THE STORY OF THE ATOM —By NEA—

(1) U-235, the form of uranium which can blow itself up, soon became the most important and one of the rarest substances known. Scientists knew if they only could isolate enough to cover the head of a pin they could make a real demonstration of the enormous energy inside the atom. Dr. Alfred O. Nier at the University of Minnesota was credited with isolating the first tangible quantity.

(2) General Electric's research laboratory at Schenectady, N. Y., started work on the problem. There, scientists were able to isolate U-235 from common uranium at a rate of 1,036 millionths of a gram every 10 days. At this rate it would have taken nearly 12,000,000 years to extract a pound. At Stockholm, in 1940, Prof. Wilhelm Krasney-Ergen developed a process that could produce it 12,000 times faster—or one pound per thousand years.

(3) Atomic fission was a comparatively simple operation if the materials could be made available. It could be accomplished by mixing powdered beryllium, a fairly common metal, with a tiny amount of radium. This mixture could then be placed in a container in which a layer of paraffin covered a sample of U-235. Neutrons from the beryllium-radium mixture would be slowed as they passed through the paraffin and struck the uranium. American scientists heard that the Germans had developed quantities of U-235 to use in this process. This caused considerable worry.

(4) Suppose the Germans had isolated U-235 in quantities? Then they would have the ingredients for an atomic bomb in their grasp. Before U-235 was known, attempts at atom smashing had not been profitable. It required a tremendous power with a negligible output. But smashing of U-235 was another story. The calculated output was tremendous as compared with the input. But in 1938 the war brought a world-wide blackout in atomic experimentation. A curtain of silence was pulled over it.
