IS CHILD REARING DEAR DOROTHY DIX—We have a sweet little girl almost two years old. Here is my problem: Her father spoils her to death and doesn't cooperate with me at all in correcting her and supervising her diet.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Dorothy Dix Says—

THERE IS NO SCIENTIFIC GADGET BY WHICH LOVE CAN BE DEFINED

When You Go Ga-Ga And Refuse To See Real Things, The Cupid's Got You

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—Can you tell me a surefire method by which I can determine whether or not I am in love with a girl? I have been going with one for more than a year now and still am unable to answer this question concerning my own feelings. I like to dance with her. I like her smile and her understanding nature, and whenever I leave her some magnetic attraction always draws me back. She takes the lead in sentimental conversation, while I sit back and listen. I haven't the heart to say sweet little nothings to her until I am sure that I mean 'em. By the way, is Cupid a girl or a boy?

MEMBER OF THE STRONGER SET ANSWER—Cupid is always represented by artists as being a boy and poets, who seem more familiar with him than other people call him Dan, but personally, I have always believed that he was of the feminine persuasion, for no one can deny that women are more concerned with the subject of love than are men. It wouldn't be done. Alas, I fear that I can throw but little light on your problem of determining the state of your affections...

Also, I should say that when a man lets the girl do all the love-making and is cautious about committing himself, he isn't hard hit, Cupid says. He found again that he was liable to mistakes where women were concerned. Anna Gregorescu was crossing the lounge in their direction with quick little steps, having already seen and recognized him.

Other tests of love that, while not conclusive, are important in showing how your temperature is running are these: Has something happened to your eyesight that makes you see a homely girl as more beautiful than a cinema star?

How much of a girl's society can you stand when she doesn't talk about you? Can you listen to a little canary bird twitter for hours at a stretch and still ask for more? What are your feelings towards the girl's family—rude or do you regard them as delightful people? And, above all, ask yourself, honestly and truly, would you rather have Mary Jane or a new streamlined car?

But in the end, no matter how careful you are, you will have to take a chance on your own heart. You never know how the old pump is going to work.

TEAMWORK IS CHILD REARING DEAR DOROTHY DIX—We have a sweet little girl almost two years old. Here is my problem: Her father spoils her to death and doesn't cooperate with me at all in correcting her and supervising her diet.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Certainly if your husband is a man of any intelligence whatever, he knows that rearing children properly requires team-work between parents, and that when either one sets the other's authority at naught it nullifies all authority and gives the youngsters a chance to do what they please.

AN ANSWER—When a father is a child-spoiler, he can simply leave the most baby-worshipping mother at the post, for two reasons. One is because he has more money to spend on the children than the mother has and all children are gold-diggers, and secondly because he doesn't have to take the consequences of his spoiling. He isn't at home much of the time, so he feels free to have fun breaking all the rules his wife has laid down for the nursery, and teaching the children manners and habits that they will have to spank out of them later on.

Happy Landing

BY BASIL HAYE

ANNA TALKS OF MARRIAGE

She shivered involuntarily, was silent for a moment, then asked suddenly: "Ann, what is to happen to that pretty daughter of his? I suppose she was terribly distressed?" "Oh, but I don't," she insisted. "I feel that I ought to worry. It's almost as if I had some responsibility towards her. Knowing her father as I do..."

"Listen!" he intervened sharply. "I've told you, haven't I, that you must not breathe that fact to a soul here? Well, little Anna has no idea of it, and there's no need for her to know. There's no need either for you to imagine any responsibility towards Anna. Her future will be quite safe."

"That doesn't mean I need not be interested in her, if I feel like it," Delma insisted. "She's a friend of yours, just as I am. Without her ever knowing I had any interest in her father, I mean I'd like to meet her, perhaps help her get over the shock, especially as you say she's practically alone in the world. Just now, in particular, she must want a woman's sympathy."

"She has that now," he told her, a little impatient over her insistence. "As a matter of fact, she has a woman-friend out at Hampstead, went to stay with her last night. It was there that she was unable to mistake where women were concerned. Anna Gregorescu was crossing the lounge in their direction with quick little steps, having already seen and recognized him."

