SHORTHAND ERRORS

(The Strand.)
A volume could be filled with amusing stories of shorthand mistakes, the greater number of them due to mistaken vowels. For instance, "This day is big with fat" was transcribed "This day is big with fat," while "A house of many gables" was transformed into "A house of many gables." The use of a wrong vowel may have the most amusing result, as in the phrase, "Man, know thyself," which was once converted, in the report of a sermon, into "Man gnaw thyself." To misplace a vowel is, in shorthand, the easiest thing in the world. T. A. Reed, a well-known reporter, tells of a pupil who by this means turned "mighty acts" into "mighty cats," and another report of a sermon was spoiled by the advice, "Return a blow with an axe" instead of "a kiss."
The "reporting style," in which the vowels are omitted altogether for the sake of rapidity, is responsible for the famous American story of the shorthand man who took down a note of his wife's instruction to "Be sure and remember to bring home some Castile soap," and, as a result, returned home with a tin of ox-tail soup!
Newspaper readers are sometimes astonished by mistakes on the part of reporters. Consider, for instance, the surprise of the reader of a certain staid daily some years ago when they learned that a public man had the night before solemnly announced that "All reforms in this country have been brought about by Prussia!" The word the great man had really used was "pressure," not "Prussia." So, too, considerable astonishment was caused when "curates," instead of "pew rates," were reported to be "the greatest enemies of the church."
A somewhat similar type of error was perpetrated by the reporter who made Lord Carnarvon say that "In these days clergymen are expected to have the wisdom and learning of a journeyman tailor." What he had said was, of course, "a Jeremy Taylor." Another reporter referred to John Bright as "the gamecock" instead of "the Gamaliel of Birmingham," and yet another transcribed his notes of Mr. Chamberlain's remark, "They bring up their puny popguns and spatter me with abuse" as "They bring out their puny popguns and spatter me with peas."
The people of Edinburgh were once highly indignant that Professor Blackie should have referred to the "grey" atmosphere of their town, when he had really been commending its "breezy atmosphere."

NAPOLÉON THE INDOMITABLE

If Napoleon's fortune was great, his genius was transcendent; decision flashed upon his counsels, and it was the same to decide and to perform, wrote Charles Phillips. To inferior intellects his combinations appeared perfectly impossible, his plans perfectly impracticable; but, in his hands, simplicity marked their development, and success vindicated their adoption.
His person partook the character of his mind—if the one never yielded in the cabinet, the other never bent in the field.
Nature had no obstacles that he did not surmount—space no opposition that he did not surmount; and whether amid Alpine rocks, Arabian sands, or polar snows, he seemed proof against peril, and empowered with ubiquity! The whole continent of Europe trembled at beholding the audacity of his designs and the miracle of their execution. Skepticism bowed to the prodigies of his performance; romance assumed the air of history; nor was there aught too incredible for belief, or too fanciful for expectation, when the world saw a subaltern of Corsica waving his imperial flag over her most ancient capitals. All the visions of antiquity became commonplaces in his contemplation; kings were his people—nations were his outposts; and he disposed of courts and crowns, and camps, and churches, and cabinets, as if they were titular dignitaries of the chessboard.
Through all this pantomime of his policy fortune played the clown to his caprices. At his touch crowns tumbled, beggars reigned, systems vanished, the wildest theories took the color of his whim, and all that was venerable and ancient was novel, changed places with the rapidity of a drama. Even apparent defeat assumed the appearance of victory—his flight from Egypt confirmed his destiny—ruin itself only elevated him to empire.
Amid all these changes he stood as immutable as adamant. It mattered little whether in the field or the drawing room—with the mob or the levee—wearing the Jacobite bonnet or the iron crown—banishing a Braganza, or espousing a Hapsburg—dictating peace on a raft to the Czar of Russia, or contemplating defeat at the gallows of Leipzig—he was the same military despot.

RAN AWAY FROM FOSTER FATHER.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—John Chisholm, 12 years old, is at the immigration station recovering from severe hardships which he chose to suffer as a stowaway aboard the steamer Governor Cobb from St. John, rather than risk discovery. Chisholm says he ran away from his foster father, George H. Offen, of Fredericton, N. B., made his way to St. John, where he unobserved slipped aboard the Governor Cobb, and hiding in a lifeboat, made three trips between that city and Boston until hunger and frozen limbs drove him out. The little fellow's condition has aroused the sympathies of the officials at the immigration station and they have raised a generous sum for his benefit when he recovers from his present condition. A week ago Tuesday the boy said he succeeded in getting aboard the Governor Cobb at St. John. He removed the cover from one of the lifeboats and secreted himself. On the voyage he managed to break open a package of biscuits and a tank of water he found in the boat. Early in the voyage the boy became seasick. Later he suffered greatly from the cold, his feet began to swell and he was forced to remove his shoes when the steamer arrived in warmer climate. The boy bandaged his aching feet with his coat. This is John's story as told by himself at the hospital today.

How to make a stew—a really good stew.

Here is just the weather for a grand, hot, steaming stew; below is just the recipe for one of the finest stews that ever a good cook made—a real, good Irish Stew.

The secret of a successful Irish stew is in the last few lines of the recipe below. Make the stew as the recipe tells you—don't forget the Edwards' Soup—and well, you'll be sorry to see the bottom of the plate through.

EDWARDS' DESICCATED SOUPS

5c. per packet.

Edwards' Soup imparts nourishment, strength, flavour, and colour—it's just as good for scores of other things as it is for Irish stews. Get a few packets and see.
Edwards' Desiccated Soups are made in three varieties: Beef, Chicken, and Vegetable. The other two varieties require no cooking.

This is how to make it—

IRISH STEW. Put in a saucepan twelve packets potatoes, sliced in thickness of a penny, four large onions sliced—layer of each with salt and pepper to taste. By successive layers, half fill your pan. Then take four chops of neck of mutton—the neck end—lay these on the potatoes and onions and fill up with additional layers of potatoes, onions etc. as before. In one-and-a-half pint of water boil one-and-a-half ounces of EDWARDS' DESICCATED VEGETABLE SOUP for thirty minutes; and then add the contents of the soup, and simmer altogether gently for two hours.
