The will of the late George Poole, the wealthy britanna manufacturer, formerly of this Province, who was killed by his son, Howard Poole, in defence of his mother January last, at Taunton, Mass, was disallowed by Judge Fuller in the Taunton probate court on account of the mental unsoundness of the testator.

In another part of this issue Guardian readers will find the first of a new series of advertisements of the well known and popular Enterprise Monarch Steel Range which during the past three years has had so large a sale throughout this Province and which the manufacturers state, is growing in popularity and sales everywhere. The Guardian congratulates the Enterprise Foundry Co. upon the production of a range which has so won its way into popular favor and which, to say the least has no superior in Canada. In fact, the merits of the Monarch have been so generally recognized by the trade that shipments have been made to every province in Canada. This is the very best evidence of what Maritime manufacturers are capable of doing, not only in holding their own market, but in extending their business into the provinces of the West.

V. 20. Mr. Stewart addressed the Minister and Mr. Gray the congregation on their respective duties. Having signified his willingness to sign the formula, Mr. MacNeil's name was placed on the roll of Presbytery, and he took his seat as a member of the court. The new minister was introduced to the people as they retired from the church by Rev. Mr. Gray, and Angus McPhee. The meeting closed with prayer and the court adjourned to meet again at the call of the moderator; and clerk: H. Michael, clerk, pro tem.

A small boy who bought a small pig at the market yesterday put the little "bonnet" into a sack, threw it over his shoulder and started for home. The little pig followed the journey with a choice repertoire. The voluntary rendering he left the square attracted quite a lot of attention. The general opinion was that bag pipes stood no chance with a bagged pig.

The sad news of the death of Miss Mary Davies has just come to hand. The many friends of Miss Davies in Charlottetown will be pained to learn that she who was loved so well is gone from earth. Miss Davies was the daughter of the late Nathan Davies and sister of Benj. S. Davies formerly connected with the old London House of this City. Of late her health was not all that could be desired. While she was much attached to her island home she sought the warmer climate of California where her brother resided with a view to regaining her strength, but disease claimed her body and her spirit passed away to the great beyond in the death of Miss Davies is lost one of the noblest women; one whose name was a household word and in very many homes in Charlottetown; one who never forgot the poor nor failed, with a cheery word or bouquet of flowers to brighten the room of some sick one. For several years she faithfully performed the work of teacher of a large class of children in the Baptist Sunday School and while she endeavored to turn their steps into the path that leads upward she also remembered that little feet and bodies needed shoes and clothing. Her body will be cremated and the remains forwarded to Charlottetown to be placed by the grave of her father.

Some Suggestions In Underwear

The secret of a man's comfort at any season of the year lies in the selection of his Underwear. This is a season when you should throw off the heavy winter weight and wear something lighter, not necessarily cotton, but light weight wools, silk and linen or linen and wool combined. Then you are insured against overheating, chills and colds. This season we are showing a very extensive range of spring weights.