"How nice of you, Michael, to be here!" she greeted him with a smile. "You should find you. It was good to be with you and my husband last night. But now I am a little better from the shock—I feel I can give you. The police told me that I should be here this morning, in case I was needed."

"Why, here is the lady with whom you were yesterday at the Toreador restaurant? Does it mean, Michael, that I interrupt at the wrong moment?"

"Not at all, Anna!" he laughed, and with a little awkwardness, introduced the two to each other. "You see, Miss Gregorescu, I am a tenant of Mr. Bond," Delma explained. "I rent his family place down at Sunningholme, you know; so we are friends."

"That is nice!" Anna smiled in her charming way, half-shy, half-bold. "So you and I must be friends, too. Because—perhaps Michael has already told you? He and I are to be married after all this terrible business about my poor father is over."

"A MAN HAS CONFESSED" Delma, in the smoothest of voices, uttered a polite exclamation of surprise. "No, he never told me you were to be married," she was saying. "I hope you'll both be very happy."

"I'm troubled at you for a moment, Mr. Bond?" a voice behind him interrupted. "No trouble at all, inspector?" Bond responded quickly. "Obviously House had not been wasting a single moment since last night's happenings. Bond hoped therefore to learn something."

"Of one thing I'm certain, inspector," he laughed. "You don't want to tell me that you're arresting me for murder."

"If you're meaning last night's affair, Mr. Bond, the murderer's already under arrest."

"What?" Bond stared at the Inspector in surprise. "Who is he?" "A Rumanian. He gave himself up in the early hours of the morning. It is as the newspapers say, Mr. Bond, a case of political animosity, that's all."

Bond could read nothing in the direct and steady gaze of the detective's eyes in support of what he himself felt sure was sheer bluff. That someone had been arrested, he did not doubt. Nor that it was a case of political animosity. But Bond, with some knowledge of wheels within wheels, had very grave doubts that the police solution really could be as easy as this. "You don't believe me, Mr. Bond?"

What Boners Did He Write? What a slap in the face! In response to his letter he gets this cold, curt note. WHY? Maybe HIS letter was disappointing. Maybe she tore it open very eagerly, only to find it a string of empty, ungrammatical sentences: "I sure am busy. Haven't been to a movie yet."

So many people are careless about letter-writing, thinking it's a special art, hard to learn. It's simple to check on errors—to write correctly "surely am," to put the subject "I" before "haven't been."

You can easily make your letters interesting by just telling little things. About your movie, say "Hope got laughs, all right!" You are busy? Write: "Papers are on my desk in two-foot stacks!"

If you are careless about business letters of course you'll never get the job. Do you write: "I saw your ad in today's newspaper and I have had four years experience and I could take the job right now!" Learn to be clear, correct.

Our 32-page booklet points out common grammar mistakes, helps enrich your vocabulary, suggests topics to write to friends, rules of good business letters. Gives 34 model social, business and friendly letters.

Send 20c in coins for your copy of "Good Letter-Writing Made Easy" to The Guardian Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of the booklet.

Send 20c in coins for your copy of "Good Letter-Writing Made Easy" to The Guardian Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of the booklet.

Send 20c in coins for your copy of "Good Letter-Writing Made Easy" to The Guardian Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of the booklet.

Send 20c in coins for your copy of "Good Letter-Writing Made Easy" to The Guardian Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of the booklet.

When My Nose Is Sore I'm Sore All Over!

... SO IT'S KLEENEX FOR MINE WHEN I CATCH COLD... THE TISSUES ARE FULL SIZE, SOFT AND STRONG. AS FAR AS I'M CONCERNED, CHEAP TISSUES ARE NO BARGAIN! THEN TOO, THE KLEENEX POP-UP BOX ENDS WASTE, SAVES MONEY!

(From a letter by C.E.)

"TELL ME ANOTHER AND WIN $5.00—SAYS KLEENEX" WE PAY $500 FOR EVERY TISSUE... ISSUES MAIL YOURS TO KLEENEX, DEPT. 204, 330 UNIVERSITY AVE., TORONTO, ONT.

SAVE YOUR SOCKS, GIRLS STORMY WEATHER NEVER DAMPENS MY FEET OR MY SPIRITS EITHER! TUCK A PAD OF "MAN'S SIZE" KLEENEX IN THE SOLES OF MY SHOES. KLEENEX KEEPS MY STOCKINGS DRY.

