Spain And Great Britain

At a time of anxious interrogation on the part of many in the Allied Nations is "what part will Spain play in the war?"

Spain and England are traditional friends, of a common civilization, and their spiritual and moral interests are in many directions...

The products of Spain in peace time are of great value to Britain, while in war they are all but indispensable.

These purely economic facts ought to teach the politicians that Spain's friendship is something to be treasured.

Certainly Mr. Loveday submits cogent reasons in support of the renewal and continuance of the traditional friendly relations between the two countries.

Price Controls And Agriculture

An important announcement was made the other day in the House of Commons by Finance Minister Isley in clarifying the relationship between the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and the Department of Agriculture.

The new definition of functions presents no substantially new alignment of authority, but clarifies the basic considerations which have always applied.

The Department of Agriculture, on the other hand, is responsible for the primary production of agricultural foodstuffs, and it has certain functions to perform in the distribution of agricultural products.

Notes By The Way

While we have heard little from Halifax, we are sure that he feels the score with Mussolini now is about even.

Britain has mobile baths, a reminder that there's nothing quite so immobile as the ordinary bathtub when you make contact after stopping on the soap.

Miller has cost every person in the world a substantial sum in actual money, to say nothing of the woe and tragedy he has caused.

The difficulties of getting domestic supplies for local use in this concern in many parts of the country.

It is fortunate that Canadian wives unlike German ones, do not employ their husband's official titles.

There are going to be fewer buttonholes in clothing, fewer saxophones and clarinets, golf balls, toys, novelty jewelry and styles in ladies' shoes.

Those Kent and Lambton people who want Pere Marquette passenger train service restored should not forget that lack of patronage on this part was the cause of the final service being discontinued in the first place.

EDITORIAL NOTES

According to the Hon. Mr. Howe it "is not in the public interest" to disclose the names of firms guilty of irregularities in war industries since the beginning of the war.

News of the loss of H.M.C.S. "Louisburg", released for publication yesterday afternoon, came as another reminder of the deadly nature of the struggle now in progress.

"A" for apple and "A" for Alphonse is no longer the order of the army which has a new alphabet. It no longer talks of "Ack-Emma."

No two countries in the world are in a more favorable position regarding the possibilities of extensive postwar trade than Canada and China.

Mr. Graydon gave Prime Minister King the other day in the House a neat Roland for his Oliver. The Prime Minister observed that the Opposition leader had been asking a lot of questions lately.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Canadian statesman, died this date, 1919; entered Canadian Parliament in 1874; a fine bilingual orator, early made an impression on House and three years later appointed Minister of Inland Revenue in the Mackenzie Government.

ODORS OF MONTAGUE

Everybody as far west as Charlottetown and as far north as Rustico is interested in that little squabble in the pretty little town of Montague between two citizens on the subject of a proposed canning factory.

It would appear as if now the question, "First Citizen" does not want the factory situated in the town. Second Citizen wants it. The present writer sincerely hopes that Montague will get its canning factory and that every little town in our province will get one too before long.

But to be perfectly just to First Citizen, why couldn't the factory be situated in the town? Second Citizen wants it. The present writer sincerely hopes that Montague will get its canning factory and that every little town in our province will get one too before long.
