HOW TO PASTEURIZE DAIRY PRODUCTS

Pasteurization as applied to dairying is the process of heating milk, cream, or dairy by-products to a temperature at which all the disease germs that may be contained therein will be destroyed, and in the case of milk and cream, of cooling to a temperature which will prevent the surviving organisms will be restrained. Efficient pasteurization ensures a safe supply of milk and other dairy products, delays the souring of milk, and improves the flavour and keeping quality of butter.

On the other hand, states the Farmers' Bulletin No. 33 on "Pasteurization of Milk, Cream, and Dairy By-products," inefficient methods of pasteurization give the public a false sense of security and form one of the chief criticisms by those opposed to the practice. The purpose of the bulletin is primarily to effect a greater efficiency in the pasteurization of dairy by-products and shows how it is done. The bulletin is fully illustrated and may be obtained free on application to the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.