(From a letter by Z.M.C.)

COOKIES TO THE ROOKIES WHEN SENDING THE BOYS HOME-MADE COOKIES, FILL CREVICES OF THE BOX WITH KLEENEX PREVENTS JIGGLING AND BREAKING.

(From a letter by M.R.E.)

replied. "I would like it very much. As it happens the friends with whom I stay last night, they have to go to the Continent of important business to-morrow. That is why, Michael, I so wished to see you now. I don't feel I can possibly stay any longer in this hotel. I was going to ask if you could perhaps arrange some place for me near where you are."

"Nothing earlier, Anna," Michael assured her. "There happens to be a very nice little hotel just round the corner from my place—would you like to go there?"

"But why go to an hotel when I'll be only too glad to have her stay as long as ever she likes with me at Sunningholme?" Delma interrupted impatiently. "After all, if you are being married, Sunningholme will be her home, so isn't it much better that she should live there now and get to feel she belonged to it?"

"That would be perfectly lovely. And Michael when he was asked might come down there too?"

"I'm troubled at you for a moment, Mr. Bond?" a voice behind him interrupted. "No trouble at all, inspector?" Bond responded quickly. "Obviously House had not been wasting a single moment since last night's happenings. Bond hoped therefore to learn something."

"Of one thing I'm certain, inspector," he laughed. "You don't want to tell me that you're arresting me for murder."

"If you're meaning last night's affair, Mr. Bond, the murderer's already under arrest."

"What?" Bond stared at the Inspector in surprise. "Who is he?" "A Rumanian. He gave himself up in the early hours of the morning. It is as the newspapers say, Mr. Bond, a case of political animosity, that's all."

Bond could read nothing in the direct and steady gaze of the detective's eyes in support of what he himself felt sure was sheer bluff. That someone had been arrested, he did not doubt. Nor that it was a case of political animosity. But Bond, with some knowledge of wheels within wheels, had very grave doubts that the police solution really could be as easy as this. "You don't believe me, Mr. Bond?"

What Boners Did He Write? What a slap in the face! In response to his letter he gets this cold, curt note. WHY? Maybe HIS letter was disappointing. Maybe she tore it open very eagerly, only to find it a string of empty, ungrammatical sentences: "I sure am busy. Haven't been to a movie yet."

So many people are careless about letter-writing, thinking it's a special art, hard to learn. It's simple to check on errors—to write correctly "surely am," to put the subject "I" before "haven't been."

You can easily make your letters interesting by just telling little things. About your movie, say "Hope got laughs, all right!" You are busy? Write: "Papers are on my desk in two-foot stacks!"

If you are careless about business letters of course you'll never get the job. Do you write: "I saw your ad in today's newspaper and I have had four years experience and I could take the job right now!" Learn to be clear, correct.

Our 32-page booklet points out common grammar mistakes, helps enrich your vocabulary, suggests topics to write to friends, rules of good business letters. Gives 34 model social, business and friendly letters.

Send 20c in coins for your copy of "Good Letter-Writing Made Easy" to The Guardian Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of the booklet.

Send 20c in coins for your copy of "Good Letter-Writing Made Easy" to The Guardian Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of the booklet.

Send 20c in coins for your copy of "Good Letter-Writing Made Easy" to The Guardian Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of the booklet.

Needlecrafts For The Home

You want your dress to be as simple as possible, of course, not only because simplicity and chic are synonymous, but also because you can have fun with accessories and not look over-laden, if your dress is plain. This smart figure-flattering, long torso dress fits the bill to perfection. It can be worn with or without a belt and you have your choice of three sleeve lengths.

Style No. 3396 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 18 requires 2 7/8 yards of 39-inch fabric. Hat No. 3397, one size, adaptable to any headsize, is a separate pattern.

PERFUMES WHIFFS NOT NICE MIXED You didn't catch grandma dousing on perfume just as she left the house. Neither did she, worse yet, forget all about perfume.

And grandma had the right idea. She used her similarly-scented toilet preparation to get the metal connection part wet. She poured water for her hands, plain rose water patted on her temples—day in and day out.