On his way here Mr. Dawes completed a book, "Soldiers Superb", on his experience in the New Guinea campaign. Mrs. MacEwen leaves this morning for Sussex to be with her parents in law.

VER SNOWED RANGES AND prairie wheat fields to Edmonton, obtaining a graphic impression of the vastness of Canada as well as of its diversified resources.

They were impressed by the numbers of people who had met Australians in the R.A.F. who were training under the Empire air scheme.

They also spoke appreciatively of the hospitality shown them by newspapers across Canada, by provincial government representatives, and our service clubs and organizations.

What impressed us most, they said, "was the extraordinary pertinacity of the questions we have been asked about Australia's war effort, about our wartime living conditions, our position in the Pacific, the future of the native races, and our problems of all kinds."

Canada, they state, is receiving excellent publicity in Australia, events here getting extensive newspaper space despite strict paper rationing.

On his way here Mr. Dawes completed a book, "Soldiers Superb", on his experience in the New Guinea campaign. Plans To Develop Maritime Livestock Industry Discussed (Special to The Guardian) — The first step in a proposed long range program for developing the Maritime Livestock Industry was taken last night in Saint John at a special meeting of the Maritime Beef Cattle Committee under the chairmanship of A. C. Bailey, of Fredericton.

The special committees were set up—one on livestock, the other on soils and crops—to outline a program to be ready for use immediately after the war.

Speakers last night pointed out that it would be useless to expect the government to do anything about marshland rehabilitation unless a very generous donation of the land was in prospect.

Marshlands of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick are now mainly used for sheep raising and the production of Maritime beef has a fairly prosperous business in connection with the marshlands.

In the early nineteen-twenties the industry began to dwindle and the final blow was probably struck by the 1923 embargo on beef shipments to the Old Country.

Since that time Maritime beef has gradually gone down. Members of the committee point out that the marshlands of the two provinces are ideal for the development of a beef industry and are looking to the day when special Maritime beef can be put on the market.

The beef industry has had some what of a revival lately following inauguration of the Maritime fat cattle show and sale now held annually at Moncton.

Members of the committee feel however, that this is not enough. While serving a cost which would not be profitable if the beef was sold on regular commercial market.

Tentative Plans — Tentative plans of the committee call for a series of regional commercial sales in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island in addition to the Moncton show. The regional sales would gain the attention and interest of all beef producers in the three provinces.

Cattle would be sold at prevailing market prices and so would have to be produced economically. This is where the marshlands come in. Their fertile soil would provide ideal crops for the raising and finishing of beef cattle.

Hay has been the main marshland crop for many years. In some years it has been a profitable one. But on the average has probably just about paid its own way. Much of the crop formerly went to the West Indies and Sydney. The West Indies market no longer exists while the Sydney market grows more restricted annually. Consequently, committee members and many marshland farmers feel that the marshlands could be put to better use in the development of a Maritime beef industry. This will take years to develop and will require a high degree of co-operation from marshland owners.

Committee Secretary J. W. Graham of Moncton, said today that a special meeting of the two committees on livestock, soil and crops will be held in Moncton during the latter part of July. They will make a thorough survey of the situation as it exists today and will recommend a plan for future action.

The following is the personnel of the investigating committees: Livestock—G. F. Wood, chairman; W. W. Blair, Eric Boulden, W. R. Shaw, R. D. Gilbert, J. W. Graham, Soil and Crops—Kenneth Cox, chairman; E. M. Taylor, Dr. F. Clarke, Dr. George Smith and Smith Hillton.

Accordingly plans were laid for a new up to date building at an estimated cost of $40,000. The building will have two stories and a basement. It will have space for thirty five beds including private rooms and wards; and as well will have residential accommodation for the nursing staff.

The construction of this building has been anticipated for some time and accordingly much of the equipment required has already been purchased and is being used in the present building.

Some further equipment, including beds will have to be procured. A finance committee was appointed and a general appeal to the public for funds is to be made immediately.

Urges Farmers To Plan Carefully

In an address to farmers last night Hon. W. F. Alan Stewart, Minister of Agriculture said his department was "here to serve you, don't hesitate to use us."

The Minister, who accepted the portfolio when the government of Premier J. Walter Jones was re-organized this spring, advised farmers to plan their work carefully to save any labor to repair jobs to machinery on wet and stormy days, he urged, so that they would be best during good weather when field operations could be carried out.

It was a mistake to attempt to do too much. Plant only what could be handled with the labor available and apply the same rule to the amount of livestock kept. Crops would be best if they would yield more than could be obtained from a larger acreage only half tilled.

The Minister urged farmers to take care of their health, to consult a doctor occasionally and "don't overwork and don't worry." The winning of the war "is our great aim."

The farmer had no control over the weather during the planting, growing or harvesting seasons and no amount of control over prices. However, by careful attention to detail and by taking advantage of the weather when opportunity offered he was still able to keep up production.
