Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Nicholson, Brudenell, were honored Thursday evening when a large number of friends gathered at the home of Mr. Simon Nicholson and tendered them a post-nuptial miscellaneous shower. They were the recipients of many lovely gifts which were opened by Miss Catherine Robertson, while the accompanying verses were read by Mrs. William Dewar, and the gifts arranged by Miss Doris Nicholson. Mr. Wilfred MacDonald acted as chairman. On behalf of his bride Mr. Nicholson thanked his many friends for their kindness. The gathering then sang, "For They're A Jolly Good Couple". Everyone enjoyed a jolly sing-song with Mrs. T. W. Cameron and Mrs. Kenneth Dewar as accompanists. A delicious lunch was served by the ladies.

The Morning Is Near Us By Susan Glaspell

The Prestons returned to England and she went on into Mexico, and she took Diego. She would make a family of her own. Kodla and Diego being themselves in great need of a family, it was natural they got together. She wouldn't have her own children, for he wasn't going to defraud another man as Henri felt she had defrauded him. (How did she look - and why did she look that way if she wasn't that way?) Kodla and Diego were already in the world - and no one to care for them, it seemed quite natural and right they become her children. All three of them had been alone. Now they were together, and no one of them was alone.

Many things went through her mind as she neared home, Kodla and Diego eating oranges and looking out the window. She did have one resentment: Warren had not even told her their father was dead, but just let her hear it that way, from Elfreda Meade, of all people. But now Warren had written her about the house, and cabled, so perhaps he too wanted her to come home. Certainly Father had wanted it, didn't take the house. Warren wasn't to have it. If she didn't live there, the place would go to the cemetery, as if only she could now save their past from being dead and buried. It was a command and upon her, saying: "Lydia, come home." Strange, so very strange, after everything else, but it was as if Father, as best he
