Nova Scotia boasts the largest annual Short Course School for farmers in Canada. Starting in 1905 with less than seventy attendants, the movement has grown in popularity and influence until this year the attendance was 342, made up as follows:—18 from Nova Scotia, 93 from Prince Edward Island, 61 from New Brunswick, and one from Newfoundland. Those who attend are farmers and farmers' boys who cannot afford a regular college course. The ages range from 15 to 70, which includes a considerable sprinkling of grey hairs. The following attendance table shows the steady growth of the movement:—1905, 68; 1906, 83; 1907, 102; 1908, 140; 1909, 221; 1910, 230; 1911, 259; 1912, 342. Principal Cummings of the Truro Agricultural College, where the Short Course, lasting two weeks, is held, stated recently that he is dubious as to how long this rate of development can keep up. He will be prepared for a larger number than ever, however, next week.
