76-Year-Old Bridegroom Is Reticent

HALIFAX, March 8—(CP)—A 76-year-old bridegroom of two months wistfully wondered today why people can't mind their own business, especially when it comes to other people's honeymoons. John Russell and his wife Marion, 61, arrived here on the Empress of Canada from Liverpool. Childhood sweethearts in their Lanarkshire, Scotland, home, John and Marion were separated when he sailed for the United States 48 years ago. In 1947 he went home for a brief visit. He met Marion on that vacation and on this one, married her, in January.

They will live on Russell's Lacombe, Alta., wheat farm. Mrs. Russell is making her first trip to Canada. She thinks her marriage "is pretty wonderful."

"Would you like to see my husband?" she asked and bounded through the door in search of him. Mr. Russell didn't regard questioners with much favor. He realized they weren't trying to be nosy, but there was nothing unusual about people getting married.

Both were surprised and a little disappointed to discover they had been expected. "Everyone was asking questions over there," said Mr. Russell. "I was hoping it wouldn't start all over again."

Someone asked a how-did-it-all-happen question. Mr. Russell said: "Came to the United States 48 years ago... up to Canada in 1907... back home once... back again, and got married, that's all."

The Russells left for their western home tonight. They said they intend to keep a sharp eye out for more questioners. Mr. Russell drew the line at pictures and two photographers politely were given the gate.

Mr. Russell answered one question and was asked a second. "See?" said her husband helplessly. "I told you not to start answering questions. Just get more."

Also among the 613 passengers was Norman Robertson, Canada's retiring high commissioner in London. He smilingly fended off reporters.

All he wanted was a morning paper. Someone came up with one and Mr. Robertson withdrew.

"IF WINTER COMES" TELLS MOVING STORY OF COUPLE MADE VICTIM OF GOSSIP —With Walter Pidgeon, Deborah Kerr and Angela Lansbury in its pivotal roles, M-G-M has turned out an impressive and gripping filmization of A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel of bigotry and injustice, "If Winter Comes," current attraction at the Capitol Theatre.

Laid in a small English village at the outbreak of World War II, the story tells of the liberal-minded textbook writer Mark Sabre and the lovely Nona Tybar, each of whom has made an unhappy marriage — Mark to the narrowminded and unimaginative Mabel; Nona to the gambling playboy, Tony.

Nona is resolved to leave her husband but honor and compassion prevent her from doing so when the war sends Tony away with his regiment. Mark, in the meantime, has become the target of a scurrilous attack due to his having befriended Effie Bright, daughter of a fellow employee who has been thrown out of her home because
