Dairy Industry Under Discussion

Dr. A. C. Ruddick, Dairy Commissioner, Appears Before Select Committee on Agriculture and Colonization.

The freight rate on butter from Montreal to London is $1.74 a hundredweight. The rate on cheese is $1.81. The rate from Auckland to Vancouver is two cents per pound gross, which includes the weight of package and everything, for cheese; for butter the rate is 4s 6d for 56 pound boxes. It costs six cents more to take it to Vancouver than to London. The rate from Australia to Vancouver is 5 shillings for a 53 pound box. It was hard to say when the export of butter began. There was considerable exported at Confederation, that is, butter stored up in summer and shipped without refrigeration, in the winter months. Witness would not say very much about quality. It often took first prize overseas, but it was competing with the same kind of butter from other countries.

When creamery butter came in in the '80's the export of dairy butter gradually fell off until it ceased altogether. The trouble then was lack of refrigeration, and when it was available on boats sailing down the St. Lawrence exports increased quite rapidly, up until 1903, when 53,000,000 lbs., were exported, but home production increased rapidly and exports fell off, although production continued to increase. Then the war came on. Consumption did not increase but production did and there was considerable surplus to export. Now we are back again where we were before the war. Production is increasing right along, but nothing to export.

In the case of cheese, experts have been more regular. We have been exporting ever since Confederation. Exports increased gradually until 1904 since when they have fallen off, owing to decrease in production, we are still exporting to a great many countries, 25 in all. These include the Orient, and the West Indies in both of which the trade is growing. In respect of the latter, facilities for shipment are excellent from Halifax and St. John and even Montreal. Preferential treatment has helped. At one time it was impossible to ship butter to either, but with refrigeration the ships can take butter in ordinary solids or even in prints. Dr. Ruddick observed that there have been some odd things about the imports of butter and cheese. There are certain types of cheese, which a few people like—Camembert, Roquefort, and Gorgonzola, butter demand is not large enough for Canadian factories to undertake manufacture. We import butter from Syria—a butter made from Mellefat—and from the Fijian Islands. We import milk and cream from Alaska. Dr. Ruddick thinks for consumption in the Yukon. We have imported butter and cheese for 40 years in small quantities, until during the years 1912-14. In recent years, since the war, we are importing more than ever. The time will come, it was thought, when Canada would again export but the increase of home consumption makes it hard to predict.

"The dairy produce trade," Dr. Ruddick went on to say, "is an international one. Butter and cheese are shipped from all over the world everywhere, and it is complicated by the fact that the southern hemisphere is the greatest producer of butter and cheese, because they have a small population to consume it at home. We produce far more milk in this country than New Zealand does. Yet New Zealand today is the largest exporter of dairy products in the world. They export 80 per cent of their total produce while we export 13 per cent."
This important statement is so to speak, underlined: "It is just as well to remember this fact, however that if we do, we will have to take relatively less than we have been getting for our butter in times past, because then we will have to take the
