JONES - MACMILLAN

The marriage took place on Thursday evening, Nov. 4th, at the home of the bride's parents, Upper Prince Street, Charlottetown, of Miss Amelia, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Jones, to Walter Allison Macmillan, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Macmillan, Brackley. Rev. T. E. McLenan was the officiating clergyman.

A beautiful arch of greenery and cut flowers made an attractive setting for the bride and groom who were unattended. To the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March played by Mrs. Nathaniel MacKinnon the bride entered the living room on the arm of her father by whom she was given in marriage. She made a charming picture in floor-length gown of white sheer with bridal veil of embroidered net. The bride's bouquet was the gift of the groom, and carried an arm bouquet of sweethearts roses.

During the signing of the register Mrs. MacKinnon sang very effectively "Perfect Love". After good wishes and congratulations had been extended, a dainty luncheon was served to about seventy guests. The bride's table, attractive with pink and white streamers and cut flowers, was entered by a three-tiered wedding cake. Mrs. Edwin Stewart capably presided over the tea cups while Mrs. Sidney Gordon presided over the coffee. The bride's chief friends of the bride assisted in serving.

At a late hour the happy couple left amid showers of confetti for their honeymoon trip to points on the mainland followed by the good wishes of their many friends. On their return they will take up residence at Brackley where the groom is engaged in farming.

Prior to her marriage Miss Jones was tendered several miscellaneous showers by her friends.

On Wednesday evening, October 20th, Mrs. Rex Kieley entertained at her lovely apartment, King Square, when the bride-to-be was showered with many beautiful and useful gifts. After Ellen had expressed her thanks for the lovely gifts and good wishes, all took part in an interesting contest. A dainty luncheon was then served by the hostesses and a very pleasant evening enjoyed.

On the following Wednesday evening at their home on Hillboro Street, Misses Emma and Gertrude Holmes were hostesses at a miscellaneous shower for Miss Jones. As the gifts were opened by the bride-to-be, the congratulatory verses were read by Mrs. Wendell Barbour.

In a few words Ellen assured her friends of her appreciation of their kindness. After a delicious luncheon had been enjoyed, the reading of the tea-cup provided much amusement for all.

BREAST BLISTERS

(Experimental Farm News) During the past 10 years or so a distinctive bluish of the skin covering the feet of male birds of the general purpose breeds of poultry has been frequently found. These blisters may appear as no more than a roughened thickening of the skin or they may vary in size all the way to well defined blisters as large as walnuts and occasionally be filled with fluid.

Medium to large blisters so disfigure dressed table birds that although quite harmless detract from the market value of the birds. Moreover it will frequently be found that one third to half of the birds in a flock are affected and the loss of revenue to the poultryman from this cause may be quite serious.

Due to the serious financial loss the possibilities for preventing the occurrence of breast blisters has been studied at the Experimental Farm, but so far the real cause has not as yet been found.

In order to develop a blister free strain over the keel should be rubbed during roosting but if the bird is not already possessed of the fundamental ability to form a blister no amount of rubbing or other abuse seems able to cause its appearance. Nor has it been possible to show that blisters are due to disease and nutrition has so far not been found to have either stimulating or deterrent effect. On the other hand it has definitely been found that the ability to form blisters is inherited and resistant lines may therefore be, and have in fact been established, experimentally. For those that pedigree hatch their chicks the recognition of resistant strains does not present any difficulty. The unfortunate part is that only a very small per cent of the breeding males in average flocks are truly resistant and the propagation of such lines will therefore be in the hands of most poultrymen lead to inbreeding with consequent loss of vigor. In addition there is some evidence to show that resistant lines normally have a tendency to mature more slowly than blistered stock. Consequently females of such families may start production rather late in life and the cockerels will be slow in reaching their mature weight. If this proves to be true then the outlook for speedy eradication of breast blisters while at the same time retaining high production and fast growth is not very bright. It may be that blisters are part of the price we pay for our modern high production chickens. In the meantime since the commonly recommended preventive measures have proven useless poultrymen cannot be advised to undertake them at the present time. In case freedom from blisters is desired at once there is at present no known way other than to substitute light weight breeds for the present purpose breeds.
